Sheriff Speculation

The Speculation Corps. is working overtime on who it thinks will succeed Clifford Marshall as Norfolk County sheriff.

Shake the nearest speculation tree and down will come a number of names—Republican and Democrat.

Two of the names mentioned most frequently for the $80,000 post are Quincy Democrats Josephine Shea, who is now acting sheriff and Rep. Michael Bellotti. If appointed, she would be the first woman sheriff in the state's history.

SHEA

BELLOTTI

The Republican name that keeps popping up is GOP State Committeeman Darren McAuliffe of Braintree, formerly of Quincy. A dozen other names are being mentioned including former Mayor Frank McCauley and Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth.

If Marshall, who died at age 58 Aug. 28 after a 20-month battle against brain cancer, could have picked his successor, it no doubt would have been Shea who was his right arm in the department and more so during his illness.

But this is a political appointment with Gov. William Weld holding the cards. He, of course, is a Republican.

But Weld has appointed Democrats to vacancies, which would seem to place both Shea and Bellotti in contention.

The fact Weld says he is in no rush to make the appointment and feels the 300-member-plus department is in good hands with Shea as acting sheriff would seem to be encouraging words for her.

Wife of City Clerk Joseph Shea, she has 21 years' experience as budget director, deputy sheriff, special sheriff and now acting sheriff.

But the odds could be shifting in favor of a Republican appointment.

Weld just named a Democrat, Supreme Judicial Court Clerk Richard Rouse of Dorchester to the Suffolk County sheriff vacancy. Question: Will he appoint two Democrats in a row?

Bellotti is still considered a strong possibility. So strong that a rumor flying around Dedham had him being sworn in last Friday. But Bellotti was in San Diego at the time.

Bellotti had plans to run for state auditor in two years but that could change.

Would he take the sheriff's appointment if Weld called?

"If he offered it," Bellotti frankly acknowledges, "I would consider it very seriously. And I would consider the job a great challenge."

At this point he says he has had no contact and no offer.

Weld, who is in a close horse race with Democrat incumbent John Kerry for the U.S. Senate seat, would profit politically among Democrats if he appointed either Bellotti or Shea.

The Bellotti name still has that old voter-magic. As for Shea, her appointment would appeal to both Democrats and women.

But county Republicans see this as an opportunity for them. The appointment is for two years and they feel a Republican appointee would give them time to build a county-wide organization for the 1998 election and the chance to hold onto the sheriff's badge.

Weld has some political weighing to do.

CITY COUNCIL President Peter Kolson will celebrate the half-century mark at a 50th birthday party Thursday, Sept. 26, 7 to 10 p.m. at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, Quarry St.

KOLSON

Kolson is the "dean" of this year's council, one of the youngest in the city's history. Ages of the other eight when elected last November: Michael D'Amico, 20; Patrick McDermott, 26; Bruce Ayers, 33; Tim Cahill, 37; Steve Durkin, 39; Michael Cheney, 42; Paul Harold, 47; and Dan Raymondi, 48.

Average age: 37.8.

Tickets for the Kolson birthday fundraiser are $35 per person and $50 per couple. For more information, call 773-9386.

GOOD FRIEND and former School Committeeman Charles Sweeny will celebrate his 80th birthday Friday—a young 80th. (Betty takes good care of him.)

SWEENY

Charlie, who is now a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars, keeps trim by staying active. Gets a lot of walking in, does some canoeing and skiing and even still climbs Mount Washington.

Very versatile, too. A couple of years ago he discovered how to grow roses that look exactly like artificial ones. Now, we hear, he's working on the thorns.

Charlie does have one flaw in his otherwise impeccable character: he's a damn Yankees fan. Yankees fans can get pretty annoying when they win and the Red Sox lose.

But anyway, Charlie, your fellow Plaza walkers—Dave, Sue, Jim, Al, Helen, etc.—wish you a very happy birthday. And, many more.

ARTHUR

SHIRLEY

After pretty No. 16 arrived, Arthur was overheard saying to Shirley: "Gee, Shirl, just think of what we started."

FISH STORY: A fish rare to Quincy waters was landed off West Gut the other day. Barry Presta of Squantum hauled in a 4 1/2 pound, 20-inch Fluke aboard the charter boat "Selma-K" owned by Asst. Quincy Harbormaster Ike Kravetz.

Kravetz says Fluke, which are larger than a flounder with teeth, usually hang out in Buzzards Bay. He says he has never heard of anyone catching one off Quincy.

So, Ike, was it sort of a fluke to catch a Fluke in Quincy?

'Booked For Lunch' At Library Sept. 20

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center will resume its informal "Booked For Lunch" book review program Friday, Sept. 20 from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

"Booked For Lunch" will meet the third Friday of each month through June. For more information, call 376-1301.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1912 PHOTO POSTCARD is a view of Wollaston Beach and the Boulevard taken from the end of Sachem Street. The house on the right was used as the first Howard Johnson's ice cream stand on the beach. It was later replaced with a larger building and today is the site of The Clam Box. In the distance you can barely make out Rufe's Hummock which was a hill at the end of Rice Road. Notice the seaweed along the beach on the left.

Quincy Has Lost Two Good Men

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Two years ago I attended a fundraiser for John J. Kerrigan during his unsuccessful bid for Governor's Council. The time was held at Joe Tecce's in the North End. Also at the function that night was Suffolk County Register of Deeds Paul Tierney, former Suffolk County Sheriff Tom Eisenstadt and Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall.

Now, in the span of a few weeks in August, two of them are no longer with us.

Kerrigan was a firebrand. I remember him well as both a Boston city councillor and especially as chairman of the Boston School Committee during the time Judge Garrity's busing edict took effect. Kerrigan was an outspoken opponent of forced busing and was never afraid to state his opinions.

Marshall was in comparison much quieter. He served as a Quincy city councillor and state representative before becoming sheriff in 1975. He modernized the sheriff's office in many different areas and the pride and joy of his career was the brand new county jail on Route 128 in Dedham.

Both men were voices for the people who elected them. Both knew where they came from and never forgot--Kerrigan from Dorchester and Marshall from Quincy Point. Two people in the public eye who I had great respect for. I called both men friends.

It wasn't easy going to the funeral parlor twice in one month and it wasn't easy seeing these two busy men at rest. I will remember their lives as examples of what public servants ought to be. The world is a little emptier in their passing.

The City of Quincy has lost two good men. I remember who they were when they were alive and not the few moments I saw them inside the funeral parlor. While they have passed from this world to the next, their spirits will never die and we can only hope that the next generation of public servants is as good as they both were.

Support Of Question 1 Would Help End 'Cruelty' To Bears

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Sept. 9 is the opening day for the black bear hound hunting season in Massachusetts. The MSPCA (Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) hopes that 1996 will be the last time this inhumane and unsportsmanlike practice is allowed in the state.

Question 1, qualified for the November ballot by volunteer petitioners, would ban the use of hounds in hunting black bears, as well as ban the cruel and indiscriminate practice of leghold trapping.

Last season, hunters killed 133 bears during the one-week season--many by using hounds. Typically, a hound hunter releases a pack of dogs and the dogs pursue the bear, sometimes for miles in an exhausting chase. In some instances, the frightened bear will turn and fight the dogs, resulting in the bloodying and mauling of bears and dogs alike.

Eventually, the bear will seek refuge from the dogs by climbing a tree. The hunter, following the dogs, will then walk to the base of the tree and shoot the trapped animal.

There is absolutely nothing fair about shooting a bear trapped in a tree. It is also entirely unnecessary.

Many states ban hound hunting of black bears, and they still allow black bear hunting. New York and Pennsylvania, for instance, ban bear hounding and maintain successful hunting seasons. Oregon and Colorado voters recently approved initiatives similar to Question 1, banning hounding and bear baiting.

The MSPCA urges a "yes" vote on Question 1 to stop this cruelty and mayhem in the woods.

College, Library To Present Series On American Writers

Quincy College and the Thomas Crane Public Library are sponsoring a four-week series on great American writers.

The series, on successive Saturdays beginning Sept. 21, will be coordinated by Scott Greenberg, dean of continuing education at the college. Each program runs from 10 a.m. to noon and admission is free.

Jeffrey Cramer begins the series with "A Saturday Morning with Robert Frost." Cramer is the author of a recently published book, "Robert Frost Among His Poems," and has taught at Quincy College. Stephen Dooner, a teacher of American and English Literature at Quincy College, follows on Sept. 28 with "Emily Dickinson and the Language of the Soul."

On Oct. 5, Carolyn Kelley will present "Papa: The Hemingway Mystique." Kelley, who also teaches at Quincy College, is a Boston writer specializing in New England traditions such as Fenway Park and issues such as school busing. The series concludes Oct. 12 with Frank Perkins, professor emeritus at Quincy College, presenting Louisa May Alcott.

The series will be held on the lower level of the Thomas Crane Library Public Library in Quincy Center. Refreshments will be served.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL band members John Marinilli (left) and Joseph Doyle recently were selected for the MDC All-Star Marching Band composed of 33 of the best high school musicians in the Metropolitan Boston area. The MDC Band is performing at various sites throughout the summer. Marinilli plays the drums and Doyle tenor saxophone for North Quincy High.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Denied a Keno license to Shop-N-Save Liquors, 20 Independence Ave. Ward 4 Councillor Mike D'Amico said his concern was that customers would tend to stay for a "period of time" while shopping.

•Granted a Keno license to Pat Flanagan's Pub, 79 Parkingway. The board justified granting a license to Flanagan's while denying Shop-N-Save stating that in a restaurant, persons are there "for a while.".

•Continued a hearing regarding the Wollaston Dairy Bar, 895 Quincy Ave. for a common victualer license until the building department is in receipt of some items needed for the license.

•Granted a request from R.J. Vinluan, Inc., doing business as the Quincy Adams Newsstand, 400 Burgin Pkwy. for a common victualer license.

•Board reiterated starting hours at the Parkway Service Station, 507 Furnace Bk. Pkwy.. following complaints that the station is open at 6:30 a.m.in the morning instead of 7 a.m.. Owner Leo Gaquin, who could not attend the meeting will be sent a letter stating that the opening hours will be 7 a.m. and not before.

•Placed on file a hearing regarding Tino's Gulf Service Station, 1284 Furnace Bk. Pkwy. regarding complaints received from neighbors that trucks are left parked on the street with motors idling and radios blaring.

•Granted a request for the transfer of the common victualer-all alcoholic license presently owned by Player Brothers Inc., doing business as Alumni Cafe, 708 Hancock St. to Thomas Bellotti.

•Granted permission to Joseph Hennessey of Old Colony Liquors, 519 Southern Artery to transfer the all-alcoholic package store license to 637 Southern Artery. Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi spoke in support of the move on the condition that the site be properly landscaped.

•Granted permission to The Custom House, 125 Sea St. to pledge their liquor license to the Hibernia Savings Bank.

•Continued until Sept. 24 a hearing regarding a request from Staff Auto Inc., 519 Quincy Ave. for a Motor 11 License because of similar businesses in the area.

The Friends For a Better High School organization will hold its first meeting of the 1996-97 season Monday, Sept. 16 at 7:15 p.m. in the school's Pride Room.

The Friends are a parent group dedicated to making Quincy High a better place for students and staff. Future meetings will be held the first Monday of each month at 7:15 p.m. in the Pride Room. Meetings are open to the public.

Officers for 1996-97 are: Joe Sheffer, chairperson; Richard Speranzo, co-chairperson; Beverly Pamplin, secretary and Chris Barrett, treasurer.

"My family and I have been preparing for the opening of Hancock Park for 60 years."
-Richard Welch

When Hancock Park in Quincy opens in October, it will be the newest Healthcare and Assisted Living Center on the South Shore. But this isn't a story about bricks and mortar. It's the story of one women's vision of what community healthcare could be. And should be.

My grandmother, Florence St. John, RN

It all began in 1935, right here in Quincy in my grandmother Florence St. John's parlor. As a Home Health Nurse, she saw first hand the unique difficulties many of her elderly patients faced. Often what they needed most was emotional support and care in a warm, unthreatening environment. In those days, there were few facilities prepared to provide that. But my grandmother was.

So she began caring for seniors in her home. From these modest beginnings, the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group has become the leading provider of healthcare services on the South Shore.

Which brings us to the point of this story.

The opening of Hancock Park will be both a homecoming for us and a living memorial to the ideals that were so important to my grandmother. We're obviously very proud of her. And we're absolutely committed to making sure everything about Hancock Park reflects that pride.

To learn more about Hancock Park or about Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, please call us at (617) 878-6700. We'll send a you a free copy of our Welch Family Guide to Senior Care.

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

A SHARED CONCERN

When an injury victim seeks the services of an attorney to file suit in hopes of recovering damages, the attorney shares that hope by presenting his or her client with a contingent fee payment arrangement. This means that, instead of asking a client to base his or her payment on an hourly charge, the attorney entitles him-herself to a percentage (usually one-third) of the settlement or trial award. In the event that the plaintiff does not receive any compensation for damages, neither does the attorney. Simply put, the attorney sinks or swims with the client. The contingent fee payment arrangement enables injured people to make use of the legal system, regardless of their financial standing, and is a means of empowering injury victims with their rights.

Hint: A court always possesses the power to review attorney's fees in personal injury cases.

Do you have grounds for a lawsuit? My dedicated support staff and I can work hard to represent you and settle your case as fairly and quickly as possible. If there is no recovery, there's no fee. This means, we'll handle your case on a percentage fee basis. We only receive payment if recovery is made on your behalf. To schedule a free consultation, call 773-2880. We're located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

Local Democratic Delegates:

'We're For Clinton, Gore -- And Chicago'

By ALICIA COLETTI

Since we attended the Democratic National Convention in Chicago at the end of August, Anne Kane and I have become a two-person Chamber of Commerce for the city.

Both of us had been to Chicago before, but the city, its buildings, its river, its lake and its people overwhelmed us with their beauty and their hospitality. The convention itself held forums for seniors, veterans, women, and NEA members and seminars on education, health insurance, economic security, violence and drugs, and welfare. In addition to the four evening convention sessions, there were receptions for delegates at the Navy Pier, Michael Jordan's restaurant, the Field Museum and the Children's Museum.

The best non-convention activity was the work we did at the Habitat for Humanity on Chicago's Near West Side, very near the United Center. Thirty Massachusetts delegates received instructions, hard hats and program information from some very patient people who help build homes for families in need. The families chosen for these homes put in their own sweat equity in place of a down payment and receive mortgages at zero percent interest.

This attempt to make low-income people into homeowners is a partnership of corporations (like Home Depot and Ameritech), community organizations, government and volunteers. The best known Habitat for Humanity volunteer is former President Jimmy Carter. The South Shore Habitat for Humanity is presently working on building a new single family home in Hanson.

At the Salute to Veterans, James Carville, manager of Clinton's 1992 campaign, revved up the crowd of delegates with lines like, "Democrats are not better Americans than Republicans, they just have a better record, better ideas, and better programs."

At the subsequent National Education Association forum, Tipper Gore, wife of Vice President Al Gore, spoke of President Clinton's commitment to education and noted that her first job was as a Head Start teacher.

Hillary Clinton's speech at the Women's Forum on the 76th anniversary of women's suffrage focused on the importance of the turnout of women at the polls in November. She noted that women are as interested as men in the raise in the minimum wage, medical leave, the Brady Bill and the cutting of the deficit in half. The breakfast caucus of the Massachusetts delegates featured former Gov. Michael Dukakis, who noted that the 50s that Bob Dole wants to return to had twice the poverty rate, twice the dropout rate and five times the infant mortality rate of 1995.

The Kerry/Weld contest was certainly uppermost in the minds of the Massachusetts delegates, especially when Gov. Weld's daughter, Franny, sported her John Kerry button and waved her Clinton sign.

At a luncheon sponsored by Democrats 2000, James Carville and Robert Reich, Secretary of Labor emphasized that the Democratic Party was responsible for:

- Sending veterans to college after World War II.
- Social Security and Medicare.
- Most laws protecting the environment.
- Putting people to work during the Depression.
- Passing the Brady Bill on handguns.
- Cutting the federal deficit in half in the last four years.
- Raising the minimum wage.
- Passing the Family and Medical Leave Act. (On a boat tour of the Chicago River, boat company owner Marie Gennaco told me about her friend who was able to take time off to care for her mother, who had Lou Gehrig's disease, because of the Family Medical Leave Act.)

At our last breakfast caucus, Massachusetts delegates were urged by Congress Dick Gephardt of Missouri to "infect" their fellow citizens to vote Democratic in November. Speaker Thomas Finneran added that we should be encouraged to "immunize" our fellow citizens with the real information which would help them to make a healthy choice at the polls.

On the final night, President Clinton struck his theme of a bridge to the future--to the 21st century. As a person in education, I was pleased to hear Clinton say that all children should read by themselves by Grade 3 and that the federal government needed to provide more funding for after school programs. The releasing of balloons and the accompanying music and cheering after the president's speech was enough to send us all back to Massachusetts inspired to work hard to insure that all Democratic candidates win in November.

My fellow delegates from the 10th Congressional district who were elected to attend the convention were: Sen. Michael Morrissey and Janet Coughlin, Quincy; John Flanagan Jr., Plymouth; Frederick Koed, Cohasset; and Margaret MacKenzie, South Weymouth.

Midwives Deliver 4,000th Baby At Quincy Hospital

TAMMY AND FRANK Heran of Braintree with their son, Sean, and certified nurse midwife Sharyn Perpall from the Center for Women's Health at Quincy Hospital. Sean was the 4,000th baby delivered by midwives at the center.

Certified nurse midwives (CNM) at the Center for Women's Health at Quincy Hospital recently delivered their 4,000th baby.

Early in the morning on July 9, a baby boy, Sean, was born to Tammy and Frank Heran of Braintree. Sharyn Perpall, CNM, Quincy Hospital's Center, delivered the baby.

While a nursing student at Quincy College, Tammy learned about Quincy Hospital and was impressed by the wide array of services it offers. So when Tammy--five months pregnant--and Frank moved from South Boston to Braintree in March, they decided to go to the hospital's Center for Women's Health to have the baby. After meeting and talking with Perpall, they decided to receive their obstetrical care from a certified nurse midwife.

"We felt that the nurse midwife approach was geared toward the comfort and safety of the women and baby," said Tammy. "They add an extra gentleness and warmth, and seem very in tune with your needs."

Certified nurse midwives are registered nurses who have completed advanced national certification by the American College of Nurse Midwives. They provide obstetrical care for low risk women. They also provide very personalized care, spending more time with patients during prenatal visits and labor and delivery, as well as addressing psycho social issues.

The Center for Women's Health opened up seven years ago to provide complete Ob/Gyn services to women of all ages. There are currently five certified nurse midwives and two Board-certified obstetricians/gynecologists on staff at the center. It specializes in prenatal and postpartum care, high risk obstetrics, gynecology, infertility and menopause. Most insurances are accepted and free pregnancy testing is provided.

For more information about the center, 376-5462.

Johnston Proposes Budget, Tax Cuts

A federal budget proposal by Phil Johnston, Democratic candidate for the 10th Congressional District, would include $100 billion in cuts, while providing tax deductions for working families and the elderly.

"The federal government," Johnston said, "is now dealing with the budget deficit run up in the years from 1981 until 1992, while hundreds of billions of dollars were being poured into the military budget and billions of dollars were being raided from the Social Security Trust Fund."

At a recent press conference in Hyannis, Johnston called for a "basic reordering" of the federal budget. He proposed cutting $40-50 billion from the defense budget which was padded this year by $14 billion.

"This at a time when the Republican Congress, led by Newt Gingrich, wanted to cut $270 billion from Medicare and Medicaid. Based on all the analyses I've seen, we could still have a very strong national defense, a very strong national security with this $40-$50 billion cut," he said.

Johnston's second initiative would be to cut $50-$60 billion from corporate welfare expenditures.

"So much of the welfare focus has been on poor women and poor children who are on AFDC (Aid to Families and Dependent Children), but the reality is that we're spending two or three times the amount of money on subsidies to large, frequently-profitable corporations instead of providing subsidies to poor people," he said. AFDC costs about $25 billion, while we're spending $75-$80 billion a year in corporate welfare.

"One of the craziest things we do in this country is to spend our tax dollars to market Chicken McNuggets around the world. I don't know about you, but I don't want my tax dollars going to that, particularly when people are talking about cutting Medicare and Medicaid."

MICHAEL J. JOYCE
NORFOLK COUNTY TREASURER

I'm here to ask for your support in my campaign for Norfolk County Treasurer.

You might ask, why should I vote for Michael J. Joyce.

That's a fair question. After all, you are the ones who will have to decide who's the most qualified candidate for the position.

So, why should you vote Michael J. Joyce, Norfolk County Treasurer?

First of all, I ask you to consider my professional experience.

I am currently the treasurer for the town of Braintree, a position to which I was first elected in 1988. It is my job to collect, disburse and invest millions of the town's dollars each year. This fiscal year I am responsible for the management of a $62 million town budget.

As the treasurer of town funds, I have to decide to invest approximately $20 million a day in order to get the best return on every dollar.

I'm proud to say that during each year of my eight years in office I have earned $1M in interest for the town of Braintree.

In my role as town treasurer, I have full responsibility for making financial decisions for all municipal funds, which include not only the town's budget but also Braintree Light ($32 M), and Water & Sewer ($10M). I am also custodian of the $50M Braintree Municipal Retirement Funds.

Furthermore, in all my financial management duties I am required to follow strict legal guidelines. So I am not only accountable to the town financially but legally as well.

Again, I'm back to my initial question: Why should you vote Michael J. Joyce, Norfolk County Treasurer?

I've described my financial experience, now I ask you to consider a few of my professional affiliations. I am a Certified Massachusetts Municipal Treasurer, a former treasurer and director of the Braintree Credit Union, member Norfolk County Financial officers, member Massachusetts Government Financial officers and member Massachusetts Treasurers and Collectors Association. If I've done anything worthwhile today, I hope I've convinced you that I have the qualifications and experience for the Norfolk County Treasurer position. When you leave here, I hope you'll take with you some of the reasons why you should vote Michael J. Joyce, Norfolk County Treasurer.

As the county position requires, I have money management experience and a proven track record of protecting public funds.

I believe I'm the most qualified candidate for Norfolk County Treasurer. If you agree, please cast your vote for Michael J. Joyce, Norfolk County Treasurer, on Primary Day, September 17th.

Thank you.

Raymondi To Hold Meetings Sept. 17, 18

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi will hold two community meetings Sept. 17 and 18.

The first meeting, regarding a proposal to reopen the 4-River Eatery at 520 Washington St. with an all-alcoholic license, will be held Tuesday, Sept. 17 at 7 p.m. at the Sons of Lebanon Club on Lebanon St. The principals of the proposal, as well as Atty. Kevin Burke, will also be in attendance to answer any questions or concerns.

The second meeting, regarding the future use of the property at 34-36-38 Sixth Ave. near Chubbuck St., will be held Wednesday, Sept. 18 at 7 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd. The City Council recently approved Raymondi's request to have the property sold to the city, clearing the way for it to be demolished.

Literacy Volunteers Group At Library Seeks Tutors

Literacy Volunteers of America-Quincy is seeking people interested in offering free tutoring services at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Volunteers provide one-on-one instruction to adults in basic reading and writing. Training is provided.

An orientation session will be held Thursday, Sept. 19 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the North Quincy Library, 381 Hancock St. For more information or to register, call 376-1314.

Kids Voting Celebration Aboard USS Salem Sept. 19

A special celebration in support of Kids Voting, the grassroots community-based national educational program, will be held Thursday, Sept. 19 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. on the USS Salem at the Fore River shipyard.

The event, sponsored by Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, is being held in honor of those whose support has helped make the program possible. Kids Voting, which is now run in 40 states, originated in Arizona in 1988 and made its Massachusetts debut last year in Quincy.

Kids Voting allows students in Grades K-12 in public, private and parochial schools to become a part of the democratic process by voting alongside their parents during local, state and national elections.

Among those on hand for the celebration will be the Kids Voting Chorus and masters of ceremony Jim Lonborg, former Boston Red Sox pitcher and Cy Young Award winner; his wife Rosemary, author of "Helpin' Bugs," 1996 Ben Franklin Literary Children's Award Winner and 1996 Children's Book of the Year; and Liz Brunner, WCVB-TV Channel 5 news personality.

Last year, about 5,000 Quincy students participated in Kids Voting. For more information, call 774-0912.

Red Cross Seeks Yarn Donation

The South Area of the American Red Cross in Quincy is looking for donations of four-ply acrylic yarn to be used by a volunteer group making afghans for the Veterans Hospital residents.

Half skeins or any leftover yarn would be most helpful. All colors can be used.

The group has been making afghans for many years for the veterans to use and call their own. It is connected to a nationwide American Red Cross effort called "Warm Up America."

Drop off yarn donations at 1495 Hancock St., third floor, in Quincy between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. For directions and for more information, call the Quincy office at 770-2600.

Voters To Use Optical Scan Machines For First Time

The city's new optical scan voting equipment will be used for the first time in next Tuesday's state primary elections.

The system, which cost $169,000, replaces the punch-card method used here since 1986. Before that, paper ballots were hand-counted and often took all night to tally the final results.

Under the new system, known as the Optic 111-P Eagle, the voter simply links the name of the candidate to the office by pen. It will speed up both the voting and the counting by computer.

Thirty-three machines--one for each of the 30 voting precincts and three backups--were purchased this summer from the low bidder, Business Record Corp., a national firm based in Texas.

Among the system's features:

•An auxiliary battery power in the event of an electrical outage.

•An alarm that warns voters if they accidentally vote for too many candidates for one office. Those "over voted" ballots are quickly removed and the voter gets a chance to vote again instead of having the ballot invalidated as under the present punch-card system.

•A technician spends election day here to solve any technical problems should they arise.

Under the old system, there was no technician on site and if there was a computer problem, the counting would stop until a computer replacement could be brought in.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, frustrated by equipment problems that delayed vote counting in the Presidential Primaries last March, decided it was time to make a change.

There were only 6,547 votes be counted in the Presidential Primaries but it took until shortly before midnight to get the job done.

Twice Shea had to send to Newton to get replacements for the computer counter. It kept precinct wardens and clerks and police details cooling their heels until the results were finally tallied in the police details.

Shea asked Mayor James Sheets for the new equipment. Sheets submitted the appropriation order to the City Council which approved it.

Quincy now joins more than 80 other Massachusetts communities--including Braintree and Hingham--using the same optical scan voting system.

Registered Voters Up By 2,000

Quincy has 48,489 registered voters, according to the latest official figures at the Secretary of State and City Clerk's offices.

This is an increase of 2,003 voters since the Presidential Primaries last March.

The breakdown:

- Democrats: 27,224.
- Republicans: 7,328.
- Unenrolled: 13,800.
- Libertarian: 89.
- Intermediate Thirty Party: 36
- Conservative Party: 10.
- Socialist: 2.

QUINCY ELECTION WARDENS Trudy Buckley, left, and Jean Kennedy demonstrate the city's new optical scanning voting system at an orientation workshop conducted for election workers at City Hall. Buckley has served as a warden in Ward 1 Precinct 3 for 30 years. Kennedy has been a warden at Ward 1 Precinct 2 for 20 years. Voters will use the new system for the state primary, Tuesday, Sept. 17.

22% Turnout Seen For Primaries

Governor's Councillor Christopher A. Iannella, Jr. of Boston, is being challenged by Joseph P. McEttrick, former Milton selectman for the Democratic nomination. No Republicans are running.

Both U.S. Senator John F. Kerry and Republican challenger, Gov. William F. Weld, are unopposed for their respective party nomination.

They will face one another and Susan Gallagher, Conservative Party candidate, in November. Gallagher, a Milton resident and Wollaston real estate agent, is a former chairman of the Quincy Republican City Committee who became disenchanted with the Republican party.

The names of State Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin are on the ballot but they are unopposed.

So, too, are Register of Probate Thomas Hughes of Quincy and County Commissioners John Gillis of Quincy and William O'Donnell of Norwood. All three are Democrats.

Quincy's 30 voting precincts will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday.

"If everything goes all right we should have it wrapped up and out of here by about 9:15," Shea said.

"But this is the first time we will be using the new equipment and we could run into a bug or two.

"This is state of the art equipment and I am sure Quincy voters are going to be happy with this new system which will cut election costs and pay for itself and give us the results early."

A technician from the manufacturer, Business Record Crop., based in Texas, will be in Quincy throughout election day to solve any technical problems should they occur.

"We hope he has a nice quiet day--like the Maytag repairman," says Shea.

Sheets Endorses Delahunt For Congress

Mayor James Sheets has joined other city officials in endorsing Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt in the Democratic Primary for Congress in the Tenth Congressional District.

Sheets cited Delahunt's pioneering work on domestic violence and child abuse as key reasons why voters should support him.

"I've known and worked with Bill Delahunt for 20 years, and he has been an effective and innovative leader in government reform," said Sheets. "Bill's understanding of, and advocacy for, issues of importance to working people stands out in comparison to the other candidates. And his work with victims of domestic violence and child abuse has been of crucial importance in improving the quality of family life.

"We need a Congressman who will stand up and fight for us on the student loan programs which have enabled so many Quincy teenagers to go to college rather than to the streets," the mayor added. "We need to provide hope for our senior citizens that they can retire in dignity and in health rather than in fear. Bill Delahunt will be that Congressman."

In accepting Sheets' endorsement, Delahunt praised the mayor for his proven leadership and initiative in improving the quality of life for the residents of Quincy.

"I look forward to being his Congressman, and in his continued advice and guidance," said Delahunt.

Other Quincy officials who have endorsed Delahunt are state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Reps. Ronald Mariano, Stephen Tobin and Michael Bellotti; Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, City Councillors Peter Kolson, Timothy Cahill, Michael Cheney, Daniel Raymondi, Patrick McDermott, Michael D'Amico, Stephen Durkin and Bruce Ayers and School Committee members Sean Barry, JoAnn Bragg and Linda Stice.

Your Social Security

New Beneficiaries Will Be Paid By Direct Deposit

By CAROL BOYLE

New applicants for Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) will have their monthly benefit payment deposit directly to their bank account.

As of Aug. 1, 1996, people who apply for Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) have the convenience of direct deposit. That policy also applies to people who receive any federal benefit payment, federal wage, salary or retirement payment, or vendor and expense reimbursement payment.

So when you come to apply for benefits, be sure to have your bank information with you--documents that show your financial institution and your account, such as a personal check, savings passbook, or an account statement.

People already on the Social Security and SSI rolls who get checks will continue to be paid by check, unless they opt to change to direct deposit. Also, new beneficiaries who don't have a bank account will be paid by check.

With direct deposit, your money is available the same day you would have received a check. The difference is your money is sent directly to your bank. Advantages to direct deposit are:

- It's safer--there is no risk of theft or loss through the mail.
- It's reliable--there is an electronic record of all payments.
- It's economical--payments are credited on the scheduled payment day. A number of financial institutions have special accounts for those who use direct deposit.
- It's convenient--no worries when you are vacationing or otherwise away from home.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Burglar Alarms

Residential burglar alarms are not universal solutions to home burglary. They are not substitutes for locked doors and windows or for precautions your police department can suggest.

It may be appropriate to obtain alarm protection if you:

- live in an isolated area.
- are absent from home for considerable periods of time.
- live in a high crime area.
- keep many valuables in your home (a practice which is not recommended.)

The purpose of an alarm system is to:

- deter potential intruders (most burglars would reconsider forced entry if they knew an alarm system was in operation).
- warn occupants an intruder is present.
- alert police in order to apprehend the burglar.

To accomplish these objectives, alarms must complete an operation cycle consisting of sensing, signalling and response. Sensing and signalling are mechanical aspects of the alarm system while response is a human interaction with the system.

The sensing cycle involves a series of electronic components designed to establish a secure perimeter, space or point. The alarm emits a signal if an intruder enters the space. The signal can either sound at the site (local alarm) or at some remote location, or both.

Who will receive the alarm signal and their expected response are important design considerations. Alarms must have an on-site signal if they are to alert occupants. But if a house is in an isolated area, it makes little sense to depend solely on a local alarm to alert neighbors or scare off the intruder. In this case a remote signal is also needed.

The remote signal alarm is constantly monitored. Anytime the alarm is activated the police will respond.

The most dependable alarm system is operated on household power with emergency battery power. It is a good idea to have at least one smoke detector built into an alarm system. Smoke is the primary killer in a fire and smoke detectors placed in hallways between bedrooms can save lives.

Check to see if your community requires smoke detectors in homes.

McCauley Endorses Teague For Congress

State Rep. Ed Teague (R-Yarmouth) announces his candidacy for Congress has been endorsed by Frank McCauley, Quincy School Committeeman and former mayor of the city.

"Growing up in Loweli and being a son of a railroad worker, Ed Teague understands our concerns in Quincy," said McCauley. "He is the type of workhorse we need as Congressman to revitalize the Fore River shipyard. He is the only candidate with an economic plan talking about these issues."

Early this summer, Teague released a Ten Point Plan discussing job creation and economic reform. Teague's plan calls for helping small businesses, regulatory reform, promotion of tourism and revitalization of Weymouth Naval Air Station and the shipyard.

"Ed is also the only candidate I know who is willing to go door-to-door to get votes. It shows Ed has the strong work ethic we need representing our district in Washington," said McCauley, who plans to join Teague's door knocking effort during the remaining weeks of the campaign.

"I am honored to receive this endorsement from such a prominent Quincy official," said Teague.

Battered Women's Shelter Seeks Volunteers

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Preventing Potential Home Inspection Problems

Q. Our 45-year-old home is on the market. When we bought it 10 years ago, we updated the kitchen and baths. Now we're concerned about any other problems that may be uncovered during the mechanical inspection. Any suggestions?

A. You may want to review your property before a buyer makes an offer. Here are some of the most common problem areas, as determined by a survey of home inspectors:

•Plumbing problems, resulting from old or incompatible piping, that may cause considerable interior wall damage.

•Roof leakage that can be caused by old or damaged shingles often leads to cosmetic damage at best and structural damage at worst.

•Improperly graded lots often channel water toward the house's foundation instead of draining it away from the structure.

•Old, drafty windows and doors often lead moisture and air into the house.

•Improper electrical wiring that does not meet the current codes can be a potential fire hazard.

•Heating/cooling systems problems may lead to repeated malfunctioning operation controls. The potential for carbon-monoxide poisoning is greater among older heating units that have not received proper annual servicing.

•Lack of regular household maintenance may show up in cracked, dented or peeling painted surfaces, such as walls, trim, and cabinets. Many buyers are skeptical of houses that do not appear to have received routine repairs and upkeep.

Homeowners Can Profit From A Garage Sale

Hundreds of thousands of "garage sales" will be held in the coming months.

Many of the people holding these sales don't even have a garage. So the "garage sales" are held in the front yard, back yard, basement, porch, breezeway or any place that merchandise can be displayed and potential customers accommodated.

We all know people must stop when they see a sign announcing a "sale." Just a small newspaper ad and some signs on fences and poles will bring you enough customers to make a retail store envious.

Consumer Education Research Center, a national non-profit consumer group, has just published a book entitled, "Holding Garage Sales for Fun and Profit" It advises you whether your temperament, location and merchandise will produce a successful sale. If you decide to hold a sale, the book takes you through the whole process including pricing, merchandising, display tricks, and even how to recognize shoplifters.

The book can be obtained by sending $6 (plus $1.25 postage and handling) to Consumer Center, 1980 Springfield Ave., Maplewood, NJ 07040 or by calling 1-800-872-0121.

Although their first garage sale was motivated by people wanting to sell unwanted stuff, many people get hooked on the fun and easy money and want to repeat the venture. For these people, the book contains detailed tips on how extra, profitable, salable merchandise can be gotten.

Undoubtedly, you have already attend one or more garage sales. Many people are "garage sale junkies" who look in the newspaper for ads and visit every one they can locate. This means that advertising is the key to a successful sale.

Experienced Squad Opens Season At Bishop Stang Saturday

Chella Confident Presidents Will Improve

By LIAM FITZGERALD

A year ago, Peter Chella was preparing for his first season as Quincy High School's head football coach, unsure of what to expect from a young Presidents squad.

"Last year was a blur," said Chella. "We were reacting to things rather than actually planning."

Following a 4-6 record in 1995, Chella is confident that the Presidents will be noticeably improved in 1996.

"We've worked the bugs out, so things should run much smoother," he said. "Now we have a plan and I know what to expect and the kids know what is expected of them.

"They understand what is going on and are more comfortable this year. It's a learning process, and the only way to learn is to be on the job."

Tuning up for the upcoming season, Quincy battled a strong, big Boston College High School squad last Friday, but lost, 7-3, at the Stadium.

In the season opener Saturday afternoon at Bishop Stang, Quincy will face a squad whose unconventional defense may present problems for Quincy offensively.

"They have a very competent football program," said Chella. "They run the wishbone well and give you an unusual look on defense. They use an extended four, as opposed to the conventional five-man front.

"I think it'll be a tough opener for us, because we have to prepare differently for them than we would for other teams."

Following Saturday's contest, Quincy hosts another non-league foe, Lynn English, next week, then begins its Old Colony League schedule against Bridgewater-Raynham, the "odds-on favorite" to win the league, said Chella.

With 38 lettermen returning from last year's squad, including senior tri-captains Mark Glynn, Kevin Connolly and Jay Little, Quincy will have the experience and depth necessary to succeed in the OCL.

"We had a lot of young players take their lumps last year, and they improved as the season went on," said Chella. "We lost about seven or eight seniors, but most of our players are back."

Offensively, Quincy must replace departed fullback Bill Dunn, who Chella said was a "major part of the offensive scheme" last season.

A likely candidate to fill that hole is Connolly, who rushed for 750 yards and scored 11 TDs last season at tailback.

"Connolly is back after a good year last year," said Chella. "He knows where the end zone is and is not afraid to run inside. He'll take a hit and seldom goes down on the first hit.

"He should have a good year. We hope he can do even better than he did last year."

Joining Connolly in the backfield will be senior Mike Russo and junior Tim Lewis, among others, who will share the load at fullback.

Returning at quarterback for his third season is Glynn, who improved during the offseason and has "had a good preseason and has thrown the ball well," said Chella.

Opening holes and protecting Glynn will be a solid offensive line, anchored by junior guard Dan Nichol, who started last season at age 14 and impressed his coach with his intensity and toughness.

"He is going to have a great year," said Chella. "He's well motivated on the field and in the classroom and is a great player offensively and defensively. As a sophomore last year, he held his own.

"He's a tough, intense kid who is committed to football and is always thinking football when he is on the field. If I had 11 kids like him, I'd be a lot more optimistic about our chances."

Chuck Feeley will man the other guard position while seniors Paul Daley (6-4, 272) and Don McCarthy (6-4, 275) provide size, strength and protection at the two offensive tackle positions.

The center will be tri-captain Little, whom Chella called "a very good lineman--among the best in the league."

Though Chella said Quincy will probably "run the ball a little more than throw," Glynn should have plenty of opportunities to spread the ball around to the Presidents' talented receiving corps.

Seniors Bob Walsh and Mark Belanger, junior Kevin McPartlin and sophomore John Katsarikas will see action at wide receiver. Senior tight end Jon Ryan, a three-year starter, will also be a recipient for Glynn's passes.

Following his game-winning field goal in last Thanksgiving's annual showdown against North Quincy, Santos will resume kicking duties, including field goals, extra points and kickoffs, said Chella.

"He has a strong leg and can Rick it from a long way," he said. "He has a lot of experience kicking the ball. If we need a long field goal down the stretch, I wouldn't hesitate to call on him."

Ryan, who also starts at middle linebacker, will do the punting for Quincy.

On the other side of the ball, Chella said he is pleased with how well the Presidents' defense has played in the preseason and hopes it will continue as the season approaches.

"I think they will play well--they have so far," he said. "They get to the ball quick, hit well and have good tackling skills. They've worked hard and learned a lot, though they haven't gone up against the league yet."

With the departure of nose tackle Peter Kolson and defensive tackles John Moss and Scott MacPherson, nose guard Little and defensive tackles Nichol and McCarthy will step in to fill those voids.

At middle linebacker, Ryan will be flanked by Russo and senior Anthony Lallis. The ends will be manned by senior Mike Medeiros and junior Steve Wiltshire, who saw action at defensive end last season.

In the secondary, Chella will look for a replacement for departed cornerback Mike Sheffer, who was "a force on defense and special teams."

Shaun Faherty, who saw a lot of action at cornerback last season, will battle Pat Harrington, Severino Tan and Andrew Byrne for the corner spots. Rounding out the secondary is Connolly, who moves to safety after playing cornerback a year ago.

"We have some good cover people, so we shouldn't be too bad defensively," said Chella. "We also have good quickness on defense, which is very important."

Regarding Quincy's chances in 1996, Chella realizes it will be tough to succeed in the OCL, but is confident his team will compete with every opponent.

"I think we'll have a better team than last year, though maybe not better in the standings, because there are so may tough teams in our league," he said. "But I am a lot more optimistic about this season than I was about last season."

QUINCY QUARTERBACK Mark Glynn heaves a pass downfield during the Presidents' 7-3 loss to Boston College High School in a scrimmage last week at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Glynn, a 5-9, 150-pound senior, returns for his third season under center.

SENIOR TRI-CAPTAIN Kevin Connolly, who rushed for 750 yards and 11 TDs last season, is also the starting safety for Quincy. Here, he keeps an eye on the ball while staying close to his receiver during a recent practice.

Women's Fitness Classes At Fore River Clubhouse

Quincy Recreation Department will conduct two separate women's fitness classes at the Fore River Clubhose, weekdays at 8:30 a.m. and 9:30 a.m.

Instructors for the classes will be Mary Manoli on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and Sarah Cobban on Tuesday and Thursday.

The program starts Monday, Sept. 16 and Tuesday, Sept. 17 and continues for 14 weeks. Both classes will offer the same instruction--to improve and strengthen flexibility, endurance and overall fitness. Adaptations in the exercise allow each participant to work out at their own pace.

Cost is $42. Registration can be done at the main office of the Recreation Department, 100 Southern Artery on a first come, first serve basis.

Registration will also be taken at the first session of each class at the Fore River Clubhouse on Sept. 16 and 17.

For additional information, call the Recreation Department at 376-1394.

Fr. Heery Memorial Golf Tournament Oct. 7

The Fr. Heery Memorial Golf Tournament to benefit the Sacred Heart Parish will be held at the Presidents Golf Course in Quincy on Monday, Oct. 7.

The tournament will be a Florida Style Scramble beginning with registration at noon and a shotgun start at 1 p.m. Entry fee is $100 per person and includes greens fees, carts, prizes and dinner. Proceeds will benefit the Sacred Heart School and capital improvements to the church.

The tournament was founded by Rev. Cornelius J. Heery in 1993 to benefit the school, the parish and its many causes. Fr. Heery served as pastor of Sacred Heart Church for 20 years before his death last year. He also served in the capacity of Vicar in the Archdiocese of Boston for more than 20 years, the longest term in the history of the Archdiocese.

Tournament organizers encourage those interested in participating to contact the Sacred Heart Rectory or tournament organizers to reserved their foursome a spot as soon as possible. Hole sponsorship is also available for $150 a hole.

To register, call Thomas Koch at 471-7145, Atty. Paul J. Hines at 328-9178, or the Sacred Heart Rectory at 328-8666. Other tournament committee members include: Daniel J. Flynn of Flynn Real Estate, William Foley of Foley Chrysler Plymouth and Marilyn Nestor.

Under new head coach Robin Welinsky, the Quincy High girls soccer team opened its regular season on the right foot, rolling over visiting Taunton, 7-1, last Friday.

Senior tri-captain Erin Flaherty led the way for the Presidents, netting three goals and adding one assist. Junior tri-captain Kim Mackey, senior Angela Hogrell, sophomore Leanne Martin and junior Kerry Duffy all tallied a goal apiece and junior tri-captain Kara McSweeney contributed an assist.

Crystal Kazolias played well in net for Quincy, stopping four shots in the victory.

Welinsky, who has coached soccer for 12 years, came to Quincy High following a stint as JV coach at Notre Dame in Hingham. A certified personal trainer and the physical education teacher at both Beechwood Knoll and the Early Childhood Center, she is enthusiastic about working with the Presidents squad this season.

"Our team is ready," Welinsky said. "We just need to stay focused to win and work together."

The Presidents traveled to Weymouth Tuesday and host Bridgewater-Raynham today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. at Varsity Field. Saturday, the Quincy High girls soccer team will hold a yard sale, car wash and bottle drive at Central Middle School, Hancock St., from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Proceeds will go towards team warm-up suits and a team trip for training. Those interested in making donations can drop them off at Beechwood Elementary School between Monday and Wednesday.

In case of inclement weather, the fundraiser will be held Sunday at Central from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

13 Residents On UMass Dean's List

Thirteen Quincy residents have been named to the Dean's List at UMass Amherst.

They are: David K. Chan, Tsui Cheng, Jeannette F. Currie, Ann Marie Kane, Johnny H. Lee, Rita Lei, Kristina L. Massey, David P. McGuire, Daniel O. McNamara, Jean Pacifico, Soyon Park, Anne Wong, Wilson Wong.

North Quincy Girls Bow To Plymouth South

After an impressive preseason which included a shutout win over Division II finalist Masconomet Regional, the North Quincy girls soccer team fell to a hustling Plymouth South squad, 4-0, in its season opener last Friday.

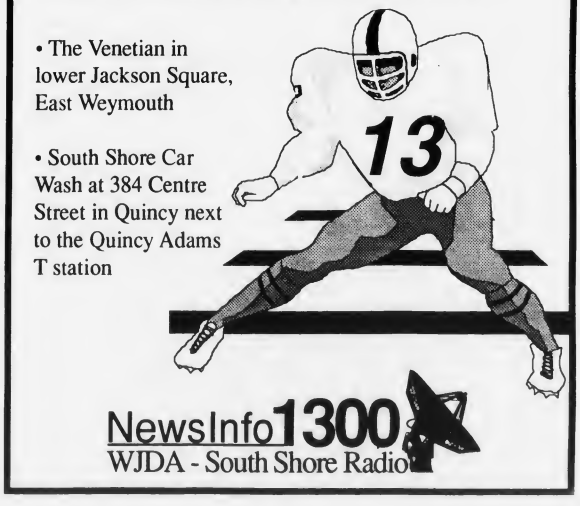
Despite dominating play early against the host Panthers, North was unable to score with its best chances coming from Hillary O'Donoghue and Laurie Flynn. The Raiders played even until an indirect kick by Meaghan Rundell was misplayed with nine minutes left in the first half, resulting in a 1-0 halftime advantage for South.

Twelve minutes into the second half, South forced a turnover on the endline, resulting in a goal by Liz Spellman. North's Ashley Murphy came right back, blasting a shot from 25 yards out which the Panther keeper just tipped over the crossbar. Sara Garvey's shot deflected by North keeper Kristen Bowes off a Red Raider player minutes later.

"The loss was really more of a shock to us than anything else, especially after the excellent preseason we had," said North Quincy head coach Paul Bregoli. "The kids seemed a little flat out there. I thought senior Jill Picardi and sophomore defender Rachael Powers played well, as did Kristen Keohane and Katie Koch."

Tuesday, North hosted Falmouth at Teal Field, then hit the road for games at Barnstable today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. and at Boston Latin tomorrow (Friday) at 3:30 p.m.

"We have two more tough league games this week and a non-leaguer at Boston Latin," said Bregoli. "Hopefully we'll make some adjustments and get a better result."



Youth Soccer Underway

The 1996 Quincy Youth Soccer League fall season got underway last Saturday under the lights at Kincaide Field.

Due to poor field conditions and a dismal weather forecast, Sunday's games were cancelled.

Girls Under 14:

The Kickers booted the Lightning Bolts, 6-4.

Stacy Szcesuil's two goals and one assist sparked the Kickers. Jennifer Djerf netted two goals, Kerrin Griffin added a goal and two assists, Jessica Gallant netted a goal and Stacey Queripel chipped in with an assist. Playing well were Jennifer Ahern, Elise Bowes and Melissa Clifford.

Allison Lacey and Laura Matos each tallied a goal and an assist for the Bolts. Carolyn King and Caitlyn Flaherty added one goal apiece and Kerry Eaton assited on a score. Kelly Rice, Julia Matos and Tanya Higgins turned in strong performances in a losing effort.

Jennifer Conley's five goals helped McEvoy Security edge the Granite City Rockers, 7-6.

Colleen Lahar netted the other two goals and Katelyn McDonald, Lauren Muller and keeper Kathryn MacRitchie all played strong games.

Scoring for the Rockers were Tama Baker (two goals), Jillian Baker, Pam Sullivan, Kristen Jones and Sheila Lynch. Contributing an assist were Lynch, Jones, Caitlin Herlihy and Caitlin Munkley. Keeper Kristen Lee and Nadia Cardone played well, as did Kara Cheesman.

The Kiwanis Club nipped Wollaston Business Association, 6-5, thanks to two goals apiece from Kellee Conley and Caitlin Golden.

Alexandra Powers and Casey Ridge also tallied a goal each. Assisting on the goals were Ridge, Diana Berberan, Morgan Peterson, Lisa Kelly, Amy O'Donnell and Jaclyn Koch. Playing well were Lucy Ross, Jennifer Grogan and Lauren McFarland.

Sarah Houghton and Sarah Garber tallied two goals apiece and Kathleen Hester scored a goal for WBA. Leanne Griffin and Kelly Coleman each added an assist. Jessica Hogan, Beth Houghton and Jacquelyn Murphy all played a good game.

Boys Under 14:

Paul Cremin netted three goals to lead the Windstormers over the Hurricanes, 8-2.

Pat Duff tallied twice for the winners and Mark Chella, Dan Wooster and Chris Wilson all added a goal. Dave Armstrong and Colin Maxey each contributed an assist.

In a losing effort, Mike Petrucelli and Matt Joyce scored and Pat Ryder, David Benn and Tim Lombard all turned in strong performances.

With two goals apiece from David Kusy and Dan Cabral, the Devils edged the Pirates, 5-4.

Brian Ferrara tallied the other goal and Mike Halloran, Tom Buckley, Luis Goldstein and Andrew Johnston chipped in with assists. Playing strong games were Adam Cook, Brandon Deshler and Shaun Jafarzadeh.

Scoring for the Pirates were Andy Nestor, Charlie Acton, Derek Kelley and Pat Jaehnig. Assisting on the scores were Paul Donovan, Ilyas Oner and John Fidalgo. Dan Goodale and Greg McGinness shined in a losing effort.

Thanks to five goals and two assists by Mike Roach, the Tornadoes whipped the Torpedos, 10-6.

Chris Roach added three goals and two assists, Mike Camparelli and Joe Torney tallied a goal and an assist apiece and Scott Keefe assisted on a goal. Eric Stanton played well for victors.

David Rochon netted three goals and Ian Hogan, Tom Shruhan and David Reilly all talled a goal for the Torpedos. Outstanding players included Tim Braga, Peter Harrigan and Andrew Smith.

Quincy Boys Looking For First Victory

Under the direction of new head coach Ray Papile Jr., the Quincy High boys soccer team dropped its first two decisions, 1-0 to Westwood and 4-1 to Taunton.

Monday against Westwood, the Presidents were unable to capitalize on numerous scoring opportunities.

"We're just not finishing--we need to put the ball in the goal, and we just didn't do that today," said Papile. "I feel that we're still thinking too much, but we're not gelling on the field yet. It's early, but in a league as strong as the Old Colony League it's important to get in the win column early."

In last Saturday's season opener against Taunton, the Presidents played well in the first half, but still trailed 2-0.

Quincy opened the scoring in the second half with a quick score by senior center forward Garth Skeet, assisted by sophomore right forward Bard Hizrijazd.

"I look forward to a big scoring year for Garth," said Papile. "It is important that we get him the ball. He is a very skilled player with great scoring ability. I believe with the scoring ability of Garth and Jared (Downey) we will be able to put numbers on the board."

With an injury to senior goalkeeper Brian Snow, backup keeper Paul Pitts-Dilly turned in a strong performance in goal.

Taunton scored two quick goals after the Quincy defense failed to clear the zone.

In the end, Quincy was unable to capitalize on a number of scoring opportunities.

"Although we came up short, I'm excited about this year's group," said Papile. "We're experienced in certain positions and young in others. The kids are working hard and are very upbeat and I'm confident that each day we will improve and develop as a team."

Quincy returns several players in key positions with varsity experience. Senior stopper back Jason Lumaghini and junior center midfielder Downey, Quincy's co-captains, will be relied on to lead the Presidents this season.

The Presidents hosted Weymouth Tuesday, travel to Bridgewater-Raynham today (Thursday) for a 4 p.m. tilt, and take on visiting Plymouth South Wednesday, Sept. 18 at 4 p.m.

WELL-ADJUSTED WHEELS

What are the adjustments that the auto technician is likely to make as part of a wheel alignment? To begin with, there is "toe," which is the tilt of the wheels toward or away from one another when viewed from above. Tires that "toe-in" point toward one another, while tires that "toe-out" point away from each other. Proper toe adjustment minimizes wear. "Camber" is the tilt of the wheel toward or away from one another when viewed from the front. Camber adjustment helps keep the face of the tire tread flat on the road for maximum traction and less wear on the edges. Lastly, there is "caster," which is the angle of the steering axis in relation to a vertical line through the center of the wheel, when viewed from the side. Caster can only be adjusted on the front wheels. The proper caster angle helps to stabilize the vehicle and impart better steering feel.

HINT: On some front-wheel-drive cars, the front tires should tow-out slightly to compensate for other forces so th at the tires run parallel to one another as they roll down the road.

Annie Bergen Awarded Soccer Scholarship

Annie Bergen, a 1996 graduate of North Quincy High School, has been selected by U.S. Youth Soccer as the first female recipient of the Regional and National Scholarships sponsored by The Scotts Company.

Bergen, vice president of her class for three years, was also the captain of North's 1995 varsity soccer team and was named to the Old Colony League All-Star team last fall.

The Scotts Company, a manufacturer of lawn and garden products, wanted "to identify and reward those high school senior soccer players who are also outstanding citizens."

First and second place winners for boys and girls were chosen for each of the four regions, and from that group a national winner was chosen for each gender.

The regional and national winners were selected "based on their citizenship, school and other outside activities, including community and volunteer service."

ANNIE BERGEN

The Scotts Scholarship will defer $7,500 of her tuition: $2,500 for the Region I first prize and $5,000 as the national winner.

Bergen, who was listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Athletes," will attend Barnard College this fall and study English with an emphasis on creative writing.

A member of the National Honor Society, she was voted "Most Likely To Succeed" by her peers and achieved the honor roll at the distinction level throughout her high school career.

Bergen spent several years playing soccer in the Quincy "In-House" league, Quincy Travel, district and Bay State. She also played for the Blue Hill Soccer Club, South Shore Magic, Inter-County Soccer Club, and most recently, the Spirit of Massachusetts Soccer Club this spring.

She was a member of the Diamond Express Soccer Club that traveled to Europe in 1994 and 1995 and won the Dana Cup in Denmark and Watford Cup in England.

She holds a South Shore Soccer League referee's license and volunteered to be the assistant coach for a girls Quincy Youth Soccer team.

Hospital Co-Coordinator Of Cancer Society Walk

Quincy Hospital has been chosen as co-coordinator for the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society's "Making Strides Against Breast Cancer" walk-a-thon.

The annual five-mile walk, scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 6 at the Charles River Esplanade in Boston, is designed to raise funds to help fight breast cancer in Massachusetts.

As a co-chairman of the event, the hospital acts as a resource center for people interested in participating or sponsoring walkers. It is providing pledge sheets, buttons and all registration materials.

For those signing up at the hospital by Sept. 30, free round-trip bus transportation will be provided by the city. Registration will take place at the buses in front of Quincy Hospital from 8 to 9 a.m. and buses will depart for the walk as they become full.

Approximately 4,600 Massachusetts women will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year, and 1,100 Bay State women will die from the disease, according to the Cancer Society.

To register or for more information, call 376-4020.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known to Fail)

Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x) Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x) Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted.

K.M.D. 9/12

ST. JUDE'S NOVENA

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. Say this prayer 9 times a day for nine consecutive days without mentioning the favor. On the eighth day your favor will be granted, no matter how unobtainable it seemed. Publication of this prayer must be promised.

C. 9/12

Thank You, Thank You, Thank You, Sacred Heart of Jesus, Blessed Mother and St. Jude Worker of Miracles, there are none that can withstand your power. F.V. 9/12

Promenade Grand Opening Rescheduled To Oct. 20

The official grand opening of the Quincy Promenade, the Faneuil Hall-type marketplace along Ross Way in Quincy Center, has been rescheduled to Sunday, Oct. 20.

The event, originally scheduled for last Sunday, was postponed due to inclement weather. The exact time of day for the rescheduled grand opening was not known at press time.

Rodney Spear of the Quincy Department of Public Works noted that although the official opening has been delayed, there are already attractions at the Promenade, including a Lunchtime Concert Series Wednesdays from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and the Quincy Farmers' Market Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Other attractions, including another concert series and additional sculptures from the South Shore Arts Center in Cohasset that will join the five pieces already at the site are planned, he added.

Spear said the Oct. 20 date was chosen so the event will coincide with the annual Harvest Festival sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and because the headlining musical act, The Drifters, are available that day. Other acts that will perform include Clutch Grabwell and the Led Foot Horns and Kidz A-Poppin', a children's theater group.

"In other words, if we have $4 million in free cash this year and put that toward the tax rate, and then we only have $1 million in free cash next year, we'll have to raise taxes next year to cover that $3 million deficit," he said.

Sheets said the new tax rate will not be known until property assessments are finalized and new growth figures for the city become available.

GRISLY MURDER SCENE--Police tape encircles family home at 18 Buckley St., West Quincy, where Kenneth Park, 23, is charged with murdering his father and two sisters in one of the worst crimes in the city's history.

Case Continued Until Oct. 4

W. Quincy Man Held For Observation In Triple Family Murders

A 23-year-old Quincy man is being held at Bridgewater State Hospital for observation in the murders of his father and two sisters.

Kenneth Park told police he committed the crimes in the family home at 18 Buckley St., West Quincy Saturday but pleaded innocent at his arraignment in Quincy District Court Monday.

Judge Charles Black ordered him held without bail after a pre-arraignment evaluation by a doctor and sent him to Bridgewater for a 20-day psychiatric evaluation. Black continued the case to Oct. 4 for a hearing.

At press time, park's court-appointed attorney, Beverly Cannone, was considering an insanity defense.

Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt likened the triple homicide to the 1969 Charles Manson family slayings in California, calling the crime scene the worst he had seen in his 25 years as a prosecutor.

Police said Park, a 1991 graduate of North Quincy High School, entered the Quincy Police Station Sunday around 9:07 p.m. the previous day and said that "the CIA made me do this." Park was brought to his family home by police who discovered the three bodies.

Park's father, 61-year-old Charles Park Sr., had been clubbed in the skull with a baseball bat and stabbed to death. His sisters, 35-year-old Jeanne Park and 33-year-old Kathy Park, had each been shot by Park who used his father's 12-gauge Remington shotgun as the weapon, according to police.

Cahill County Treasurer Nominee

Teague GOP Winner; Delahunt, Johnston Down To Wire

By ROBERT BOSWORTH and MICHAEL WHALEN

Edward Teague was the clear-cut Republican winner but the Democrat nominee in the 10th Congressional District was still uncertain early Wednesday morning with returns tight and incomplete in Tuesday's election.

District Attorney William Delahunt, 55, of Quincy and Philip Johnston, 52, of Marshfield, former New England director of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services were locked in a see-saw battle through the district at press time.

Late Tuesday night, Johnston was running ahead 16,161 to 15,841 with 88 percent of the precincts reporting.

Most of the remaining precincts were considered likely to go into the Johnston camp.

Ian Bowles, 30, a Falmouth environmentalist, was in third place but out of the money. Running a distant fourth was Walter Murray, 32, of Hull, a former paralegal.

Teague, 46, Yarmouth state representative and Minority House Leader, was running far ahead with 69 percent in the district.

Francis Sargent, Jr., 50, Orleans science writer and son of the former governor, had 23 percent. Steve Pappas, 46, Weymouth newspaper deliveryman was out of the picture with only 7 percent.

City Councillor Tim Cahill, who piled up a big lead in Quincy for the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County treasurer, claimed victory shortly after 11 p.m.

EDWARD TEAGUE

PHIL JOHNSTON

Cahill said he had a 5,000 vote lead with Weymouth the only major town not complete. He said he finished either first or second in the major communities.

John Vozzella, 57, Walpole insurance firm owner, called Cahill to concede and congratulate him.

Cahill will square off against Republican incumbent Robert Hall, Jr. in November.

In the only other contest on the ballot, Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella, Jr. defeated challenger Joseph McEttrick, former Milton selectman, by 733 votes in Quincy. Returns throughout the rest of the Fourth District were incomplete.

Despite the rainy weather, the voter turnout was 21.8 percent, just under the 22 percent predicted by City Clerk Joseph Shea.

WILLIAM DELAHUNT

Total number of ballots cast was 10,703 of which 8,988 were Democratic (83.98 percent) and 1,709 Republican (15.97 percent). Six Libertarian ballots were cast for .06 percent. There were no contests on that ballot.

Delahunt rode out of Quincy with a hefty lead, piling up 62.25 percent of the votes with 6,008.

Johnston's vote was 1,649 (18.73 percent),

City To Hire Counsel To Fight Marina Appeal

The city is planning to hire a special legal counsel to fight a Land Court challenge over a proposed Marina Bay condominium development.

The City Council Monday night unanimously approved a resolution by Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers to hire the counsel. Ayers and Sheets have said the lawyer to be hired will be Boston attorney Peter Koff.

The city's plan is to have Koff and City Solicitor Stephen McGrath represent the city against Braintree developer Lloyd Geisinger. The developer is appealing the council's July vote against his plan to build 268 condominiums on a 17-acre parcel in Marina Bay.

The appeal is scheduled to be heard in the state court Jan. 14-15 by Judge Leon Lombardi, who has ordered the pretrial discovery process to be finished by Nov. 30.

Ayers told the council that specialized assistance is needed for such a case and that the city has no intention of backing down from Geisinger.

"We'll continue to fight," he said.

Council Approves $12,500 Pay Raise For Sheets

The City Council, as expected, has approved a $12,500 pay hike for Mayor James Sheets.

The unanimous vote Monday night will raise the mayor's annual salary from $62,500 to $75,000 effective Jan. 1.

Sheets told The Quincy Sun two weeks ago the raise would put his salary more in line with what mayors of other local communities are receiving as well as give him a higher salary than a number of his own department heads.

Council President Peter Kolson said Sheets has worked hard to improve the city in a number of ways and has earned the 16.7 percent pay hike.

"The man, simply put, deserves the raise," said Kolson. "This man earns his keep."

Councillor Michael Cheney agreed, saying he suggested to Sheets he

McGrath told the council a future appropriation of about $25,000 will be needed to hire the special counsel.

Among the councillors who voiced support of taking the action were Council President Peter Kolson, Councillor Michael Cheney and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi. Kolson said the council will hold executive sessions on the issue in the future, since it involves a matter of litigation.

Geisinger, owner of Marina Court Associates and Thorndike Properties, filed the Land Court appeal in August, a month after the council voted 8-1 against his plan. Cheney was the lone dissenter, saying the problems Ayers had with the project could be worked and that the city could lose a court battle over the matter.

Geisinger accused Ayers and other councillors of rejecting the project for political reasons.

Ayers and other councillors, however, have said the project does not meet the requirements of the city's Planned Unit Development (PUD) zoning and that the city has a strong case against the developer.

Geisinger has argued that his project, which has been approved by the Quincy Planning Board and other city departments, meets PUD requirements. Ayers and a number of his council colleagues, however, have said it is too large for the site and would be disruptive to neighbors.

10 Less Beginning In January

Council Committees To Be Streamlined

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The City Council will begin streamlining its committees in January.

The council voted unanimously Monday night to pass a resolution by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi to reduce the number of committees from 24 to 14. In addition, only three of the remaining committees will be "councils of the whole" on which all nine councillors will serve as members.

Raymondi said the reason for his proposal is that the council can address issues "far more effectively" by streamlining its committees through such a process. Initially, he proposed beginning the process either next month or this November.

Council President Peter Kolson agreed with the streamlining proposal, but said he wanted to wait until after the November 1997 citywide election to implement it. Since the president of the council appoints the chairmen of the various committees, he said, it would make more sense to hold off on the new system until the new president is sworn-in in January 1998.

A vote to have the streamlining delayed until after next fall's election resulted in a 4-4 deadlock. Kolson was joined by Councillor Michael Cheney, Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott and Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, while those who sided with Raymondi included Councillor Paul Harold, Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers. Councillor Timothy Cahill was not present for the vote.

DAN RAYMONDI

The subsequent vote to compromise by starting the streamlining this January was unanimous.

Under Raymondi's proposal, three council committees--finance, ordinance, and oversight--will remain councils of the whole. Committees with five members will include public works, public safety, education, public health and hospital, rules, public parks and recreation, and senior citizens. The downtown and tourism, handicapped affairs, veterans services and libraries and historical places committees will have three members apiece.

Raymondi said while certain committees, such as public transportation, youth, and others will be eliminated outright, he noted that the duties of some discarded committees will be absorbed by others. For instance, the finance committee can look at issues previously discussed by the pension and state and federal funds committees, while the public parks and recreation committee can address matters previously sent to the beautification committee, he said.

Four Quincy Groups Receive Cultural Council Grants

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano, Stephen Tobin announce that Quincy programs in the arts, humanities, and sciences will receive grants awarded by the Massachusetts Cultural Council (MCC).

Organizations receiving a competitive matching grant include: Broad Meadows Middle School ($420), First Night Quincy Inc. ($6.110), Quincy Cultural Council ($47,615), and Point-Webster Elementary School working with collaborating with Artist in Progress, Inc. ($21,000).

The grants go to area cultural development organizations, artists and towns, helping the community's cultural life to thrive and increasing the role of education reform and economic development.

Organizations and individuals interested in applying for grants should contact the local council chairperson in their community for more information at 376-1322. The statewide deadline for all local cultural councils in Tuesday, Oct. 15.

A Breakthrough in Hearing Aid Technology.

If you've been waiting for the very latest hearing technology, we have important news for you...

Starkey's new Sequel Series hearing instruments offer performance advantages unlike any hearing aid we've offered before.

To achieve this preferred level of performance, an ideal hearing aid should not contribute undesirable perceptual elements – like distortion – that can result in poor sound reproduction, especially at high levels.

Thanks to Starkey's breakthrough SMArT Systems Technology, Sequel's sophisticated anti-distortion and efficient circuitry achieves an entirely new plateau in sound quality and performance.

Cheney Objection Delays Council Vote On Radar

The city will have to wait at least two more weeks before the purchase of a radar device designed to crack down on speeding motorists is approved by the City Council.

The vote on the matter was delayed after Councillor Michael Cheney objected to the item on the council's agenda. Because the radar issue was on the agenda for the first time, Cheney's objection--under council protocol--automatically postponed a vote for at least two weeks.

Other councillors said they wanted to vote on the matter, saying the $10,000 request for the radar from Mayor James Sheets was a small price to pay for a public safety issue. Cheney, however, said he needed more information, including whether the device in question is a reliable one and whether it is the best deal financially for the city.

Police Chief Francis Mullen urged the council to vote in favor of the appropriation.

"We think it's a smart investment," said Mullen, who said the device's purpose will be two-fold: educating motorists about obeying the speed limit, and enforcing the law against those who do not. The chief has championed purchasing such a device in the past.

Mullen, like Sheets, said he favors purchasing the Speed Monitoring Awareness Radar Trailer (SMART) made by Kansas-based Kustom Signals Inc. The unit displays the speeds of oncoming vehicles on a 12-inch tall digital display that can be seen from up to 100 yards.

Mullen, prompted by a question from Cheney, said there is "possibly one other manufacturer" that makes a similar device for a comparable price.

Cheney said he supports the purchase of a radar device but would like to see a competitive bidding process before a vote is taken.

Council Appropriates $75,000 For New Trees

New trees will soon be planted throughout the city as a result of a vote by the City Council Monday night.

The council voted unanimously to appropriate $75,000 from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account to be given to the Quincy Parks, Forestry and Cemetery Department for the tree plantings.

Thomas Koch, executive director of the department, told the council "several varieties" of trees will be planted in all of the city's six wards, including maples, oaks, honey locusts and others. About 400 trees will be planted, including about 50 in parks and schoolyards, he added.

Koch said a contract for the tree plantings is expected go out to bid by the end of the month and the work should begin in November.

Council Approves Sheets Pay Raise

increase the mayor's salary to more than $75,000.

Cheney added that he feels the City Council also deserves a raise. Two years ago, the council's salary jumped from $10,000 to $12,500.

Despite the pay increase, Sheets will still be paid less than Quincy's superintendent of schools ($90,000), assistant school superintendent ($78,773) and police and fire chiefs ($78,000 apiece).

Sheets also will earn less that mayors of communities with populations similar to Quincy's. The mayor of Fall River, which has a population of 93,000, makes $78,426 a year, while the salary of the mayor of Newton, which has a population of 81,000, recently jumped from $82,500 to $120,000, according to figures provided by Sheets.

PRODUCTS OF OUR TIMES

As far as products liability is concerned, the manufacturer of a product is not expected to be a guarantor of its absolute safety. If, however, a consumer of the product were to become injured while using the product in the manner for which it was designed, and the injury were proximately caused by the manufacturer's failure to warn of any inherently dangerous condition of the product (or if the product were negligently designed), then recovery could be had. Most negligent liability for injuries arising out of the use of a product are usually based on its negligent design. Manufacturers are expected to exercise reasonable care in designing and testing a product, as well as subjecting it to adequate inspection, before it is made available to the public, Furthermore, if the manufacturer is aware of a specific danger connected with the product, it must affix a warning label to it.

HINT: If a product is misused or if the instructions that accompany it are not followed, then it is not likely that the manufacturer will be held liable for injuries arising from its misuse.

If you've been injured as the result of using a consumer product, it is important to speak with an attorney as soon as possible. Without the help of an attorney, you may be forced to settle for what the manufacturer considers adequate. If you need legal assistance, call 773-2880. WJDA: A Community Friend

Back then, some shook their heads and said it wouldn't last.

When WJDA first signed on the air at 6 a.m., Sept. 13, 1947, the so-called experts predicted it would be gone in six-months--if it even lasted that long.

Quincy was too small and too close to Boston for a station of its own, they insisted. The Boston biggies would be just too much competition, etc., etc.

Quincy and the South Shore are fortunate that they were wrong and founders Jim Asher and Joe Tobin were right. A Quincy radio station could make it, they were sure. Well, almost.

JIM ASHER

But they were willing to give it a shot even though they were doing it on a shoestring ($130 in the bank, as the story goes) and knew it really was a gamble.

The station struggled in the beginning. Tobin later went to a radio station in Gloversville, N.Y. Asher stayed on and guided JDA to success.

Don Kent and Ken Coleman are among those who got their start there.

The station's call letters, in case you don't know, are Asher's initials: James D. (for Dudley) Asher. His son, Jay, took over in 1973 when his father died. Tobin is also deceased.

JAY ASHER

Jay carried on where his father left off, giving generously of air time to community news and events while keeping a sharp eye on the rest of the world.

Perhaps the station's "finest hour" was the Blizzard of '78. But it wasn't for an hour. It was for several days.

While the storm lashed the coast, flooding streets and homes and burying the area under 27 inches of snow, Jay, Herb Fontaine, Win Bettinson, Ken Fallon, John Nicolson, Roy Lind, Charlie Ross and Don Baird kept vital information flowing to snowed-in listeners. The station stayed on after normal broadcasting hours two nights to keep the information coming.

Yes, Quincy and the South Shore are fortunate that those so-called experts were wrong 49 years ago.

Now, on its way to the half-century mark, WJDA is a local tradition, institution--and community friend.

Keep up the great work, Jay, and gang.

GEORGE PARKER, owner of the Yellow Cab Co. in Quincy, would rather I didn't do this. But I'm going to anyway.

For 20 years now, he has quietly and generously helped the fight against muscular dystrophy.

PARKER

It started back in 1976 when The Quincy Sun became the Quincy-South Shore pledge center for the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day telethon.

George came in that first year with two checks, a $400 personal one, and a $400 company one. And for 10 years it became an annual ritual. In those 10 years the pledge center and committee raised over $1 million thanks to people like George.

Because of space limitations, the pledge center is no longer at The Sun. But that hasn't stopped George from giving.

George just kept coming by each year with two $400 checks. Only this year he couldn't come himself becuase of illness. But he sent his friend and colleague Wayne McCully with the two checks.

So in those 20 years, according to our arithmetic, George has donated something like $16,000 to help conquer muscular dystrophy.

He would rather keep it all quiet. But, sorry, George, I think the folks would like to know there are still some nice people out there. And you're one of them.

Rooting for you, George.

WE WERE SPARED the wrath of Hurricane Fran but good friend Rev. John Banks, former pastor of Bethany Congregational Church and his wife, Billie, were not so fortunate.

BANKS

Their home in Chapel Hill, N.C., was heavily damaged when Fran roared into that state. The high winds toppled 15 trees including a huge oak tree in their front yard which landed on and opened the roof allowing heavy rain to pour in.

Close friend Bill Lipp of Edwards Lane, Germantown, who has been in touch with them, says they came through the storm without injury. But they were without power for nearly a week.

John and Billie had been here in Quincy over Labor Day when he was guest preacher at Bethany. They got back to Chapel Hill as the hurricane hit.

MILESTONE: Former School Committeeman Frank Anselmo will be 98 on Sunday. A pretty spry 98.

ANSELMO

Anselmo, a veteran of both World War I and World War II, is a familiar figure at veterans functions. He had the crowd chuckling at last year's Veterans Day ceremonies with this:

"I was drafted in World War I. I was drafted in World War II. And if there is World War III--I'm ready to go."

Happy birthday, young fellow.

GEORGE BURKE was in Atlantic City with friends recently and while there they stopped in at an Irish pub.

BURKE

One of the friends mentioned to the hostess that Burke used to be with the Boston Celtics. (He was as a rookie).

"Gee," she said, "I know someone I'm sure would like to meet you."

She escorted him to a private room where two men sat talking--sports. She introduced George to them. One of them was former New York Yankees star Joe DiMaggio.

They got to talking about the Celtics, the Yankees, the Red Sox and DiMaggio's brother, Dom, who had a brilliant career with the Red Sox as a centerfielder.

As they chatted DiMaggio said: "You know, the Celtics were the greatest basketball dynasty in history. And the Yankees were the greatest baseball dynasty."

DiMaggio was so friendly that Burke couldn't resist asking: "Joe, how old are you now?"

And the answer will make us all feel older: "George," he replied, "I'm 81."

STORK REPORT: Ed Morris, manager of The Fours Restaurant in Quincy Square and his wife, Donna, are parents of their third child, first daughter, Kathleen Rita, who made her debut Sept. 9 at 7 lbs., 10 ounces at Mass. General Hospital. Kathleen's big brother are Michael, 7, and Robert, 5.

Congratulations.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1940's view of the old Strand Theater that was located at 13 Chestnut Street in Quincy Square. In operation for about thirty years, the theater opened in the late 1920's. With 1609 seats, including a large balcony, it was the largest theater in Quincy. Closed down in the late 1950's, the building has been demolished and the site is now a parking lot for the Bank of Boston.

Durkin Commends Police For Curbing Standish Ave. Speeding

[The following letter, dated Sept. 9 and addressed to Police Chief Francis Mullen, was submitted for publication.]

Dear Chief Mullen:

I wish to commend your department for its efforts in curbing speeding on Standish Avenue in Wollaston.

I would request, however, that emphasis be placed on curbing speeding on weekend evenings (as late as midnight or 1 a.m. and as early as dusk). This seems to be the time the problem is most acute.

You should be aware that Standish Avenue is being made one-way (on a 30-day trial basis). I think it would be important to monitor traffic speed during this time, not only on Standish Avenue but on adjacent streets such as Clay Street and Old Colony Avenue. Please check with Jack Gillon regarding applicable dates.

Thanks Those Who Helped During United Way's Community Care Day

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Speaking for the residents, families and staff at Granite House, and for Bay State Community Services Inc., I would like very much to thank everyone who contributed to a face-lift of our program on the United Way's Community Care Day Tuesday, Sept. 10.

Community Care Day matches volunteers from various businesses with human service agencies for a volunteer work day. Granite House, a long-term residential school and treatment program for area adolescents, was matched with the Arbella Insurance Company at Crown Colony Drive in Quincy.

Dawn Quinn from Arbella coordinated her company's effort, and 16 volunteers from Arbella spent the day here painting and cleaning up. All told, the Arbella employees painted two bedrooms, two bathrooms, the family therapy/group room, a hallway, the kitchen, the staff office, an entry way and the residents' telephone area.

Money to purchase 15 gallons of paint and considerable supplies was provided by a $500 donation from the Bank of Boston, with Bruce MacKilligan from the Community Relations Office at the 1400 Hancock St. branch presenting our program the money expressly for the Community Care Day. The paint and supplies were bought at Curry Hardware in West Quincy as thanks for a previous donation of 30 gallons of paint Bob Curry had made to Granite House for painting here last spring.

Finally, I want to thank Ed Couritier, manager of Papa Gino's at 100 Granite St. in Quincy, for donating the pizzas we used as lunch for the Arbella volunteers, our residents, and school and house staff.

We deeply appreciate the heartfelt and generous support from all of these Quincy businesses and individuals. They are making a significant difference in what we do.

Buddy Cushman
Program Director

Quincy's Yesterdays

Joseph Kennedy Chamber Speaker

Sept. 19 - 25
1945

By PAUL HAROLD

Joseph Kennedy, former ambassador to Great Britain and former assistant general manager at the Fore River shipyard, spoke at a two-hour development conference sponsored by the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

Some 150 business men and women attended the meeting at the chamber's headquarters in the Cliveden Building. Kennedy cited the need to begin planning for the post-war industrial prosperity of the state.

In calling for the attraction of new businesses to the state, he said, "We must remove every obstruction, even if it means changing some of our statues."

RATIONING TO CONTINUE ON SHOES

The Quincy ration calendar released this week showed the phase out of rationing on meats and sugar, but continued the rationing of shoes. It noted that the OPA had no plans to cancel any of the shoe rationing stamps.

All persons in rent controlled units were reminded to register with the area OPA rent office and persons overcharged for products were urged to report violations to the War Price Rationing Board.

SAINTS VS. COMETS FOR LEAGUE TITLE

St. Mary's Saints faced Pryor Hall's Comets for the championship of the Quincy Park League in playoffs at Kincaide Park.

The Saints' late season surge required that the Comets win both games in the doubleheader to gain the title.

Standouts for the Saints included John Cattaneo, Jim Reynolds, Lou Marini, Bill Sleep, Gaeton Salvucci, Bob Quintilliani and the "fancy fielding" of shortstop Ray Cattaneo.

Players for the Comets included Warren Driscoll, Bill Mahoney, Warren Mills, Jim Frazier, Charley Kerr, Carl Koury and Bud Holland.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to run wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Killed In Canton Brawl

Suspects Sought In Death Of Quincy Man

Investigators are still searching for suspects in the stabbing death of a 22-year-old Quincy man who was killed at a housewarming party in Canton early Sunday.

Mathew McLarnon was fatally wounded at the party which eventually turned into a wild melee. Eight other partygoers were treated and released at local hospitals for stab wounds.

Witnesses said a racial slur directed at the only black person at the party caused tension that eventually erupted into a violent brawl. The fight broke out between friends of the man from Quincy and a group from South Boston, they said.

Norfolk County District William Delahunt said at press time, however, his investigators still had no firm evidence that a racial remark triggered the fighting.

Mayor James Sheets, who is on leave from a teaching position at Quincy College, called the incident a tragedy.

"As someone who has taught people between the ages of 18 and 25 on a regular basis, there's a deep sadness for me with a tragedy like that," said Sheets. "There's just too much of this kind of thing happening in our society today."

McLarnon, a 1992 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School, was president of his senior class and captain of the football team. An aspiring teacher and football coach, he was a student at the University of Massachusetts.

Morrissey Calls Democratic Convention 'A Great Success'

State Sen. Michael Morrissey, who recently attended the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, says the event was "a great success."

Morrissey was one of six delegates from the Tenth Congressional District elected to attend the convention.

"The City of Chicago really rolled out the red carpet to help make the convention a great success," said Morrissey. "The convention also gave me the opportunity to meet with delegates and other legislators from throughout the country."

The convention included entertainment as well as various seminars providing insights into party politics, election laws, many other issues. Massachusetts delegates also had breakfast with top Clinton Administration members and former University of Massachusetts President Joe Duffy, now director of the U.S. Information Agency.

Massachusetts played a prominent role during the convention. U.S. Sens. Edward Kennedy and John Kerry gave speeches, and U.S. Rep. Joseph Kennedy III was extended the honor of re-nominating Vice President Al Gore.

Morrissey praised the speech given by President Clinton.

"The president's speech touched on the future and how the Democratic Party is the party of the future," he said. "President Clinton set a positive and enthusiastic agenda for the Democratic Party in 1996 that should propel Democratic candidates across the country to victory."

Audubon Society Supports MDC Taking Billings Creek

The Quincy Citizens & Wollaston Park Associations' April recommendation that the Metropolitan District Commission acquire the Billings Creek with adjacent wetlands and wildlife habitat on Lot 23 at Marina Bay has won the support of the Massachusetts Audubon Society.

In a recent letter to MDC Commissioner David B. Balfour, Jr., Audubon President Gerard A. Bertrand wrote:

"The Massachusetts Audubon Society supports the request by the Quincy Citizens & Wollaston Park Association seeking protection for a parcel of land along Billings Creek and the Neponset River estuary adjacent to Marina Bay.

"The area provides habitat for a great diversity of birds. The Society urges the MDC to make this acquisition project a high priority. This property stands out as deserving particular attention for protection."

. Balfour has written to The Quincy Citizens & Wollaston Park Association: "The MDC has agressively acquiring open space in the Greater Boston region over the past several years, especially those adjoining our existing open spaces, those which possess unique natural or cultural features, and those which abut wetlands and waterways. The referenced area in your letter is thought to contain many if not all of these criteria."

Commuter Boat Service Available Between Marina Bay, Boston

Boston Harbor Cruises is now offering commuter boat service aboard the SeaVentures boat between Marina Bay in Quincy and Long Wharf in Boston.

The boat carries up to 150 passengers each way on its 25-minute trips. Fare is $3 one-way and $6 round-trip. Ten-ride passes also are available for $27 and monthly passes for $100.

The ferry runs Monday through Friday and leaves Marina Bay every half-hour between 6 and 9:30 a.m. 4 and 7:30 p.m. Daily departure times from Long Wharf are every half-hour from 6:30 to 9 a.m. and from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m.

The ferry at Marina Bay is located near the end of Victory Road next to the WaterWorks restaurant and nightclub. Free parking is available in the lot adjoining WaterWorks.

The new service marks the first time a commuter boat has been available in Quincy for more than a decade.

For more information about the commuter boat service, call Boston Harbor Cruises at 227-4321 or SeaVentures at 786-1000.

Get Into The Habit At Bad Abbots!

Medically Speaking

by Michael M. Bakerman, M.D., F.A.C.C.

BEHIND THE 'EXTRA STRENGTH' LABEL

Have you got an extra-bad ache or pain? Then you'd better reach for an extra-strength pain reliever – at least, that's what the pharmaceutical companies would like you to buy. What exactly does it mean, though, for a product to be advertised as "extra-strength?" In many cases, it simply indicates that a higher dosage of the active ingredient is being delivered. For example, one popular "extra strength" pain reliever contains 500 milligrams (mg) of acetaminophen, compared with the 325 mg in its "regular strength" version, The buyer still needs to beware, however, because some "extra strength" products also mix in other ingredients. Several popular medications combine aspirin and acetaminophen. Caffeine, which research indicated may heighten pain-reliever power, is sometimes added as well. Check labels to avoid unwanted side effects!

P.S. The letters "IB" after a pain reliever's name means it contains ibuprofen. "PM" indicates that a sleep aid is included.

Ask your doctor about what the right dosages are for you when using over-the-counter drugs; don't self-medicate for any extended periods of time without such a consultation. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. I am board certified in cardiology and internal medicine. Call 472-2550; office hours by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Taking care of your health and well being is our primary concern.

Financing Awarded For First Permanent Housing For Veterans

The Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston has awarded a $60,000 grant to The Hibernia Savings Bank on behalf of Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services for renovation of a condemned building on 191 Burgin Parkway, Quincy, into permanent housing for veterans.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Veterans Services, the home will be the first permanent housing for qualified veterans on the South Shore and one of few in the state. Many more beds and programs are available to veterans in shelters and transitional housing. An estimated 2,000 veterans in Massachusetts are homeless.

The Veterans' House, due for completion Nov. 30, will be owned and operated by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition which will provide veteran support services.

Congressman Joseph Kennedy, a member of the House Veterans Committee, and Congressman Joseph Moakley, a veteran of World War II, spoke out in favor of the project which responds to the need for permanent housing.

Moakley said: "Massachusetts veterans will be well served by this new permanent housing and I look forward to working with the coalition to provide whatever help I can in making the Burgin Parkway house a model for the rest of the country."

"Americans who have stepped forward to answer the call of their country should never be told there's no room at the inn at their moment of need," added Kennedy. "All the partners involved in this project deserve our thanks for giving homeless vets an opportunity to regain control of their lives."

"The Massachusetts Department of Veterans' Services applauds and supports this effort in the development of continuum of care for veterans in Massachusetts. We in the Commonwealth continue to be one of the nation's leaders in our joint efforts to assist eligible veterans," said Thomas J. Hudner, commissioner of Veterans' Services.

The Federal Home Loan Bank selected the project for funding among a record number of requests by member banks totaling $14 million for $4 million of available funds. It is the first Federal Home Loan Bank award ever to be granted in Quincy. The Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston is the central bank for housing finance in the six New England states.

"Here in New England, there are a significant number of people who have served their country well and have earned our respect and assistance. As a member bank, The Hibernia Savings Bank identified the worthiness of this project and acted as a responsible corporate citizen and a good partner to Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services," said Michael A. Jessee, president and CEO of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston.

The Hibernia Savings Bank is also providing permanent financing for the project. Employees of the bank are sponsoring one of the eight rooms in the house and will contribute time and materials to paint and decorate this room. Other sources of funding include the City of Quincy HOME Program, the State HOME Program, the Brooks Foundation and a Community Development Block Grant.

City To Receive $1.7 Million For Road Improvements

Quincy will receive $1,715,074 from the state for road improvements.

Announcement was made jointly by Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin, who said the money will come under Chapter 90 Program.

The Chapter 90 money includes monies appropriated in the Deficiency Budget and the 1996 Transportation Bond Bill. The Massachusetts Highway Department (MHD) is responsible for distribution and notification of cities and towns for the availability of Chapter 90 funds.

The MHD and the city or town will enter into a Memorandum of Agreement before the municipality can submit invoices to draw down those funds for the various roadway improvement projects.

"The Chapter 90 funds will come from a combination of bond money and direct cash appropriated by the Legislature," said Morrissey. "The 1996 Transportation Bond Bill allocated $300 million in bond money and the MHD authorized $150 million in bond money to be appropriated and released this month," said Bellotti.

Mariano said, "The balance of the bond money will be authorized sometime next vear."

Representative Tobin added, "An additional $25 million was provided by the Deficiency Budget due to increased revenues later in the fiscal year 1996."

The legislation has recognized the need for roadway improvements due to the significant damage caused by the harsh winter, the Quincy delegation said.

Violinist Kerstin Westerburg Joins Beechwood Faculty

Kerstin Westerburg, renowned violinist and music educator, has joined the faculty of Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy.

Westerburg will offer instruction and demonstrations at the intergenerational community life center.

"We are pleased to welcome Kerstin to our Beechwood family," said Beechwood Executive Director Sharron Beals. "Community enrichment through lifelong learning is our primary goal. We feel Kerstin's experience working with musicians and students of all ages and abilities strengthens that commitment."

Before she came to the United States in 1993, Westerburg ran a private violin studio and taught music to students between the ages of 3 and 6. She was also a faculty member of summer courses in chamber music for young children and teens.

Westerburg has played in professional orchestras and chamber music groups in Sweden, the Netherlands, Belgium, Germany and the United States. She holds a teaching degree from Germany, a performance degree from the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria and a master's degree in performance from the United States.

Westerburg is a resident of Wollaston.

"My family and I have been preparing for the opening of Hancock Park for 60 years."
-Richard Welch

When Hancock Park in Quincy opens in October, it will be the newest Healthcare and Assisted Living Center on the South Shore. But this isn't a story about bricks and mortar. It's the story of one women's vision of what community healthcare could be. And should be.

My grandmother, Florence St. John, RN

It all began in 1935, right here in Quincy in my grandmother Florence St. John's parlor. As a Home Health Nurse, she saw first hand the unique difficulties many of her elderly patients faced. Often what they needed most was emotional support and care in a warm, unthreatening environment. In those days, there were few facilities prepared to provide that. But my grandmother was.

So she began caring for seniors in her home. From these modest beginnings, the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group has become the leading provider of healthcare services on the South Shore.

Which brings us to the point of this story.

The opening of Hancock Park will be both a homecoming for us and a living memorial to the ideals that were so important to my grandmother. We're obviously very proud of her. And we're absolutely committed to making sure everything about Hancock Park reflects that pride.

To learn more about Hancock Park or about Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, please call us at (617) 878-6700. We'll send a you a free copy of our Welch Family Guide to Senior Care.

A TIRED STORY

If you are a concerned environmentalist or just plain wonder what they do with all those used tires, you may be interested in the latest news about recycling old tires. With about 250 million scrap tires being generated in this country each year, many states now ban the disposal of tires in landfills and 46 states have laws that regulate scrap-tire disposal. About 60% of the tires currently headed for disposal are rerouted for retreading, recycling or use as fuel, representing a big improvement over just five years ago. Much of this rubber is combined with asphalt to create a surface that is more durable, quieter and less given to cracking (owing to higher elasticity) than non-rubberized asphalt. With the federal government's Intermodal Surface Transportation Act now mandating increasingly higher percentages of ground rubber (to a maximum of 20%) for use in highway pavement, this use for recycled rubber is expected to grow.

HINT: Many car manufacturers are using scrap rubber to make such items as seals, air deflectors, splash guards and carpet backing for their new automobiles.

If you have questions about your car or any of its systems, don't hesitate to ask when you come into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Tony's Eggplant Sandwich

At a recent luncheon I had, my brother-in-law Tony and sister-in-law Nancy brought an eggplant appetizer that was out of this world and one in which was new to all who attended. Tony enjoys preparing this great recipe as I hope you will too.

Tony's Eggplant Sandwich

1 medium sized eggplant seasoned bread crumbs (enough to coat)
1 egg mixed with milk
1/4 pound mortadella (or more depending on the size of the eggplant
1/4 pound Fortini cheese (or a favorite and enough for the eggplant)

Place the eggplant in the egg and milk mixture, then the breadcrumbs. Place on a lightly greased cookie sheet and bake in a 350 degree oven for 15-20 minutes turning once.

Cool enough so they can be handled easily. Make a sandwich by placing on the eggplant, a slice of mortadella, a slice of the cheese topping it with another slice of the eggplant.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 10-15 minutes until done. They can be eaten either hot out of the oven, or at room temperature as we did. For the appetizer, they can be cut in fours as a pie. They are also good the day after.

Scott Pollard On South American Deployment

Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Scott C. Pollard, son of George C. Pollard of 93 Centre St., Quincy, has departed on a four-month South American deployment aboard the destroyer USS Moosbrugger.

Pollard is one of more than 350 sailors aboard the ship, which departed Mayport, Fla., as part of a four-ship U.S. force to participate in Unitas 37.

A 1979 graduate of Orange Park High School in Orange Park, Fla., Pollard joined the Navy in September 1982. He is also a graduate of Florida Community College in Jacksonville where he received an associate of science degree in 1989 and an associate of arts degree in 1991.

In Conjunction With ERA Real Estate

Sun To Host MDA 'Jail & Bail' Sept. 26

More than 200 local business people will be arrested . . . for a good cause . . . at a Jail and Bail fundraiser for the Muscular Dystrophy Association Thursday, Sept. 26 at The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

In conjunction with ERA Central Real Estate and The Quincy Sun, MDA hopes to raise more than $20,000 with the event.

Local business people agree to be "arrested" and "locked up" for one hour and are subsequently asked to raise bail money for MDA. The Norfolk County Sheriff's Department (along with Alfred's Limousine Service of Milton) will escort the "jailbirds" to the local "jailhouse" at The Quincy Sun.

Utilizing cellular phones donated by Cellular One of Westwood, the jailbirds call on family, friends and co-workers for pledges. Bread and water are standard fare, but additional food will be sought to keep the jailbirds energy level up.

Elise Kerrigan, program coordinator for MDA, said, "the lock-up program is a unique fundraising event that provides the general business community with the opportunity to give back to the community and have fun doing it."

"Jailbirds" come from a cross-section of the community, including government officials, community leaders and men and women from a wide array of businesses, labor unions and industries.

"Era has been a long time supporter of MDA and endorses the lock-up concept completely," said Vin Moscardelli of ERA Central Real Estate. "It's a great opportunity for Quincy business people to interact in a fun, light atmosphere while at the same time raising funds for a great cause."

Funds raised by the lock-up program will allow the Muscular Dystrophy Association to better serve local individuals affected by a neuromuscular disease. Services include clinic visits, follow-up therapy, support groups, summer camp for youngsters, and allowance towards some durable medical equipment.

A the same time, MDA funds medical research (much in the Boston market) for the purpose of finding cures and treatments for 40 neuromuscular disorders.

Tobin Co-Sponsors Resolution Against Medex Premiums Increase

Rep. Stephen Tobin recently co-sponsored a House resolution filed by Rep. Robert DeLeo (D-Winthrop/Revere) in an effort to block Blue Cross & Blue Shield's proposed increase premiums for their Medex health insurance plans.

"I'm strongly opposed to any increase in the Medex program at this time," said Tobin. "Many of the seniors in Quincy are financially strapped living on fixed incomes, and any increase in their health insurance premiums will force them to have to choose between health care and other necessities."

Tobin's resolution, which passed unanimously in the House, urges Division of Insurance Commissioner Linda Ruthardt to deny Blue Cross/Blue Shield's request to increase premiums for the Medex programs, including a 30 percent increase in Medex Gold.

The premium increase request follows an increase of more than 20 percent in Medex Gold premiums last year, which forced 26,000 seniors off Medex. Blue Cross & Blue Shield cites a loss of $20 million this past year and a continual decline in membership since 1991 as justification for the proposed increases.

Tobin said it appears Blue Cross & Blue Shield is caught in a "death spiral," where premiums rise and subscribers drop out, forcing premiums higher and in turn force more subscribers to drop out. Therefore, any further increases in premiums will result in more uninsured elderly, he said.

"As the fight for our senior citizens persist, my colleagues and I will continue to work with Commissioner Ruthardt, the insurance industry and our seniors to ensure adequate and affordable health insurance for all of our elderly," said Tobin.

Patriots Hall Of Famer To Speak At ENC Oct. 4

John Hannah, CEO and chairman of the board of The Hannah Group in Boston and an NFL Hall of Famer who played for the New England Patriots, will speak Friday, Oct. 4 at Eastern Nazarene College, 23 East Elm Ave., Wollaston.

Hannah will give an address entitled "How Your Business Can Start and Maximize a 401K Plan." A reception and networking session will be held at 6:30 p.m. and dinner will be served at 7 p.m.

A 1973 fourth round draft pick of the Patriots, Hannah played 13 years as left offensive guard before being inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1991. In 1984, he joined L.F. Rothschild in Boston where he became a member of the Investment Managers Consultant's Association.

In 1988, he began a business that eventually became The Hannah Group, which provides pension fund consulting services to corporations, public entities and unions.

Tickets are $25. Proceeds will benefit the LEAD Program at ENC. The event is being sponsored by the LEAD Program Alumni Association.

W. Quincy Man Held For Observation In Triple Family Murders

Park's mother Sally died of cancer in 1992.

At the murder scene, investigators also found rambling sentences on the walls of Kathy's bedroom they believe Park wrote with colored markers.

On Tuesday, Mayor James Sheets expressed his condolences to loved ones of the family on behalf of the city.

"It's a shock," said Sheets. "It's not something that any community adjusts to very easily. It's just very unsettling. It seems senseless.

"We are, in a very real sense, a very grieving city over those deaths."

City To Sponsor First Annual Senior Conference Saturday

The first annual Senior Conference sponsored by the City of Quincy will be held Saturday from 8:30 to 1:30 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll School, 225 Fenno St., Wollaston.

More than 200 Quincy senior citizens will attend the conference, which is entitled "Focus on Aging: Serving Quincy's Senior Population."

Participants will include civic, state, clergy, social service, fitness, nutrition, housing, safety and health care officials.

Mayor James Sheets said the conference is designed to provide information that will enable seniors to live better, eat better, exercise better, and, in general, expand all dimensions of their lives. It will be a positive experience on which to build a richer and more meaningful life, he said.

The keynote address will be given by Franklin Ollivierre, secretary of the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs. Other speakers will include Mayor Michael Traficante of Cranston, R.I.; Diane Lopes, commissioner of the Boston Commission on Elder Affairs; and Elsie Frank, president of the Massachusetts Association of Older Americans.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. The keynote address will be given at 9:30 a.m. in the Sawyer Media Center. Thirteen varied workshops will be held during the morning followed by a 12:30 p.m. luncheon at which Sheets will be the featured speaker.

The conference, the first of its kind sponsored by a Massachusetts city, is co-sponsored by the Quincy Council on Aging and the Quincy Commission on the Family. Co-chairpersons are Brian Buckley, executive director of the Council on Aging, and Linda Stice, executive director of the Family Commission.

DeWolfe New England Forms Special Partnership

DeWolfe New England has formed a special partnership with The New England Home For Little Wanderers.

DeWolfe selected the New England Home as the organizations to receive its financial and volunteer support through 1996 and into the future.

The New England Home for Little Wanderers originated in 1865 out of a need to help misplaced children who were wandering the streets due to hardships caused by the Civil War.

Today, the children served by The Home are very different from those "little wanderers", yet they are in one way very similar: they need a stable, nurturing environment in which to overcome the problems they face and achieve their emotional social and educational potential.

In addition to the financial gifts pledged on behalf of DeWolfe New England, Dick DeWolfe, CEO, has pledged to encourage staff participation in The Home's volunteer projects, service days, special events and campaigns each season.

The commitment to support The New England Home for Little Wanderers will be shared by 1800 employees - administrators, agents and assistants alike. In the spirit of individual participation, Dick DeWolfe has become a member of The Home's Board of Directors and will serve on the Development Committee to aid fundraising and public relations efforts. Mr. DeWolfe spoke of his company's intent at his first Board meeting on Jan. 2.

"The alliance of DeWolfe New England with The New England Home for Little Wanderers is being forged for the express purpose of providing a new source of continuing support for The Home while working towards expanding the reach and visibility of its programs."

Since that time, DeWolfe Associates, employees, family and friends have gladly jumped on the bandwagon. DeWolfe offices have had raffles, volleyball games and book drives to benefit The Home. DeWolfe's most significant contribution to date has been the sponsorship of The Homes "Waltham House", soon to be renamed in honor of DeWolfe's involvement.

The House is a residential and day school program located in Waltham. The program is committed to serving adolescent girls and boys who have severe emotional, behavioral, academic and family problems. The house focuses on improving the children's functioning in their families, schools and communities.

Those seeking more information on how to help are asked to call the Quincy DeWolfe office at 471-0005.

Flynn &. Co. Orchestrates Sale For New Hibernia Bank Branch

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc., a full-service real estate firm specializing in commercial real estate, recently orchestrated the sale of land located on Franklin Street, Quincy, for Hibernia Savings Bank's soon-to-be-opened eighth branch office.

Construction is under way, and the branch is scheduled to open later this year. Located at 63 Franklin St., the new structure will consist of five teller stations, an ATM vestibule, and a drive-through.

"This is definitely a winning situation for everyone," said Dan Flynn, president of Flynn & Co. "Not only was it a great partnership for Hibernia and Flynn & Co., but the real winners will be the residents of Quincy, who will enjoy the convenience and professionalism of a top-notch financial institution."

A Home's Energy Efficiency Is Part Of Its Price

(NAPS)—While size, livability and location are all important factors when looking for a home, don't overlook what it costs to heat and cool. Simply put, the more energy efficient it is, the more you'll be able to afford in mortgage payments.

Four basic areas of energy efficiency you should examine include:

- Optimum amounts of insulation, caulking and weatherstripping.
- Energy efficient windows and doors.
- A high-efficiency heating and cooling system.
- Energy efficient lighting and appliances.

Today, a properly insulated home not only helps you save on your fuel bills, it can help to improve indoor comfort. Many experts recommend that quality insulation such as CertainTeed Building Insulation or InsulSafe III® Blown-In Fiber Glass should be installed to today's recommended R-values in the attic and sidewalls. Insulation should also be installed in the floors, garages and crawlspaces and around the water heater, pipes and within and around ducts.

Energy-savers such as the proper amount of insulation in the attic, floors, garage and around the water heater will save you money 365 days a year.

In the area of windows and doors, look for energy-efficient models like low-e double paned windows, which provide three times the efficiency of single pane glass for added energy savings.

Perhaps most important in terms of your annual energy bills, is your central heating and cooling system. Have a professional evaluate or test the system. In addition, look for oil and gas furnace modifications such as higher efficiency burners and automatic electronic thermostats.

Lastly, but still important are the lighting and appliances in a home. Perhaps the best way to evaluate the efficiency of major appliances, such as dishwashers, waterheaters and furnaces, is to look for the bright ENERGY GUIDE label to help you determine the annual operating costs.

In the area of lighting, remember that a 40-watt fluorescent bulb gives off more light than a 100-watt incandescent bulb at half the energy costs.

North Quincy's First Test Friday At Stoughton

McPhee: Lines Hold Key To Raiders' Season

By LIAM FITZGERALD

With four new starters on the offensive line and three on the defensive line, how well the North Quincy football team fares this season hinges on how quickly the lines gel and work as a cohesive unit.

North head coach Ken McPhee said the play of the two lines is his "major concentration" heading into Friday night's season opener at non-league opponent Stoughton.

"We're young at those positions, and we have a lot of work to do," said McPhee, in his 15th year as North's head coach. "They're working hard in practice, and I think we'll be O.K."

Offensively, McPhee said the Red Raiders' strengths lie in their skill positions, including senior quarterback Tom Coughlin, senior tri-captain tailback Brian Walsh, junior fullback Mike Powers, senior tri-captain tight end Charlie Plaskasovitis and senior wide receivers Jim Finn, Tim Semchenko and junior Pat Egan.

BRIAN WALSH, heading upfield in a scrimmage against Marshfield, will be North Quincy's go-to guy in the backfield this season. Walsh, a senior tri-captain, also starts at linebacker for the Red Raiders. (Quincy Sun Photo /Robert Bosworth)

Coughlin, who replaces the departed J.R. Rendle, has not played the position in a varsity game, but drew the praise of McPhee for his efforts leading up to Friday's opener.

"Tom's done a pretty good job," said McPhee. "So far, he has looked real good. He's tall (6-3), has a strong arm and is a good athlete. He dominates at power forward on the basketball team with his athleticism. He threw the ball well in the first two scrimmages. He has some time to season, and I think he'll be a good one."

North's offense will revolve around Walsh, a 5-7, 175-pound sparkplug who rushed for 800 yards last season before an injury knocked him out of action. McPhee cannot say enough good things about the senior tailback, noting that opponents will focus on stopping him and forcing the Red Raiders to use other options offensively.

"He's just been immense," said McPhee. "He gains yards even without blocking sometimes. Everyone is going to try and take him out of the offense, so we may use him as a decoy, maybe give it to the fullback, the wingback, and pass the ball, too. We've been running the ball effectively, and we'll be setting up the pass with the run, using some play action, too."

Spotting Walsh off the bench will be junior tailback Jason Turner (5-9, 165), who McPhee said will see a lot of action this season.

Another player McPhee is high on is newcomer Mike Powers, a 6-1, 180-pound junior who will start

Over 2,500 Participants Expected

Degan Memorial Road Races, Fun Walk Sunday

The fourth annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race will take place Sunday in Quincy.

The event includes 10K and 5K road races, a 5K run/fun walk and new this year, a senior citizen walk.

The races, which start at 10 a.m., begin and end at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The event is held in honor of Degan, the Quincy native who was killed in the line of duty while serving with the U.S. Federal Marshal Service in August 1992.

Race Chairman Dan Stock said he expects more than 2,500 participants this year, which would double the number of runners who competed last year. The Degan family will also participate.

"With many law enforcement agencies and military personnel coming the day of the race from different parts of the country, we anticipate over 2,500 runners," Stock said.

Post-race refreshments will be provided for all registered runners and their families. Awards and t-shirts will be presented and family post-race activities will include clowns, face painting, McGruff the Crime Dog, among others.

Entertainment for all runners and spectators will be provided by DJ. Larry Links. A prize drawing will be held during the race.

Mayor James Sheets will start the race and Gov. William Weld plans to participate again this year.

Proceeds will go to Quincy D.A.R.E., Quincy youth programs and U.S.M.C. charities. Before serving as a deputy in the Marshal Service, Degan was a lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Marine Corps.

Last year, nearly 1,300 runners endured a torrential downpour and raised $15,000 for Quincy D.A.R.E. and U.S.M.C. charities.

Registration and number pick-up is from 8-9:30 a.m.

at fullback and play an important role in North's offensive scheme.

"He's learning the offense and does a real nice job blocking," said McPhee. "He is a very physical player who gets the job done."

Plaskasovitis (6-0, 190), one of North's handful of veterans, returns as the starting tight end. McPhee calls him "one of the best in the league--he has the whole package."

The Red Raiders are also experienced at the wide receiver position, giving Coughlin a number of reliable players to look for with his passes. Finn (6-2, 175), Semchenko (5-8,160) and Egan (6-1, 170) will be the principle receivers.

On the young, inexperienced offensive line, senior tri-captain Norm Connell (6-1, 215) represents North's only returning starter on the line.

With the departure of starting offensive linemen Paul Picciano, Joe McCarthy, Steve Steniford and Eric Malames, North must replace these players with linemen who have not played a down at the varsity level.

Connell, a right guard last season, will man one of the offensive guard positions and junior Brian Wells (5-9, 175) starts at the other guard spot. Senior Todd Deboer (6-3, 260) and junior Kevin Bowes (6-3, 215) start their first games at offensive tackle and senior Michael Leeber (6-2, 210) will be North's starting center.

SENIOR QUARTERBACK Tom Coughlin, 6-3, 205 pounds, will start his first game at quarterback when North Quincy opens its season at non-league foe Stoughton Friday at 7 p.m. Stoughton, 8-2 last season, returns many of its skill positions, including talented running back Jay McNamara.

This group will be responsible for creating holes for Walsh and the other backs to run through, and protecting Coughlin from the oncoming rush long enough for him to locate an open receiver.

"They're having a little trouble identifying defenses, and that will happen with a young group," said McPhee. "As the season goes on, they will improve as they gain experience."

On the other side of the ball, McPhee said his major concern lies with the two starting defensive tackles, Deboer and Bowes, who will be starting their first game Friday night. Newcomer Chuck O'Brian will come off the bench, said McPhee, to spell the starters.

The strength of the defense appears to be the defensive end position, with Connell returning at one end and Plaskasovitis returning at the end slot. Also expected to see a good amount of action is sophomore Craig Bigham (6-1, 195).

"The ends did a heck of a job last season, and we hope for more of the same this year," said McPhee.

Wells will start at nose guard, filling the spot left vacant by the departure of tri-captain Picciano.

Walsh, who played defensive end in 1995, joins sophomore Frank McNamara (5-11, 180) as North's starting linebackers. McPhee said he is counting on Walsh to "anchor us big time."

The secondary, McPhee said, is "new, not young." Six players--Finn, Powers, Semchenko, Egan, sophomore Chris Bregoli (5-8, 185) and senior Sean O'Toole (5-8, 160) will battle for the four defensive back spots. According to McPhee, either Egan or Semchenko will start at free safety. Other possible starters include Bregoli at the weak corner, Finn at the other corner and Powers at strong safety.

The Red Raiders' new defenders will be tested right away against Stoughton, which will rely on talented tailback Jay McNamara to put points on the board. If North is to have a chance to win the game, McNamara must be stopped, said McPhee.

"They're a formidable opponent, with a lot of their skill position back from an 8-2 team last year," said McPhee. "They have a tremendous tailback in Jay McNamara. We want to stop him, although I don't know if anyone will stop him. He's like Walsh--a little quicker, but not as strong. We want to make them beat us another way--make them throw the ball."

After Friday's opener, the Red Raiders open their Old Colony League schedule next Friday at 7 p.m. at Falmouth, which boasts outstanding running back Willie Ford. Two other league opponents, Bridgewater-Raynham and Barnstable, were ranked in the top 10 in The Boston Globe preseason high school poll.

None of this, however, affects how McPhee approaches the upcoming season. He expects every game to be a battle, especially against the elite teams in the league.

"It's going to be a fight every game, but that's what you want to play," he said. "It's not a cupcake schedule. When we won the Super Bowl a few years ago, most of our tough games came in the regular season, against teams in our league."

But how will North, with its strengths at the skill positions, fare against this stiff competition?

"We'll be a lot more competitive than in the past," said McPhee. We've got some catalysts--Walsh, Plaskasovitis and others, types who can make the big play, make the big hit. Everyone's working hard and the effort has been very good. That's all you can ask for."

Quincy Rallies, But Late Field Goal Lifts Stang

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Trailing by 15 late in the game, Quincy rallied to take a one-point lead, only to watch it slip away as Bishop Stang kicker Scott Lima booted a 35-yard field goal with eight seconds to play to lift the host Spartans, 24-22.

Following the tough loss in the season opener, the Presidents (0-1) will look to bounce back when they host non-league opponent Lynn English Friday at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

In Saturday's game in Dartmouth, the Presidents scored 16 points in just 1:35 after falling behind, 21-6, with less than three minutes left to play.

Fullback Tim Santos brought Quincy to within one at 21-20 when he scored on a seven-yard run. Going for two and the lead, Presidents quarterback Mark Glynn kept it and scored, moving Quincy ahead temporarily, 22-21, with one minute to play.

"The kids just came alive and never gave up," said Quincy head coach Peter Chella about the comeback. "What I really liked was the never say die attitude the kids had. They showed it last year against North Quincy and now against Bishop Stang.

"When we took the lead, I thought we were going to win, but we let it get away. It was good to see them come back, but it's not enough if you don't win the game. We gained 311 yards of total offense, and when you do that, you should win the game."

Now trailing for the second time, Stang's John Perry took the kickoff back to his own 41, giving the Spartans good field position with 51.8 seconds left.

On a third and eight from Stang's 43, Spartan quarterback Tom Osuch pitched to running back Jim Connolly, who lofted a halfback option pass that Perry hauled in for a 32-yard gain.

"I'm a little upset with the defense for letting them off the hook," said Chella. "We don't want that to happen again. That pass never should've been completed. We did have coverage, but the kid just read it wrong."

With a first down at Quincy's 25, the Spartans ran two running plays for seven yards, as the clock wound down to 15 seconds. Rather than run another play, the Spartans decided to go for the field goal on third down at Quincy's 18.

Lima then drilled the game-winning field goal from 35 yards away with eight seconds left.

"We called a timeout to try and ice him, but he's a big kid and a good kicker with a really strong leg," said Chella. "It would've been good from another 10 yards away."

Quincy had one final shot from their own 14, but Glynn was sacked as time expired.

"I think if we had another minute, we would have won it," said Chella. "I felt we could throw the ball on them and score--maybe we should have thrown more. We went to the pass when we had to and scored.

"We're not going to be out of too many games this year. We have a very good quarterback, with a wide open offense and receivers who can make the big catches."

The Presidents' comeback began on their first play from scrimmage after Stang scored to go up, 21-6. Taking the snap in the shotgun, Glynn hit Connolly over the middle, and Connolly did the rest, galloping 74 yards for the touchdown. The duo connected again on the two-point conversion to bring Quincy to within a touchdown, 21-14 with just over two minutes to play.

Glynn, a three-year starter, finished with impressive passing numbers: 9 of 14 for 185 yards, one TD and no interceptions.

"Mark's a very good quarterback, and he played a great game," said Chella. "He's very dangerous and is quite mobile. He really reads defenses well. (Quincy offensive coordinator) Bob Noble has done a great job teaching over the past few years."

On the ensuing kickoff, Quincy tried an onside kick, which bounced off Spartan Kyle Harrington and into the hands of Connolly.

"Kevin did a lot of great things for us, including recovering that kick," said Chella "He ran the ball well and also had a good game on defense."

Starting on the Spartans' 49, Glynn drove the Presidents downfield, hooking up with wide receiver John Katsarikas for a 24-yard reception to the Spartan seven. On the next play, Santos took the handoff and rumbled seven yards for the score, followed by Glynn's successful run on the two-point conversion.

"Jeremy Wray made a great block on Santos' touchdown," said Chella. "It was a trap play, and Jeremy not only blocked the linebacker, but he wiped him out completely."

Down 6-0 at the half, the Spartan offense recharged in the second half, scoring on all four of its possessions, including three touchdowns on consecutive drives.

"Their offense came alive in the second half," said Chella. "Whenever we adjusted, they found something else that worked and went with it.

"We were feeling very good after the first half, but they found our weaknesses on defense and exploited them."

For the Presidents, their defensive weaknesses were a result of injuries to two key starters: defensive tackle Don Mc-Carthy and linebacker Jon Ryan.

McCarthy, a 6-4 275-pound senior, injured a shoulder in practice last Thursday and missed the opener. Chella said the injury was minor, adding that McCarthy told Chella he will be ready to play Friday against Lynn English.

Ryan's injury occurred in the first quarter of the game, when he injured a shoulder and did not return. Chella said Ryan's injury was not serious, adding that he should be available for Friday's game.

To open the third quarter, the Spartans took the kickoff 83 yards and went ahead, 7-6, on Curtis' Tubbs one-yard scoring run. The drive, which chewed up 8:43, was dominated by Tubbs, who collected 71 yards on 10 carries.

"That first drive reminded me of a rugby scrum," said Chella. "It took up most of the third quarter; they came at us with power, power, power. We get small quick after our first team, and they just pushed us back."

On their next drive, the Spartans took advantage of a 10-yard punt off the side of Glynn's foot, starting their drive at Quincy's 40. On the sixth play of the drive, running back Leonard Rocha scampered 27 yards untouched to increase the Spartans' lead to 14-6 with 7:29 left in the game.

After sacking Glynn and forcing Quincy to punt again, Stang started their next scoring drive from the Presidents' 49. On a big third and seven play at the 46, Rocha barreled his way to a 14-yard pickup and a first down, keeping the drive alive and the clock ticking.

Two plays later, Osuch tucked the ball away and eluded Quincy's defense for a 24-yard scoring romp. After the extra point, Stang led, 21-6, with 2:30 to play and appeared to have the game in hand, before the Presidents rallied and took the lead--temporarily.

The Presidents' offense was impressive early, taking the opening kickoff 80 yards, culminating on Connolly's two-yard scoring run. The key play of the long drive (15 plays in 8:05) was a 38-yard sliding catch by Mark Belanger at Stang's four. Two plays later, Connolly scored on a two-yard run over left tackle. Tim Santos' extra point sailed wide and Quincy led, 6-0, with 2:55 left in the opening quarter.

"The first drive was a great drive," said Chella. "We went in right off the bat and scored. I thought, 'this is good, we're going to do a lot of good things today,' but they (Bishop Stang) showed a lot of poise, hung in there and won."

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Thank God for memory, that most gracious artist, who softens the hard things in our life, and makes more beautiful, the beautiful ones.

As we grow older, memory becomes a treasure storehouse. The high lights of our years are there . . . Vivid pictures of beauties appreciated. The heartwarming reminiscences of friends we've known . . . The tender thoughts of family and events that have happened . . . The satisfaction of recalling work well done . . . The feeling that we have meant something to those who meant so much to us . . . Highlights stored in memory's treasure house to be recalled at will to encourage and sustain us whe n we need them . . .

"Memory is a capricious and arbitrary creature. You never can tell what pebble she will pick up from the shore of life to keep among her treasures, or what inconspicuous flower of the field she will preserve as the symbol of "thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears." . . . And yet, I do not doubt that the most important things are always the best remembered." - Henry Van Dyke

Your Social Security

The 'Awkward' Years

By CAROL BOYLE

You could call them the "awkward years"—from age 18-21. You're old enough to vote, but you're not really considered an adult. You're too old to be covered by your parents' health insurance,, and you probably don't have disability insurance on your own. Or do you? You may have Social Security disability protection.

If you're like many young people, you've had a part-time job since you began high school. Maybe you worked in the neighborhood video store or at a local restaurant. If you've worked for at least 18 months and Social Security was withheld from your salary, you could be eligible for benefits if you should become severely disabled even at your young age.

In the best of worlds, you'll never need disability benefits. But accidents do happen, and frequently they happen to young people. It's important for you to know that the Social Security tax that's deducted from your paycheck is protecting you right now. It's also important to know that Social Security coverage protects you and your family throughout your working life. And it's there when you retire.

It's a good idea to check your earnings record to make sure all of your earnings were reported accurately. Call our toll-free number 1-800-772-1213 at anytime (24 hours a day, including weekends and holidays) and ask for a form SSA-7004 Request for Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement. You will receive your statement in 4-6 weeks after you complete the form and return it to Social Security. Internet users can get the form at http://www.ssa.gov.

(Carol Boyle is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Peace Pole Dedication At Bethany Sunday

A ceremony will be held Sunday at 11:30 a.m. to dedicate the Peace Pole that Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy Center recently placed near its Coddington Street entrance.

The Peace Pole Project was initiated in 1976 as an outgrowth of the World Peace Prayer Society. The society's message is "May Peace Prevail on Earth."

More than 100,000 Peace Poles have been dedicated as monuments of peace. They serve as silent prayers and visual tools to spread the Prayer Society's message.

Bethany's Peace Pole expresses the message in English, Hebrew, Spanish and Chinese. Matthew Chen, a student at Quincy High School, did the Chinese lettering.

The ceremony will begin with a service in the sanctuary including a welcome by Rev. George Hodgkins, several peace songs, and prayer offerings by the invited guests including city, religious and civic leaders. Following the ceremony, the congregation and guests will proceed to the Peace Pole.

Prior to the ceremony, attendees will be given stones to inscribe an appropriate saying for the event. The stones will be laid at the base of the Peace Pole after the dedication.

In addition to the four language inscriptions, the Peace Pole will contain a dedication to the founders of Bethany's Peace Committee, Lena Foster and Helen Crofts.

On Thursday, Sept. 26 from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Bethany will hold its third annual Peace Prayer Vigil as an adjunct to the Peace Pole ceremony. The public is invited to attend and pray for peace in the Bethany Chapel.

First Presbyterian

Rev. Stan C. Johnson, pastor, will preach at the 11 a.m. worship service Sunday at First Presbyterian Church, 270 Franklin St., South Quincy.

The choir will be directed by Allen Thomas.

Sunday activities begin with prayer at 9:15 a.m. and Sunday School at 9:30 a.m. The church is wheelchair accessible and child care provided.

A Young Sang service is held Sundays at 2 p.m.

Quincy Point Congregational

Reunion Sunday will be observed at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

Rev. Fred Atwood-Lyon, pastor, will preach on "Reunion And Covenant: Two Sides Of The Same Coin." Deacon Caryl Dreghorn will served as liturgist and lay reader.

Rev. Atwood-Lyon will provide "Time With the Children and Young People" before they go to Church School classes.

Following worship, the annual "Welcome Back Brunch" will be hosted by the Diaconate Committee in the social hall. For reservations, call the church office at 773-6424.

Church School classes for infants through Grade 9 are held from 10 to 11:10 a.m. To register children, call the church office.

United First Parish

Dr. Sheldon W. Bennett, minister, will preach on "Spiritual Paths" at the 10:30 a.m. worship service Sunday at United First Parish Church (Unitarian Universalist), 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

A child dedication ceremony will be held during the Children's Time at the beginning of the service. Rev. Christine Jaronski, religious educator, and Hank Peirce, ministerial intern, will participate.

Bethany Congregational

Rev. George Hodgkins, pastor, will preach on "What Is A Real Church, Part I: Growing In Faith And Love" at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Bethany Congregational Church, Spear and Coddington Sts., Quincy Center.

Scripture reader will be Richard Sprague. Church School children will attend the early part of worship before going to class.

Following worship, a fellowship hour will be hosted by Bea Siddens and Janice Weinberger.

Memorial Congregational

Rev. William Hamilton will lead the 9:30 a.m. worship service Sunday at Memorial Congregational Church (UCC), Newbury Ave. and Sagamore St., North Quincy.

Greeter will be Dotti Graham. Duty deacon is Andrea Solmonte. Kits for Kids items for the week are six unsharpened pencils and one 2 1/2-inch eraser.

Robert Noble Completes Citizens Legislative Seminar

Robert Noble of Quincy recently completed the Citizens Legislative Seminar at the State House in Boston.

Noble was invited to attend the seminar by Sen. Michael Morrissey, also of Quincy.

The Citizens' Legislative Seminar series was established in 1976 through a joint effort of the Massachusetts State Senate and the University of Massachusetts. Senate President Thomas Birmingham is the sponsor of the series. Under his auspices, the program is administered by the Senate Legislative Education Office.

Participants are selected from a wide variety of fields representing both the public and private sectors. Once a week, for six consecutive weeks, 60 participants gather together in the Senate President's Office for a three-hour period to examine the legislative process.

The spring session of the seminar ran from March 28 to May 2. It was an 18-hour program featuring presentations by a number of legislators including Birmingham and House Speaker Thomas Finneran. Participants also met with many other elected officials in smaller discussion groups.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS

The Department of Public Works for the City of Quincy, Massachusetts will receive sealed bids for Newport Avenue Extension Roadway Improvements, Quincy, Massachusetts, until 10:00 a.m. local time on Monday, September 30, 1996, at the Office of the Commissioner of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, Massachusetts 02169, at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The work under this Contract consists of furnishing all necessary labor, material, and equipment required to reconstruct Newport Avenue Extension from Hancock Street to Squantum Street with necessary earthwork and drainage improvements in the City of Quincy.

The work includes, but is not limited to, reconstruction of existing roadways, construction of bituminous concrete pavement, excavation, removal of subgrade material and replacement with lightweight fill, removal and resetting of existing granite curb, installation of new granite curb, construction of bituminous concrete sidewalk, upgrading of traffic signals at three locations, installing and maintaining temporary traffic signals at three locations, furnishing and installing electrical conduit, cable and pull boxes and the installation of a new storm drainage system. The work also includes furnishing and installing signs and pavement markings, landscaping, the provision of safety controls and safety signing for construction operations and all other items of any character whatsoever necessary for the completion of the work, as specified or as shown.

A copy of the contract documents for the work may be obtained from the office of EARTH TECH, 196 Baker Avenue, Concord, Massachusetts 01742 upon the deposit of $35.00 in cash or check made payable to EARTH TECH. Contract documents will be mailed to prospective bidders upon receipt of a separate check for $15.00 made payable to EARTH TECH, which will not be refunded. Deposits and mail fees that are sent to EARTH TECH by mail, Federal Express, UPS or any type of carrier shall be addressed to the attention of: Debbie Yelle. Such deposits will be refunded if the contract documents are returned in good condition to the issuing office, postpaid if mailed, within thirty days after the opening of bids.

The contract documents may be examined during business hours from 8:30 a.m. to noon and from 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the following locations:

EARTH TECH
196 Baker Avenue
Concord, MA 01742

Dodge Reports
24 Hartwell Avenue
Lexington, MA 02173

Office of the Commissioner of Public Works
55 Sea Street
Quincy, Massachusetts 02169

Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid security in the amount of five percent of the value of the bid in the form described in the Information for Bidders.

A performance bond and a payment bond, each in the amount of 100 percent of the contract price, will be required in the form described in the Information for Bidders.

Bidders attention is called to the requirements as to conditions of employment to be observed, minimum state wage rates to be paid and payroll submission requirements under the contract.

No bidder may withdraw his bid within 60 days after the actual date of the bid opening.

Complete instructions for filing Bids are included in the Information for Bidders.

Equal Employment Opportunity - Workforce, Minority Business Enterprise (MBE) and Women's Business Enterprise (WBE) policies of the City of Quincy, Massachusetts are applicable to this contract. The goals for this project are:

1. The Contractor and Subcontractors shall maintain on this project a not less than 10 percent ratio of minority employee and not less than 6.9 percent ratio of women employee manhours to total manhours in each job category.
2. A minimum of ten (10) percent MBE participation and five (5) percent WBE participation by State-Certified MBE/WBEs. The bidder shall submit completed MBE;WBE forms included in the Form for General Bid. See Document 00865, Special Conditions - City of Quincy's EEO Requirements, for more information.

The BIDDER certifies he will comply with City of Quincy workforce ratios and specific affirmative action steps contained above.

Prequalification is required. Contractors intending to bid on this project must first obtain Form R109 "Requires for Proposal Forms" (for determination of Contractor's Prequalification) from the State's Contract Engineer, Massachusetts Highway Department, Room 7210, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, Massachusetts, which form must be completed and submitted to the Contract Engineer for approval. Bidders shall be required to submit an "Approval for Proposal Form" prior to obtaining an "official" bid document.

The more stringent Equal Employment Opportunity - Workforce, MBE and WBE policies of the City of Quincy shall prevail.

The City of Quincy has residency requirements for workers which provides for local preference in hiring on City supported construction projects. See Document 00858 - Residency for City Supported Construction Projects, of this project manual.

The Owner may waive any informalities or minor defects, or reject any or all bids if it is in the best interest of the City of Quincy to do so.

New Voting Machines A Hit In Debut

One of the big winners in Quincy Tuesday was the new optical scan voting system which made an impressive debut.

The vote was completely tallied by 8:49 p.m.--just 49 minutes after the polls closed.

It may have been the fastest count ever in an election in Quincy.

"We probably could have wrapped it up by 8:30 if it weren't for the write-ins," said City Clerk Joseph Shea.

"We had a glitch or two but it went off very well considering this was the first time we used the new equipment.

"We're very happy over the way it went."

"I got mine with all the bells and whistles." —Glen Seibel

Every used car we sell comes along with the same courteous treatment we give our new car customers. It makes for a pretty stress-free experience. And when you're not stressed, you're free to concentrate on the really important stuff–like finding a used car with leather, a sunroof and a perfect stereo, for example. Hope to see you soon.

Site Work Begins For Wal-Mart

Preliminary site work has begun for the planned Wal-Mart store that will become part of the Granite Crossing shopping center on Falls Blvd.

D.J. MacKinnon, president of Atlantic Development in Hingham, the project developer said the work has been approved by the city.

"They have been given a permit, and they have engaged a contractor who is doing the preliminary site work," he said. "They have not yet received a permit to begin blasting or to build the store."

The preliminary work involves primarily the removal of rock from the site, he added.

MacKinnon said blasting hopefully will begin in the next month and a groundbreaking also could take place somewhere in that time period. Construction of the store could begin as early as late winter, he said.

MacKinnon said Wal-Mart should open the new store sometime next summer.

The Granite Crossing project, which also includes a Roche Bros. Supermarket that already has been built, received approval from the City Council in late 1994.

30-Day Suspension

Board Hits Point Pub Again

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board has come down hard on the Point Pub, 536 Washington St. for the second time in seven months.

The board Tuesday unanimously voted to close the pub for 30 days for failing to properly handle a disturbance there June 5 while on probation..

In February, the drinking spot was shut down for 21 days and placed on probation for two years for seven violations involving drugs.

At that time, Police Chief Francis Mullen said any violation within the two years would result in the revocation of the liquor license.

Owners Paul Ricciarelli and William Cappola told a different story than the couple involved in the disturbance. Cappola said the women was acting in an "unladylike manner" and she was told to leave the premises. She refused until her boyfriend entered the pub and then they finally left.

Cappola told the board that her boyfriend apologized to him because of her behavior. He said that the subject of her being beaten at the pub were false. The women claimed she was hurt at the pub.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi represented the couple and urged the board

Squantum Pumping Station Meeting At City Hall

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA), along with City Councillors Bruce Ayers and Stephen Durkin, invite residents to attend a neighborhood meeting tonight (Thursday).

The meeting will discuss the Squantum Pumping Station Force Main Rehabilitation Project and. provide details of the Squantum Force Main Rehabilitation. Comments and questions by residents are welcomed.

The meeting will take place at 7 p.m. at Quincy City Hall, second floor conference room, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy.

The existing force main, constructed in 1972 will be rehabilitated. The main is located on Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) property and parallels Wollaston Beach from East Squantum St. to Fenno St. Construction is scheduled to begin in fall 1997.

For more information, call Community Relations Coordinator Jose Vincenty, MWRA Public Affairs, at 241-6057.

Recounts In Seven Communities

Delahunt Sees No Change In Outcome

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Recounts in the close vote for the 10th Congressional District seat are expected to begin this week in seven communities where all but one use the punch-card system and where the number of blanks were high.

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt of Quincy, who ran a scant 266 votes behind Philip Johnston of Marshfield in the Democratic primary, requested the recounts but said he does not think they will change the final outcome.

Delahunt told The Sun Tuesday that he has already thrown his support to Johnston.

"The important thing is that the seat remain a Democratic seat," he said.

The seat is being vacated by Gerry Studds who is retiring. The 10th District extends from Quincy to Cape Cod and Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket.

The recounts will officially decide whether Johnston or Delahunt will face Republican Edward Teague of Yarmouth who was the clear-cut winner of his party's nomination last week.

Delahunt has asked for recounts in Weymouth, Brockton, Abington, Rockland, Whitman, Hanover and Wellfleet. All but Wellfleet use the punch-card system which this year Quincy abandoned in favor of the newer optical scan system.

Delahunt said he called for the recounts because of what he considers to be glaring problems with the punch-card system.

Often, he said, voters think they have properly punched the card with a stylus but don't do it hard enough for the vote to register.

"I have grave concerns about the punch-card system," he said. "There's too many questions surrounding it. I suspect that in many instances, people went to the polls and their vote didn't count."

Delahunt said Weymouth is the prime example. While between 4,600 and 4,700 voters in the town went to the polls, about 1,100 ballots were seemingly left blank when it came to the 10th Congressional race, he said.

"Think about the Clinton To Visit Quincy Saturday?

Local Democrat circles were abuzz with speculation this week that President Clinton might visit Quincy Saturday.

Clinton is in the New England area and will attend a fund-raiser for Senator John Kerry Friday night at the FleetCenter in Boston.

According to the speculation he will remain in the area and might visit Quincy or Brockton Saturday with a "major announcement."

For Quincy, the announcement could be the final green-light for the reopening of the Fore River Shipyard, according to the speculation.

The reports continued to circulate at The Sun's press time Tuesday but there was no official confirmation from the Clinton staff.

weather that day," he said. "It was like a monsoon, a hurricane. If you live in Weymouth and you go to vote on a day like that, why would you leave the only contested race blank? It doesn't make any sense.

"I want to ensure the integrity of the election process. This system is susceptible to major errors, and other systems should be looked at in those communities."

Delahunt said he also asked for a recount in Wellfleet because there was some confusion as to how many votes each of the candidates had received.

P.J. O'Sullivan, Delahunt's spokesman, said supporters of the district attorney had to collect 10 signatures from registered Democrats in each precinct in all of the seven communities in order for the recounts to be held. For instance, since there are 18 precincts in Weymouth, 180 signatures from the town were required.

John Menz Jr. Assigned To St. Boniface

Fire Lieutenant Ordained Deacon By Cardinal Law

By MICHAEL WHALEN

For many years, Lt. John Menz Jr. of the Quincy Fire Department has been an active member of the Catholic community.

Menz, 55, a lifelong resident of Houghs Neck, has served as a religion teacher, Eucharistic minister, lector and in other capacities, mainly for Most Blessed Sacrament Church.

But on Sept. 14, Menz took an even greater leap of faith when he was ordained a deacon along with 16 other men by JOHN MENZ JR.

Cardinal Bernard Law in Boston. He has been assigned to serve at nearby St. Boniface Church in Germantown.

Menz said he was thinking about the possibility of entering the Diaconate several years ago when he learned St. Boniface was among the churches looking for a deacon.

"I just felt called to a greater service in the Church and in the community," he said. "The Lord was pulling me in this direction toward the Diaconate."

After receiving the sponsorship of Fr. Richard DeVeer, pastor of St. Boniface and approval from Bishop Daniel Hart, Menz then underwent more than six months of psychological training and testing--a standard procedure for candidates--and four years of formal training before his ordination.

Part of his training included a six-month internship at Faulkner Hospital in Jamaica Plain. He also was involved in prison and hospital ministry at the Braintree Alternate Center, something he will continue to do.

Menz had no idea where the Cardinal would assign him, but was happy when he found out where he would be going.

"I almost fell off the chair," he said with a laugh. "I could have been sent anywhere. I was thrilled to find out it was St. Boniface."

His first days as a deacon have been active. Menz covered several Masses over the weekend and also helped kick off the Teen Lifeguard Program, a joint effort between St. Boniface and Most Blessed Sacrament. And on Sunday, he officiated at his first Baptism at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Merrymount.

"It's been very exciting," he said.

Menz, a 32-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department, has served as a lieutenant for 15 years. A trained EMT (emergency medical technician), he serves both as the department's hazardous materials officer and its designated infectious disease officer.

He also is past president of Quincy Firefighters Association Local 792.

Menz comes from a family of Quincy firefighters. His father, John Sr., is a retired deputy fire chief who served as an administrative assistant to former Fire Chief Edward Barry and his brother, George, is a firefighter and EMT.

Menz lives with his wife, Eileen, a registered nurse. They have three children: Christine, 26; John III, 24 and James, 21.

Crane Building Receives $3.5 Million State Grant

Bond Issue Next Step For Library Addition

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets has vowed to send a bond issue for the balance of a planned $10.7 million expansion of the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center to the City Council for approval.

The project officially became a reality last week when the library received a state grant of approximately $3.5 million. Sheets said a bond issue totaling about $6 million probably will be sent to the council in January, while another $1 million or so of the construction cost will be collected through fund-raising.

Several councillors already have expressed support of the project. Three council members--Councillors Timothy Cahill and Paul Harold and Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott--were in attendance at the press conference at which the grant was announced.

Quincy Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said if all goes according to plan, a groundbreaking for the 35,000-square-foot addition will be held next fall and construction will be completed in 1999. Richard Bertman of Childs, Bertman and Tseckares of Boston, the architects of the project, said the firm will begin working immediately on the next phase of their plans.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR Ann McLaughlin and Mayor James Sheets read letter from the state Board of Library Commissioners announcing that the Thomas Crane Public Library has received a grant of $3,495,291 for a planned addition during recent press conference.

Sheets called the grant "a momentous occasion" for both the library and the city.

"It is fully my intention to move this project forward in a timely manner," he said. "The project will forever alter the direction and the course of the library. This will live beyond all of us.

"This is a tremendous day in the history of the City of Quincy, and an even greater day in the history of the Thomas Crane Public Library."

Library Director Ann McLaughlin could not contain her excitement about the grant.

"I am ecstatic," said McLaughlin. "I'll never forget how bad I felt at this time last year. This time,

Fire Causes $10,000 Damage At Amelia's

The popular Marina Bay restaurant Amelia's at 305 Victory Rd., was still closed at press time following a fire last Friday night that caused an estimated $10,000 damage.

Michelle Barrett, manager of the restaurant, said the establishment would reopen "hopefully Wednesday or Thursday."

Fire officials said the blaze started in a kitchen ventilation duct at 8:41 p.m. No customers or worked were injured, but firefighter Edward McGuinness was treated and released at Quincy Hospital for heat exhaustion.

Officials said the fire could have been started by electrical wiring or by heat from the kitchen stove that caused aging fire boards behind it to burn.

'Historic Quincy' Prints Available At Hospital

Prints of "Historic Quincy" are being offered for sale throughout the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation and proceeds benefit the hospital.

"Historic Quincy" is an original watercolor lithograph by local artist Bill Beyer. Each lithograph is individually signed and numbered by the artist. The painting depicts an array of historic sites in Quincy, such as the U.S.S. Salem, Granite Railway, the Adams Birthplace and Mansion and many more familiar landmarks. A copy of the framed print is available to view in the gift shop located in the main lobby of the hospital.

Prints are available at a cost of $35 unframed and $125 framed. The framed version is available in a choice of two different frames and mats. Proceeds from the sale of the prints help to enhance health care services at Quincy Hospital.

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

GETTING A CHARGE

At the end of a trial, after both sides have finished presenting their cases, the jury will receive its charge. That is to say that the judge will instruct the jurors on what they are to consider in their deliberations. First, the attorneys from both sides will give their closing arguments, which will sum up the evidence in a final bid to win the jury's favor. Then, the judge will give their jury an explanation of how to apply the relevant law to the evidence that it has heard. In some cases, the jury will be given a list of questions to answer. The jury is only supposed to consider the evidence presented at the trial, but jury members are usually told by the judge that they can use a witness's demeanor to determine if he or she is believable. After that, the jury is sent to deliberate in an attempt to arrive at a verdict.

HINT: While an entire trial is "On the record," a jury's deliberations remain private.

In these days of complex litigation, it is important that you speak with an experienced attorney who can effectively lead you through the steps of a trial. Don't risk losing what you're entitled to because you weren't familiar with every aspect of the law. Our primary concern is for the rights of our clients. If you think you have a personal injury case, call 773-2880 for a free consultation. We're located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

Low Turnout Hurt Delahunt

Just about everyone seems to have a reason or two why Bill Delahunt didn't run away with the 10th Congressional District nomination as expected in last week's Democratic primary.

But apparently overlooked is one big one: Quincy.

DELAHUNT

JOHNSTON

As it stands now, Philip Johnston was the winner in the district by a scant 266-vote margin.

Delahunt is seeking recounts in Weymouth and Brockton where there were unusually high blanks and in other towns hoping to turn it around.

But those recounts might not have been necessary if it hadn't been for Quincy.

And, ironically, State Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin.

Delahunt did well in Quincy with 6,0008 votes or 68.25 percent to Johnston's 1,649 or 18.73 percent.

Well, then, if Delahunt did so well here, how could Quincy be a minus instead of a plus in the overall picture?

Because the turnout here was only 21.8 percent.

There are 27,224 registered Democrats in the city--more than Republicans and unenrolled combined--but there were only 8,988 Democrat ballots cast.

And what's that got to do with Morrissey, Bellotti, Mariano and Tobin?

The four scared off Republicans and were unopposed for re-election.

Contests for state senator and representative bring out a good vote but there were no contests last week and it affected the Quincy turnout.

A bigger turnout here might have given Delahunt a big enough win with no reason for a recount.

GALLAGHER

Kerry and Weld are in a close horse race of their own and Gallagher could be the spoiler, by taking crucial votes away from them.

The Wollaston real estate agent and former Quincy Republican City Committee chairman, took some away from both in Quincy in the state primary election last week. And, she wasn't even on the ballot.

Gallagher got 148 write-in votes: 87 Democratic and 61 Republican.

She will be on the ballot in November as the Conservative Party candidate.

Ian Bowles helped make the 10th Congressional race a tight one. Gallagher could have the same role in the Senate battle.

But, who will she help more or hurt more?

TIM CAHILL and John Gillis were the top vote-getters in Quincy in last week's primary elections.

CAHILL

GILLIS

Cahill was No. 1 in the contested offices, leading the four-man field for Norfolk County treasurer with 6,716 votes or 78.01 percent.

Gillis, former city clerk, was top man in the non-contests, polling 7,387 votes (78.23 percent) for Norfolk County commissioner.

Cahill, who carried the county, will square off against Republican Robert Hall of Needham in November.

CITY COUNCIL PRESIDENT Peter Kolson will try to blow out 50 candles on his birthday cake tonight (Thursday) at a fund-raiser (7 to 10 p.m.) at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, Quarry St.

KOLSON

Tickets are $35 per person and $50 per couple.

Call 773-9368 for more info.

LOUIS CARUSO, who always tried to do his part for a worthy cause, will be honored at a reception tomorrow (Friday) at 10 a.m. in the City Council Chamber.

Mayor James Sheets is proclaiming the day in his honor and there will be special presentations. Councillor Paul Harold is chairing the event.

Caruso, who now lives in Braintree and is fighting illness, is a former Quincy highway and cemetery departments employee and retired in 1989 after 32 years service.

Wonder how many know that he ran for mayor in 1963? He challenged one of Quincy's all-time political powers: Amelio Della Chiesa.

He lost the nomination to Charles Shea who in turn was defeated by Della Chiesa in the final election.

OBSERVATION: There's really nothing more obsolete than a defeated candidate's political sign still sprouting on someone's lawn after the election.

Stop & Shop, QCBPA To Work On Parking Issue

Stop & Shop has agreed to work over the next year with the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association regarding the use of spaces in the parking garage in its downtown headquarters.

Michael McFarland, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, said QCBPA members have expressed concerns regarding spaces in the garage.

McFarland said the QCBPA is concerned because the garage is being sold by the city to Stop & Shop, and the association fears that a limited number of spaces traditionally used by customers of nearby downtown businesses will now be unavailable because of the sale.

Although McFarland could not confirm at press time whether the sale had been finalized, he said the company has agreed to allow the status of the spaces to remain unchanged for a period of one year while a permanent solution is worked out between Stop & Shop and the QCBPA.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1940's view of the old Regent Theater that was located at 440 Hancock St. in Norfolk Downs. Opened in the middle 1920's, the 800 seat theater originally had a much larger marquee than the one shown here. The theater was in operation for about 25 years before closing in the early fifties. The building was then used as the Norfolk Downs branch of the Thomas Crane Library as well as the site of the North Quincy Co-operative Bank. Upstairs was the headquarters of Instron Engineering Corp. which is now in Canton. The upstairs office later became the headquarters for Dunkin Donuts which is now in Randolph. This old building was demolished in the 1970's and the new building on this site has been home to several bank branches since.

Is Quincy A 'Company Town?'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The groundswell of community opposition to Stop & Shop's obtaining a beer and wine license for their new store under construction on Newport Ave. was almost unprecedented.

That opposition had the support of four city councillors, Pat McDermott, Bruce Ayers, Steve Durkin and Mike D'Amico, as well as the Quincy Citizens Association, Montclair Wollaston Neighborhood Association, Quincy's Alcohol Action Group, members of the small business community, children who graduated from the DARE program and so many others from all corners and persuasions.

Stop & Shop's ability to obtain a beer and wine license in absolute defiance of the overwhelming and substantive vocal community opposition is mind boggling. One who claims to be more informed than I explained it to me this way: "It's called 'quid pro quo,' he says. 'This for that.' Stop & Shop has utilized its warehouse of good will (we all know the good things they've done) and its overwhelming influence in this city to steam roll over the community's will." He reminds me, "there's still that money losing municipal garage behind Stop & Shop's headquarters that the city is hoping they'll buy and they are not only the largest employer in the city, but also the largest in this congressional district. Prospective parent company Royal Ahold, N.V. of Denmark is a $27 billion multinational conglomerate." Corporate Power!

Those of you who know American history are perhaps familiar with the phrase "company town" connoting a town developed and owned by the company. There are many who believe in this instance that's what we've become. I'll leave it to you to decide.

If all this sounds bitter, perhaps it is, but there's an ocean of bitterness and anger in this community about this decision. I know. I'm asked about it everywhere I go in this city.

On a personal note, I want to thank publicly the city councillors cited above for supporting us, most especially Pat McDermott for his tireless and fierce advocacy; all who took the time to come to City Hall (especially the kids) to write a letter, make one of the hundreds of phone calls or sign the petition of opposition.

To those still with us on this one, as Yogi Berra once observed "It ain't over 'til it's over." Join in our Taxpayer Appeal to the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission. The merits of this case still need to be heard and addressed. Next stop, Boston.

Strike Vote Set By Shipyard Union

Sept. 26 - Oct. 2
37 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Local 151 President Richard Neal, representing technical workers at the Quincy shipyard scheduled a strike vote following the breakdown of contract talks.

Negotiations with shipyard officials had been going on since Sept. 4, with no offers from the company. The union's request was for a four percent wage increase. The existing contract was scheduled to expire Oct. 1.

Baked Herbed Tomatoes

Before I started to walk the Mall in Braintree, I used to think I would just walk around the place and then go home.

But a couple of friends of mine have joined me in the walk and of course the subject of food always comes up.

My friend Karen gave me today's recipe which she credited one of her volunteers Eleanor from work. If you can still find some garden tomatoes, this recipe is superb.

Baked Herbed Tomatoes

2 medium tomatoes, halved crosswise
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
4 tablespoons bread crumbs
4 basil leaves, shredded
1 teaspoon fresh thyme, oregano or rosemary (or 1/2 teaspoon dried)
2 teaspoons grated parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil freshly ground black pepper

Brush half of the oil over the sides and bottoms of the halved tomatoes. Next brush the tops of the tomatoes with the mustard.

In a small bowl combine cheese, bread crumbs and hers and sprinkle the mixture on top of each tomato. Drizzle the rest of the oil over the tops, add a touch of the ground pepper and bake in a preheated 450 degree oven for 15-20 minutes. It's delicious as a side dish.

IRA LEVIN'S "DEATHTRAP" will be presented by the North Quincy Alumni Theatre Oct. 10-12 and 17-19 at 8 p.m. in the Black Box Theatre at North Quincy High School. The cast includes, from left, Frank Moffett of Braintree, James Ryan of South Boston, Alison Hutchinson of Quincy, Norma Assad of Quincy and Mark Baumhardt of Wakefield. Tickets are available at the door or by calling 984-8998.

'Emily Dickinson' Topic At Crane Library Saturday

"Emily Dickinson and the Language of the Soul," the second program in a four-week humanities series on great American writers, will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The series is co-sponsored by Quincy College and the library.

The program will be presented by Stephen Dooner, a teacher of American and English Literature at Quincy College. He has written articles on such authors as Emerson, Dickinson, Whitman, and Melville. An accomplished actor, Dooner has participated in a library program of dramatized readings from classic horror literature.

Admission is free and refreshments will be served. Remaining writers in the series include Ernest Hemingway Oct. 5 and Louisa May Alcott Oct. 12.

Rummage, Bake Sale At Fenno House Oct. 5

Fenno House, 540 Hancock St., Wollaston, will hold its annual Rummage and Bake Sale Saturday, Oct. 5 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Items for sale will include shoes and boots, clothing and linens, white elephant table, miscellaneous household items and small furniture items. A home baked goods table also will be available and coffee and donuts will be sold.

NQHS Alumni Theatre's 'Deathtrap' Opens Oct. 10

The North Quincy Alumni Theatre will open its 10th season with Ira Levin's "Deathtrap" beginning Thursday, Oct. 10 in the Black Box Theatre at North Quincy High School.

The plot revolves around Sidney Bruhl, a playwright suffering from writer's block, and his scheme to return to success that results in murder and mayhem.

The cast includes Frank Moffett of Braintree, Alison Hutchinson of Quincy, Mark Baumhardt of Wakefield, Norma Assad of Quincy and James Ryan of South Boston.

Show dates are Oct. 10-12 and 17-19. All performances begin at 8 p.m. Free parking is available at the school.

Tickets are $9 for general admission and $7 for students and senior citizens. They may be purchased at the door beginning at 7:15 p.m. each performance night or reserved by calling 984-8998.

Columbus Day Program At Adams Site Oct. 14

The National Park Service, Adams National Historic Site will hold a special program to celebrate Columbus Day on Monday, Oct. 14.

The free program will take place at the Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St., South Quincy from 10 a.m. to noon and again from 2 to 4 p.m.

The program is set in the days of the Revolutionary War. Portraying refugees from British-occupied and war-torn Boston, visitors will assume the roles of colonial crafts and trades people and demonstrate their skills to the patriots in the countryside at the Adams family farm (birthplaces). Following the program, cider and "Liberty Cake" will be available.

Reservations are needed. Space is limited. To reserve a place, call 770-1175.

HN Post, Auxiliary Unit Install Officers

Houghs Neck Legion Post and its Auxiliary Unit officers for 1996-97 recently were installed at the Post Home, 1116 Sea St., by the Norfolk County installation suites.

Mary Timcoe was installed as Post commander. A Marine veteran, she will be serving her third term in that capacity. A mother of nine children, grandmother of 25, and great-grandmother of 10, members of her family were represented at the ceremonies. She succeeds Richard Wainwright, retiring after two years as commander and now installed as adjutant.

Norfolk County Commander James Fratolillo, also a former Houghs Neck Post commander led the installation suite. Also installed were Clarence Gogan and Daniel Shields, senior and junior vice commanders; J. Russell Baratelli, finance officer, William Lydon, chaplain; Charles Henwood, Jr., historian; and Richard Wold, sergeant-at-arms.

Executive committee members installed were Ray LaRue, John Christensen, James Fratolillo, Rick Banks, Robert Gamache, Jim Wright and Al LaMonica.

Auxiliary Unit officers installed by the Norfolk County Auxiliary included Carole Gardner, president for a second term; Thelma Powers and Bev Davis, senior and junior vice presidents; Albie Baratelli, secretary-treasurer; Pat Smart, historian; Jane Allington, chaplain; and Sue Picard, sergeant-at-arms. Executive board members are Linda Wright, Tina Powers, Joan Gogan, Katie Griffin and Sandy Gagne.

City Council President Peter Kolson, representing Mayor James Sheets and the city as guest speaker, congratulated the officers. Other speakers were state Sen. Michael Morrissey, City Councillor Paul Harold, and Quincy Veterans Services Director, Henry Bradley who asked those present to urge legislators to support the flag amendment, and to continue their support of veterans in hospitals.

it's a very sweet victory."

The library was denied a request for a grant last year by the state Board of Library Commissioners. Norfolk County Treasurer Robert Hall, who serves as chairman of the board, said the state could not provide the money because of a few "minor flaws" in the library's addition plan.

McLaughlin said a revised plan, along with the assistance of the city, Quincy's State House delegation, the library's Board of Trustees and the community made the difference this year. The state's grant of $3,495,291 was the largest of 38 grants given this year to various communities throughout Massachusetts.

The Thomas Crane Public Library received almost all of the $4.1 million for which it asked. State grants pay up to 40 percent of construction costs.

The original Crane building, now the reference section, was designed by famed architect Henry Hobson Richardson who also designed Trinity Church in Boston. It was completed in 1882 and has been designated a national historic landmark. Bertman referred to the library as "one of Richardson's best buildings."

In 1939, the Coletti building, which includes the checkout desk and main reading room, became the last addition to the library.

The planned addition will virtually double the library's space for books, computers and other services. It will include a 200-seat lecture hall, a much larger children's section, more shelf space for books and more computer terminals.

State Rep. Ronald Mariano said the library's success in obtaining the grant is the result of a "team effort" and said it shows that the library is known throughout the Massachusetts for its beauty.

"It's recognized throughout that state that we have a gem," said Mariano.

Rep. Michael Bellotti said the event is one of those occasions which makes him be happy to be part of the city's State House delegation, which lobbied for the grant.

"This is one of the most rewarding aspects of being a state representative," he said. "We're very happy to be part of that process."

A WOMAN'S SECRET STALKER

Make a list of a woman's worst health worries and you would start off with breast cancer, perhaps followed by heart disease. Diabetes probably wouldn't make the top ten. Tragically, that may account for an enormous amount of needless suffering and even premature death. Recent research has found that diabetes kills twice as many women over the age of 25 as breast cancer. After age 65, the ratio rises to more than three times as many women's deaths from diabetes as from breast cancer. There are two types of diabetes, ranging from very mild to severe. Symptoms to watch for include frequent urination, abnormal thirst, persistent vaginal itch, blurred vision, weight loss, increased appetite and muscle weakness.

P.S. There is no cure for diabetes, but early detection can help control symptoms and extend life expectancy.

Nothing helps ensure your physical health and well-being as regular exercise, proper nutrition and routine comprehensive medical exams to detect problems early. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy or call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550 Office hours by appointment. McCauley Seeks Information On Dress Codes, Charter Schools

School Committeeman Francis McCauley introduced resolutions regarding school dress codes and charter schools at a recent committee meeting.

The resolutions request that School Supt. Eugene Creedon look into both matters and report back to the committee with his findings.

McCauley, noting that other school systems have begun, initiating dress codes and/or the wearing of uniforms, said it is an issue worth researching.

"I'm not taking a position on dress codes or uniforms," he said. "I'm really just making the request for informational purposes."

On the subject of charter schools, McCauley noted that the city must pay for any Quincy student who participates in the state program. There are no charter schools in Quincy, he added, and he wants to learn what effect it has had on the city's school system.

"Again, I'm just looking for information on it," he said.

Tot Time Program Starts Oct. 11

The Quincy Recreation Department will hold registration for "Tot Time," a program for preschool age youngsters and their parents, beginning Tuesday, Oct. 2 in the department's main office, 100 Southern Artery.

The program begins Friday, Oct. 11.

The program, designed for children age 3-5, features 90 minutes of supervised play, one day per week, in the Ward 4 Community Center located at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center.

Cost is $20 for a seven week period. Classes will be held Fridays from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Enrollment is limited and will be taken first come, first serve.

PC Certification Program At Quincy College Begins Oct. 16

Quincy College and Data Train Institute of New York have teamed up to offer a comprehensive retraining program to prepare PC Support Technicians for entry level positions, beginning Wednesday, Oct. 16 at the college.

The 190-hour training program will prepare individuals to pass the A+ Certification exam, the industry-wide standard for computer service technicians who repair and service personal computers. Holders of the A+ Certification are recognized throughout the industry as having the knowledge and customer service skills to succeed as computer service technicians.

The A+ Certification program is an intensive nine-week, non-credit program designed for individuals who are not employed in the PC industry and do not possess PC skills. At the completion of the program, students will be prepared to take the A+ Certification Exam and become employed as PC support technicians in businesses and industries throughout the greater Boston region. Placement assistance is available as part of the program.

Classes will be held at Quincy College Mondays and Wednesdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Fridays from 8 a.m. to noon. For more information, call 984-1655.

"My family and I have been preparing for the opening of Hancock Park for 60 years."

-Richard Welch

When Hancock Park in Quincy opens in October, it will be the newest Healthcare and Assisted Living Center on the South Shore. But this isn't a story about bricks and mortar. It's the story of one women's vision of what community healthcare could be. And should be.

My grandmother, Florence St. John, RN

It all began in 1935, right here in Quincy in my grandmother Florence St. John's parlor. As a Home Health Nurse, she saw first hand the unique difficulties many of her elderly patients faced. Often what they needed most was emotional support and care in a warm, unthreatening environment. In those days, there were few facilities prepared to provide that. But my grandmother was.

So she began caring for seniors in her home. From these modest beginnings, the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group has become the leading provider of healthcare services on the South Shore.

Which brings us to the point of this story.

The opening of Hancock Park will be both a homecoming for us and a living memorial to the ideals that were so important to my grandmother. We're obviously very proud of her. And we're absolutely committed to making sure everything about Hancock Park reflects that pride.

To learn more about Hancock Park or about Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, please call us at (617) 878-6700. We'll send a you a free copy of our Welch Family Guide to Senior Care.

MBTA Route Assessment At Bellotti's Request

The MBTA has agreed to do a route assessment for bus service in Quincy as a result of a recent request by state Rep. Michael Bellotti.

The review will be conducted in the upcoming months and will involve Bellotti as well as direct outreach from the City of Quincy to solicit the specific needs for transit service in Quincy.

In a recent letter to MBTA General Manager Patrick Moynihan, Bellotti noted that Quincy has recently seen the completion of several projects, including the shipbuilding museum, Shaw's market, Roche Brothers market and the soon-to-be-open Stop & Shop market. He requested that the MBTA reevaluate the city's transportation needs, specifically the T's bus routes.

"I am pleased that the management at the MBTA agree that it is necessary to review the service needs of the City of Quincy," said Bellotti. "As projects around the city continue to be started as well as completed, the city certainly has to have public transportation that will serve the needs of all who use the system, especially the elderly and the handicapped. I will continue to work together with state and local officials to make sure that Quincy's transit needs come to fruition," Bellotti said.

Bellotti requests that any resident, business owner, or user of the MBTA with any questions contact the MBTA's Ronald Vining 222-3153. He has also been in contact with the Quincy School System as well as several city departments so they can inform him of any needs they feel are necessary to improve Quincy's service.

Peace Pole Dedicated At Bethany Church

PEACE POLE recently was dedicated at Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy Center. Helene Crofts (second from left) looks on as Bethany Peace Committee Co-Chairman Connie McDonald dedicates the pole to her and Lena Foster who was unable to attend the event. Crofts and Foster were co-founders of the Peace Committee. The Peace Pole bears messages of peace in different languages.

"PEACE STONES" proclaiming messages of peace are placed by Peace Committee Co-Chairmen Connie and Bill McDonald at the base of the Peace Pole which was recently dedicated at Bethany Congregational Church.

American Medical Response of Massachusetts Wants You To Know

Tips for Saving a Child's Life

In keeping with American Medical Response's (AMR) community outreach partnership and our commitment to training and education, we present the following information on handling an emergency:

(Every year in this country, nearly 6,700 children under the age of 14 die and another 50,000 are permanently disabled from preventable injuries. Knowing these seven tips could save a child's life!)

✔ 1. Know How To Spot An Emergency Situation.
• An emergency situation exists if you think a child could die or suffer permanent harm unless prompt care is received. If you are not sure, make the call!

✔ 2. Know How To Contact Your Local Emergency Service.
• In communities that have a 911 system, simply dialing 911 in an emergency connects you to Emergency Medical Service (EMS), the police and fire departments.
• IMPORTANT - Some areas of the country do not have 911. In these areas, there are different numbers to call for a medical, police or fire emergency. Find out what they are and P.L.A.N. - Post List of All emergency Numbers on or by every telephone in your home. Seconds count when calling your local ambulance/emergency service, poison control center, and police and fire departments — P.L.A.N. now!

✔ 3. Learn CPR And Choking Rescue Procedures For Infants and Children.
• Knowing how to perform CPR procedures on a child who has stopped breathing could provide your child with the lifesaving support that he or she needs before the professionals arrive.
• Understanding basic choking rescue procedures is essential to saving the life of any child whose airway is blocked by objects lodged in the throat.

✔ 4. Learn The Basics Of First Aid.
• Knowing how to stop serious bleeding from an open wound, manage shock, handle fractures and control a fever could provide your child with the right amount of help during an emergency.
• Learning first aid will help you recognize an emergency.

✔ 5. Immunize, Immunize, Immunize.
• Get all of your child's immunizations on time. Failure to do so places your child at serious risk of permanent disability and even death from a preventable illness!

✔ 6. Remember What To do If Your Child Is Involved In A Car Crash.
• DO NOT MOVE your child unless in further danger. Moving the child unnecessarily could result in permanent injury.
• Keep the child warm and, if conscious, keep him or her still.

✔ 7. Understand What To Do If Your Child Is Poisoned.
• If your child has been poisoned, bring poison (and child, if possible) with you to the phone when calling poison control center.
• Memorize your local poison control center's number and post it by the phone-P.L.A.N.!
• Have Syrup of Ipecac on hand - BUT use only if directed to do so.

Breast Cancer Memorial Service At Hospital Oct. 20

The Quincy Hospital Breast Cancer Support Group will hold its third annual Breast Cancer Memorial Service in memory of women who have lost their lives to breast cancer and in honor of those living with the disease.

The event will take place Sunday, Oct. 20 at 1 p.m. at the Breast Cancer Memorial Tree at the hospital. Memorial bricks will be dedicated in memory of Marie Curry of Quincy; Jean Driscoll of Milton; Dale Lochiatto of Hanover; Ruth Morrison of Rockland; Sister Mary Patrick, CDP, of Kingston; and Kathy Kelly Tierney of Quincy.

Speakers will include Mayor James Sheets, Ralph DiPisa, CEO and director of Quincy Hospital; Rabbi David Jacobs, Rev. Donald Remick, Rev. Ann Rearick, Fr. Ted Fortier and Carol Rizzo, facilitator of the Breast Cancer Support Group and a breast cancer survivor. Music will be provided by Virginia Vickery, soloist, accompnaied by her son, Noel, classical guitarist.

All are welcome to honor a friend or family member who has been lost to breast cancer by placing a brick under the Quincy Hospital Breast Cancer Memorial Tree. Bricks cost $125 each. Proceeds from the memorial bricks will support women's imaging services at the hospital.

For more information, call 376-4018.

Open House Saturday At Grove Manor Estates

Grove Manor Estates will host an Open House Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. in celebration of Assisted Living Week declared by Gov. William Weld.

Grove Manor Estates is a new Assisted Living residence in Braintree with 70 units. Although they are mushrooming throughout the country, assisted living residences are not yet as common in Massachusetts, and Grove Manor is among the first in the area.

Assisted Living residences seek to foster each resident's independence, self-determination and individuality, and encourage each resident's choice of care and lifestyle. They offer a combination of residential housing, supportive services, personalized assistance and health care designed to respond to the individual needs of those who need help with activities of daily living.

Services are available 24 hours a day to meet scheduled and unscheduled needs in a way that promotes dignity and self-determination for each resident and that involves the resident's family, neighbors, and friends.

For more information, call Michele O'Brien at 843-3700.

GROVE MANOR ESTATES in Braintree will hold an Open House Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. in celebration of Assisted Living Week. For more information, call 843-3700.

County Advisory Board Endorses Josephine Shea For Sheriff Appointment

The Norfolk County Advisory Board has unanimously recommended to Governor William Weld that he appoint Josephine Shea as interim sheriff for the balance of the late Sheriff Clifford Marshall's term.

The board, representing all 28 communities in Norfolk County on county matters, unanimously endorsed Shea, who is acting sheriff, at a recent meeting in Walpole.

Shea, a Quincy resident, has had 21 years' experience in the sheriff's department, including budget director, deputy sheriff and special sheriff.

Marshall died Aug. 28 at age 58 after a 20-month battle against brain cancer.

JOSEPHINE SHEA

His term runs until the end of 1998.

The letter of endorsement to Weld was signed by Chairman Geishecker of Dedham, Edwin Little of Sharon and Felix Juliani of Wellesley.

The letter said in part:

"Acting Sheriff Shea has illustrated that she is a capable candidate for this interim appointment. This is a great opportunity for you (Weld) to make an executive appointment of significant precedent.

"We view the selection of Acting Sheriff Shea for this interim appointment as being progressive, and in the best interest of the corrections profession, the County of Norfolk and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

The letter also noted:

"She was the first woman elected to the retirement board (representing 19 county towns) and she is now serving her third elected term."

American Medical Response Strengthens Partnership With Quincy College

SHAWN BRENNAN, a paramedic for American Medical Response (AMR) of Massachusetts, displays his medical equipment to Barbara Tatum, nursing instructor at Quincy College. The AMR of Massachusetts/Quincy College partnership, which enables nursing students to observe AMR paramedics, is beginning its second year.

American Medical Response (AMR) of Massachusetts is providing the nursing students of Quincy College with an unusual classroom this semester: an ambulance.

For the second consecutive year, AMR of Massachusetts is inviting students to spend a day with it paramedics. Part of American Medical Response, Inc., AMR of Massachusetts seven hospitals, nursing facilities and health care organizations in four states, while covering 45 New England communities with 911 emergency ambulance service. The Quincy facility is located at 55 Broad St.

According to Barbara Tatum, a Quincy College nursing instructor, the AMR of Massachusetts/Quincy College partnership represents the interdependence that exists between all health care professionals. "We need each other if we are to meet the health care needs of our community," she said. "It is helpful for students to see the differences, as well as the similarities, between paramedics and the nursing roles they are being trained for."

Last winter, about 20 Quincy College School of Nursing students participated in the inaugural program that allowed students to accompany paramedics on ambulance call. Tatum says the same number will participate again this fall.

According to Regional Operations Manager Don Laing, AMR of Massachusetts responds to about 20 calls in Quincy each day. "This is a wonderful opportunity to show our health care providers of the future what happens to a patient, both emotionally and physically, before they reach the emergency room," he said.

Other examples of AMR of Massachusetts community outreach include public safety training, cable television shows, alcohol awareness programs, violence prevention workshops, blood pressure clinics, CPR certification, gun buy-backs, scholarships and career days.

Mass., South Shore Assns. Sponsoring Realtor Course

The Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR) and the South Shore Association of Realtors will co-sponsor Course 102 of the Realtor Institute (GRI) program Oct. 22 and 23 at the new association office, 62 Derby St., Unit 6-7, Hingham.

The two-day course, which is open only to association members, consists of 15 hours of classroom instruction on several industry topics, including business and personal taxation, real estate and contract law, risk management, and the agency relationship. The course curriculum is designed primarily for Realtors licensed for less than five years. However, recent revisions to the course content make the program ideal for experienced real estate professionals who wish to learn more about current issues and trends as well.

The GRI 102 course is one of six modules which comprise the 90-hour Realtor Institute program. Students may register for courses in any sequence; however, individuals must complete the six-module program and pass each course exam within a five-year time frame in order to earn the nationally-recognized Graduate, Realtor Institute (GRI) designation.

Tuition for the GRI 102 program is $175 if registered by Oct. 15 and $195 after that date. For a course application or to register by VISA or MasterCard, contact the MAR Education Department toll free at (800) 725-6272.

Quincy Community Action Homebuyer's Workshop Oct. 19

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., an approved first time homebuyer counseling agency, will hold a First Time Homebuyer's Workshop Saturday, Oct. 19.

The workshop will be held at the QCAP offices, 1509 Hancock St., Quincy, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Lunch will be provided.

Attendance at the workshop is mandatory in order to qualify for the different mortgage options through the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second program and other financing options.

Agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. The focus will be on different aspects of the homebuying process; including how to locate a property within your budget, how to make an offer and the types of financing best suited to your needs.

Advanced registration is required and space is limited. The $40 fee includes workshop text, all copied materials, and lunch.

For more information and registration forms, call Debbie Kidd, housing coordinator, 479-8181, ext. 115.

The workshop is sponsored by the City of Quincy and DHCD.

WHY TITLE INSURANCE?

Problem Encroachment

(NAPS)—When buying a home, what you acquire is title to the property—ownership which may be limited by the rights and claims of others.

The American Land Title Association cited an example where a real estate buyer consulted a land survey showing that all structures were well within the boundaries of the property. A subsequent survey made immediately before the purchase confirmed the boundaries and the transaction was completed.

All seemed in order until the adjoining real estate was placed on the market at a later date. The survey conducted at that time revealed a garage and driveway thought to have been acquired in the original transaction actually were located on the neighboring land.

The unsuspecting owner in the original transaction was faced with the necessity of purchasing a strip of land wide enough to bring the garage and driveway within the boundaries as initially intended.

If owner's title insurance with survey coverage had been acquired to protect the buyer at the time of initial purchase, ALTA pointed out that the undiscovered encroachment problem would have been that of the title insurer. A title policy is based on a thorough search of public records so that hazards of title can be located and cleared up prior to the closing whenever possible.

Title insurance also protects against problems including those even the most exhaustive search will not reveal.

ALTA reminded that owner's title insurance—not the lender's title insurance required by mortgage lenders—is necessary to fully protect a home buyer. Lender's title insurance, which usually is required by the mortgage lender, serves as protection only for the lending institution.

ALTA is the national association of the abstracting and title insurance industry. Members of the organization search, review and insure land titles to protect real estate investors including home buyers and mortgage lenders.

For free information on owner's title insurance, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Owner's Title Insurance, American Land Title Association, Suite 705, 1828 L Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20036. Questions may be directed to an ALTA member listed in the yellow pages.

RICO RODRIGUEZ of Lynn English, who rushed for 99 yards on 21 carries Friday night, attempts to fend off Quincy's Shaun Faherty for a few extra yards. Rodriguez was involved in the game's biggest play when he was stuffed at Quincy's one-yard line by Bob Walsh, Pat Harrington and Mike Russo on a fourth and goal play late in the game.
(Quincy Sun Photos/Tom Gorman)

QUINCY HIGH running back Kevin Connolly heads upfield against Lynn English as fullback Tim Santos, left, looks to provide protection. In the Presidents' 13-12 win, Connolly finished with 86 yards on 15 carries, including a nine-yard touchdown run in the first quarter, his third score of the season.

Presidents Host B-R Friday

Walsh's Heroics Secure Quincy's First Victory

By LIAM FITZGERALD

If player of the game awards were handed out Friday night, Quincy linebacker-wide receiver Bob Walsh would have been a likely candidate following his defensive performance at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

In a 13-12 victory over non-league opponent Lynn English, Walsh and teammates Pat Harrington and Mike Russo combined to make the game's biggest play with eight minutes remaining.

Trailing by one and faced with a fourth and goal from Quincy's four, Bulldog running back Rico Rodriguez (21 carries, 99 yards) ran right for three yards, but was stuffed at the one by Walsh and Harrington, with Russo applying the finishing touches.

"We preach at them to play solid goal line defense," said Quincy defensive coordinator Bob Keuther. "We call that defense the 'fortress' because no one gets in. Walsh and Harrington made the big stop, and Russo finished the play off to give us the ball back.

"The ball was in our park and we had to stop them. I'm proud of how they bounced back and hung in there and played well down the stretch."

The Bulldogs' defense gave its offense one more chance to win the game, sacking Quincy quarterback Mark Glynn twice and forcing the Presidents to punt with just over two minutes to play.

Walsh's second huge defensive play sealed the win for Quincy. On a first down at Quincy's 29, Bulldog quarterback Leo Estabrook tried to find his brother, Jonathan, but Walsh stepped in front of the pass and intercepted it with under two minutes left.

"Bob made a nice read and a nice pick," said Keuther. "We saw that play in the films, and he made a great play on the ball, tipping it up and catching it."

Though upset with his team's overall performance, Quincy head coach Peter Chella was pleased that the Presidents' defense came through when it counted.

"We needed to make a play, to step up and be a football team," said Chella. "We played awful and were lucky to win. We should be playing better. We can't play like this and expect to win too many games this season. We had too many penalties and too many offensive mistakes. We need to play better defense, too. If not, we're going to be in trouble."

With Old Colony League power Bridgewater-Raynham (1-1) in town Friday night at 7, Chella knows Quincy's chances of winning are slim if its defense doesn't improve, especially in the tackling department.

"If we don't play well against B-R, we'll lose by 40 points," he said. "We have to hit people. You can't play defense if you don't hit people. We seem to be in position to make the play, but we're not making the tackles. When you have your finger on the trigger, you have to pull it. They know that, but they have to start doing it more often."

Elks Blank Panthers In Opener, 22-0

The West Quincy Elks blanked the Quincy Point Panthers, 22-0 in the recent opener of Quincy Youth Football.

Co-captains Joe Moran and Steve King led the overpowering offensive line of Chris Kerr, Matt Tupe, and Matt Kenny. The offense opened up gaping holes for the backs to pound away throughout the game.

Mike Pilot led the defense with several big hits resulting in two fumbles while the Big Red Machine's defense kept the Panthers' offense in check.

Presidents will have the opportunity to tackle on numerous occasions is sophomore running back Doug Bessette. In B-R's 21-7 win over league foe Falmouth Saturday, Bessette rushed for 241 yards on 28 carries and scored on runs of 68 and six yards.

Friday against Lynn English, Quincy (1-1) got off to a rough start on its first possession of the game. On the second play from scrimmage, Glynn fumbled the snap, and Rodriguez recovered it for the Bulldogs at his own 40. Three plays later, quarterback Estabrook hooked up on a 39-yard touchdown pass to his brother, Jonathan, barely a minute into the game. After the extra point was nullified by a penalty, the Bulldogs opted to go for two, but Estabrook's pass fell incomplete and Quincy trailed, 6-0.

Quincy wasted no time coming back, marching 62 yards on their next series to take the lead. Keeping it on the ground, running back Kevin Connolly (15 carries, 86 yards) carried the ball three times for 30 yards, including a nine-yard touchdown run. Tim Santos' extra point kick moved Quincy ahead, 7-6, halfway through the opening quarter.

Late in the first half, Glynn engineered an 11-play, 85-yard scoring drive highlighted by a pair of passes to Walsh for 39 yards. The drive's key play came on a third and 11 from the Quincy 29, when Glynn connected with Walsh for a 29-yard gain and a first down in Bulldog territory. On the play, Walsh tore the ball away from the Bulldog defender to prevent an interception and kept Quincy's drive intact.

Besides a 10-yard pass to Walsh, the Presidents' offense stayed on the ground the rest of the series, resulting in a 13-yard scoring run by Shaun Faherty. With 0:42 remaining, Santos' extra point sailed wide right and Quincy led by only seven, 13-6, at the break.

Glynn had an impressive first half, completing six of seven passes for 118 yards, but he completed only one pass for no gain in the second half. The entire Presidents offense stalled in the final two quarters, accumulating only 70 total yards and no points.

The Bulldogs came back on their first possession of the second half, driving 70 yards, most of which came on runs by Rodriguez. Quarterback Estabrook found his brother open again for a 34-yard touchdown reception to cut Quincy's lead to 13-12.

Rather than kick the extra point to tie the game, the Bulldogs went for two and the lead, but Estabrook's pass fell incomplete again, and Quincy's defense kept the Bulldogs out of the end zone the rest of the way.

Hockey Association Scholarships

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association is offering several scholarships to former members who are now attending college.

Applications are available at the Quincy Youth Hockey office and Quincy Youth Arena Snack Bar. One application covers entry for six QYH awards, two Quincy Executive League awards in memory of Dick Wilson and Charlie Watt, a Quincy Youth Arena Award in memory of Ed Mitchell and a special QYH Award in memory of Ricky Miller.

Entries must be received or postmarked by Oct. 15. The drawings will be by lottery and will be held publicly at the Bryan Post in November. Winners will be notified by mail.

For more information, call Janet Riley at 479-8372.

Exercise Classes Start Sept. 30

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct two different exercise classes day and Wednesday evenings at the Lincoln Hancock Community School gym at 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. beginning Sept. 30.

Registration will be held before class.

The 6:30 p.m. class, "Good Healthy Fun," is for every fitness level. The low-impact aerobics class is designed to strengthen heart and lungs, burn fat, and firm muscles.

The 7:30 p.m. class, "the Bodies Shop," offers a combination of calisthenics, resistance work and stretching techniques to tune-up, firm up and have some fun.

Both offerings are taught by Mary Manoli, a certified aerobics instructor.

Participants have two payment options: a $30 one-time fee for all classes, from Sept. 30 to Dec. 18, or $3 for each individual class, payable at the time of class.

Participants in the 7:30 p.m. class may also participate in the adult swim which starts at 8 p.m. the school's pool.

Soccer

North Quincy Girls Win Twice, Improve To 2-3-2

Ater losing once and tying twice the previous week, North Quincy's girls soccer team won two of three contests last week, improving its record to 2-3-2 under head coach Paul Bregoli.

The Red Raiders gave undefeated Silver Lake all it could handle in a 3-1 loss early in the week. The Lakers scored 1:49 into the game as Cindy Reich scored from eight yards out. Reich tallied again 20 minutes later, and North trailed 2-0 at halftime.

North put the pressure on early in the second half. An indirect kick by junior Kristen Keohane was knocked into the net by sophomore Kristen Bowes from 15 yards out to pull the Raiders close.

The Red Raiders' midfield of Jill Picardi, Ashley Murphy and Bowes controlled play. The Lakers got an insurance goal late in the game to seal the victory.

North then traveled to Taunton and notched a 3-1 victory in a game dominated by the visitors. Freshman wing Caitlyn O'Donnell scored her second goal of the year, taking a perfect feed from Dorothy Cronin, one-timing it into the net. The Raiders gave up a bad goal late in the half as Lisa Bragg lost a ball in the sun.

The Raiders stormed the Tiger half of the field early in the second half. Sophomore Betsy Stone stole a clearing pass and beat a defender before drilling a shot top corner for the game winner. Melissa Keefe closed out the scoring for North, taking a throw-in from Laurie Flynn and heading it past the Taunton keeper. The Raiders got excellent performances from tri-captains Laura Shea and Hillary O'Donoghue as well as Maureen Casey and Katie Koch.

The Raiders cruised by Brockton, taking a 4-0 win which could easily have been doubled if it weren't for the Brockton goalkeeper. North scored at the 10-minute mark as Shea sent a cross to Stone, who tallied her third goal of the year. Laurie Flynn netted first of the season six minutes later, taking a pass from senior defender Amanda Rork. Cronin and Stone then hit the crossbar on shots as the Raiders kept play in the Boxer end all half.

Keefe scored her second goal in two games, taking a Stone pass in space and delivering it into the net six minutes into the second half. Freshman Ashley Murphy beat the Boxer goalie from 15 yards away for her first varsity goal. Bragg and Bowes combined for the shutout in North's goal.

"The last five games we've started to gel and are playing better soccer," said Bregoli. "Our defense has been immense, allowing only five goals in that time. O'Donoghue has been exceptional, particularly in the past two games, taking over the sweeper spot for Rachael Powers, who is out following surgery.

"Koch has played well as have seniors Maureen Sullivan and Tina Katsarikas. This is a big week for us with three tough OCL games coming up."

After a game at Weymouth Tuesday, the Raiders travel to Bridgewater-Raynham today (Thursday) for a 4 p.m. game, then return home for an important game against Quincy Saturday at 5 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy Downs Brockton

After dropping the first two games of the week, the Quincy High School girls' soccer team picked up a 3-1 win on the road against Brockton in recent action.

Erin Flaherty, Laura McCoy and Leanne Martin netted the goals for Quincy. Goalkeeper Crystal Kazolias turned in a fine performance, collecting seven saves.

"QHS is a different team this year," said head coach Robin Welinsky. "They have the right attitude, ability and desire to play any team in the OCL."

Prior to the the win over Brockton, the Presidents lost to Bridgewater-Raynham, 2-0, and Weymouth, 4-0.

Against B-R, Quincy kept the game scoreless until the second half, when B-R scored 14 minutes into the half, then added an insurance foal 11 minutes later.

Kazolias shone in net, notching 16 saves to keep the game close. Quincy had its opportunities to score, but came up empty.

Facing a tough, physical Weymouth squad, the Presidents stayed close, trailing 1-0 at the half. In the second half, Weymouth came out flying, scoring three goals to put the game away.

Once again, Kazolias came up big with 14 saves, the last one on a penalty kick, Weymouth's third of the second half. Flaherty and Martin in center half and Kara McSweeney and Kim Mackey led the offense, while Jessica DiBona and Becky Mackey paced the defense.

Also playing well on defense were freshman Kelly Raymer, junior Michelle Boncek and Julie Gibbons and Kim DiBona.

Basketball Clinic Saturday

A boys' fall basketball clinic featuring UMass Assistant Coach Tony Barbee will be held Saturday, Sept. 28 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Quincy High School gymnasium.

The free clinic is open to boys in grades 6, 7 and 8.

The clinic is sponsored by Brian Buckley, assistant coach at Suffolk University.

Other UMass coaches and players as well as local coaches will participate.

To register, call Buckley at 376-1242 or 472-7392.

Heather Rendle Leader Of Bucknell Volleyball Team

Heather Rendle of Quincy, a 1993 graduate of North Quincy High School, returns for her senior season on the Bucknell University volleyball team.

A 5-11 middle hitter, Rendle hit .306 last year with 275 kills, third best on the team. She also totaled 100 blocks (28 solo, 72 assist), 277 digs and 24 aces. As a freshman in 1993, she ranked 17th in the nation with a .373 percentage.

Rendle rejoins fellow seniors Susie Teitsworth, Allison Morris, Annalise Meidman and Heather Montaperto on a Bucknell squad expected to challenge for the Patriot League championship after losing to Colgate in the finals last year.

Red Raiders Visit Falmouth Friday

North Quincy Defense Impressive In 14-7 Win

Following a losing campaign last year, North Quincy head coach Ken McPhee wanted nothing more than to start the 1996 season with a victory, especially on the road against a good Stoughton squad.

McPhee got his wish Friday night, as the Red Raiders combined staunch defense with timely offense for a 14-7 win over Stoughton in a non-league season opener for both teams.

"This was a good team effort," said McPhee, in his 15th year at North. "It was a very good way to start the season. The kids played well and a bunch of them stepped up and did a nice job.

"The win definitely will add to our confidence. We beat a very good team, with one of the premier running backs in the area in Jay McNamara. Our defense did a good job against him and the rest of their offense."

McNamara did rush for 104 yards on 23 carries, including a one-yard touchdown, but North held the rest of the Black Knights' offense to 15 total yards.

"Our defense played out of their sneakers," said McPhee. "They came up real big. They read well and we sent a lot of people to put pressure on their quarterback. They didn't complete on pass against us all day.

"The defensive coaches, Earl Metzler and Sean Glennon, really put it together, made a nice defensive game plan. At times, it seemed like we were almost in their huddle, calling their plays. It was really nice."

The Red Raiders' defense will have to be extra sharp come Friday at 7 p.m., when North travels to Falmouth and faces the task of containing tailback Willie Ford, whom McPhee calls "a definite legitimate Division I running back."

"They (Falmouth) are a big, physical team, so our defense will be well-tested," said McPhee. "We have to get him (Ford) early, because he's a quick kid and once he breaks the line of scrimmage, it's over. He's tremendous.

"He's their offense, since they don't throw the ball all that well. We need to stop him and make other people beat us, which is a lot easier said then done."

Ford, a 6-2, 190-pound senior tailback, scored Falmouth's only touchdown on a 60-yard jaunt in a 21-7 loss to Bridgewater-Raynham Saturday.

Friday night against Stoughton, Brian Walsh paced the Red Raiders offensively and defensively, rushing for 62 yards on 20 carries and collecting 12 tackles and two sacks.

"He was immense on both sides of the ball," said McPhee. "He was all over the field, making 12 tackles, a couple of sacks, doing everything."

North's offense started clicking in the second quarter while its defense limited Stoughton to 62 total yards and forced the Black Knights to punt on all five of their possessions.

In his first start, Red Raiders quarterback Tom Coughlin, hooked up with tight end Charlie Plaskasovitis on a 43-yard play action touchdown pass. Jim Finn's extra point gave the Red Raiders a 7-0 lead.

"Charlie made a great catch on that pass, and it was thrown right where it had to be," said McPhee. "Tom did a nice job in his first game at QB. He led the team the way we want a quarterback to do it. That was a nice throw on the touchdown and he also avoided some serious losses with his mobility."

After stopping the Black Knights, the Red Raiders took their next possession 57 yards on eight plays, culminating in fullback Mike Powers' 25-yard touchdown scamper. Finn's point after increased North's lead to 14-0 heading into the break.

"Walsh made a great block on the linebacker to spring Powers, who broke it real quick and dove into the end zone," said McPhee. "When he (Powers) saw the goal line, he got there real quick, outrunning their secondary It was nice to see him score in his first game."

Trailing by two touchdowns, Stoughton's defense stiffened in the third quarter and held the Red Raiders scoreless the entire half.

On their first series of the third quarter, the Black Knights moved the ball 51 yards on seven plays, resulting in a one-yard toucchdown run by McNamara. Neal Houghton's extra point brought Stoughton to within 14-7 heading into the fourth quarter.

The Black Knights had their chances late in the game, but could not penetrate the strong Red Raiders defensive corps on three consecutive possessions.

"Our secondary made some great hits on their backs," said McPhee. "Sean O'Toole played well at corner and made some big hits, some big tackles. Chris Bregoli, Powers and Finn all had solid games in the secondary."

McPhee was also impressed with the play of Finn in his role as North's punter, calling one play by Finn "phenomenal."

"The ball was snapped over his head, but he recovered it, was able to avoid the rush and kicked it 35 yards on the dead run. They made a good return on it, but otherwise it would've been a safety. He did a great job."

One of McPhee's main concerns heading into the season, the play of the offensive and defensive lines, was lessened slightly by the strong effort of both lines in the opener.

"Center Mike Leeber and the two guards, Brian Wells and Norm Connell played well Friday night," said McPhee. "Norm played a very good two-way game. The lines are still improving and are heading in the right direction."

By LIAM FITZGERALD

SENIOR TRI-CAPTAINS, from left, Jim Finn, Charlie Plaskasovitis and Norm Connell all played a vital role in North Quincy's win at Stoughton. Finn impressed McPhee with his punting skills, Plaskasovitis made a 43-yard touchdown reception and Connell "played a good two-way game," said McPhee.

Dave Riley and Tom Shruhan also netted goals. Andy Smith (goalkeeper), Vandi Braima and Joe O'Connor led the Torpedos' charge.

Tallying the only goal for the Devils was Brain Ferrara, with an assist from Oscar Goldstein. Brandon Deshler (goalkeeper), Dan Cabral and Shaun Jafarzadeh turned in solid performances in a losing effort.

Paul Cremin's three-goal game helped the Windstormers double up the Pirates, 6-3.

Scoring a goal apiece for the Windstormers were Pat Duff, Dan Wooster and Ryan Graeber. Chris Wilson assisted on three goals and Billy O'Brien and Ziggy played well for the winners.

Charlie Acton, Ilyas Oner and Andy Nestor netted a goal apiece for the Pirates, with Derek Kelly contributing with an assist.

Under 14 Girls:

Allison Lacey netted two goals and assisted on two others to help lead the Lightning Bolts over McEvoy Security, 6-2.

Joinging the goal parade were Caitlyn Flaherty, Carolyn King, Makena Cahill and Lisa Dellacroce, all of whom tallied a goal apiece. Dellacroce also had two assists, and Kelly Rice and Laura Matos each chipped in with an assist. Christine Kirby, Julia Matos and Christina Cleary all played well for the winners.

Scoring for McEvoy were Melissa Lumaghini and Colleen Lahar. Kathryn Grogan, Jessica Courtney and Karen Lo were the standout players for McEvoy.

In a barnburner, the Kiwanis Club and the Granite City Rockers battled to a 7-7 tie.

Scoring machine Kellee Conley tallied five goals, Lisa Kelly scored once and assisted on two others and Jaclyn Koch netted a goal to lead Kiwanis. Casey Ridge set up three of the goals and Diana Berberan assisted on one score.

Morgan Peterson, the first-half goalkeeper, and Amy O'Donnell, the second-half goalkeeper, both turned in fine performances, as did Lauren McFarland.

For the Rockers, Sheila Lynch notched four goals, with Katie McEvoy netting two and Tama Baker scoring one and dishing out two assists. Caitlin Herlihy also set up two goals. Kahli Dearani, Kristen Jones and Nadia Cardone all played well.

In another high-scoring affair, the Kickers barely edged Wollaston Business Association, 7-6.

Stacy Szcesuil and Kerrin Griffin tallied two goals each and Melissa Clifford, Jennfier Djerf and Stacey Queripel added single goals. Szcesuil, Djerf, Jennifer Ahern and Katie Markhard all contributed one assist apiece. Jessica Gallant and Kelly Rose O'Brien also turned in fine performances for the winners.

Latitia Lutts and Kathleen Hester netted two goals each and Leanne Griffin and Sarah Houghton also scored one goal apiece for WBA. Adding an assist apiece were Lutts, Houghton and Kelly Coleman.

Jacquelyn Murphy, Sarah Garber and Beth Houghton were sharp for WBA in a losing effort.

5 First-Place Finishes Spark North Quincy Girl Swimmers

Five first-place finishes sparked the North Quincy girls swim team to a recent 88-78 victory over Weymouth.

Leading the Red Raiders (1-1) was senior tri-captain Marianne Blaikie, who took top honors in the 500 free (5:58.51) and the 200 free (2:13.43) and was a member of the victorious 200 and 400 free relay squads.

Laura Cadogan finished first in the 100 free (1:05.47), second in the 50 free (30.05) and was on the winning 200 and 400 free relay teams for North.

North's Katie Johnson also had a successful meet, winning the 50 free (28.01), taking second in the 100 free (1:05.64) and participating on the winning 200 and 400 free relay teams.

Also performing well was senior tri-captain Kara Dempsey, a member of the first-place 200 and 400 free relay teams and the third-place finisher in the 50 free (32.36).

The Red Raiders' 200 medley relay team of junior Jessica Flanigin, freshman Amy Fagerlund, senior Michelle Raimondi and senior tri-captain Jen Bradford placed second (2:33.47). Fagerlund also secured second in the 200 IM (3:03.23) and third in the 100 breast (1:38.29).

Raimondi placed second in the 100 butterfly (1:42.62), followed by freshman Kelly Whalen in third (2:11.99).

Flanigin captured second in the 100 back (1:22.44) and teamed with senior Susan Haydar, Freshman Kelly Mackey and sophomore Melissa Cooke to take third in the 400 free relay (5:38.69). Junior Janna Lentini came in third in the 500 free (8:31.32).

In a 107-62 loss to Boston Latin in earlier action, Blaikie again paced the Red Raiders, finishing first in three events and second in another.

Blaikie captured first in the 200 free (2:13.63), 500 free (6:09.51), was on the victorious 200 free relay team and the second-place 200 medley relay team.

Johnson had another solid outing, placing first in the 50 free (28.53) and was on the first-place 200 free relay team and the second-place 200 medley relay team.

Cadogan was on the winning 200 free relay team, the second place 200 medley relay team and finished second in the 100 free (1:05.75) and third in the 100 breast (1:33.61).

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Of all the blessings we receive in our lifetime, the gift of patience is one of the greatest . . .

PATIENCE is love at work. Patience is a mother who loves her small child even after he has spilled a glass of milk on the tablecloth and himself.

PATIENCE is a father teaching his teenage son how to drive an automobile without getting angry at him for every wrong move.

PATIENCE is the man in his wheelchair and the woman in her walker thanking God for their blessings and bearing their hardships with a smile.

PATIENCE keeps our tongues from uttering unkind words, keeps our hands from doing angry deeds, keeps our feet from hasty acts.

PATIENCE is God's restraining hand. Surely it is what God must have in dealing with us every day.

'Taxpayer Appeal' Filed In Response To Granting Of Stop & Shop License

Spearheaded by the efforts of Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott and Montclair resident Kevin Coughlin, Quincy residents have filed a "Taxpayer Appeal" to the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission in response to the Quincy License Board's granting of a beer and wine license to Stop & Shop.

The appeal, which is unique in recent city history, is provided for within the Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 138 and will trigger a review process by the state commission.

Stop & Shop's application drew fierce vocal opposition from Montclair area residents as well as city wide groups including the Quincy Citizens Association and the Alcohol Action Group. Coughlin, who presented the License Board with a petition opposing the license signed by 862 area residents, praised McDermott's advocacy on behalf of the community.

McDermott had addressed substantive and statutorily based concerns in his arguments to the License Board at hearings in August and September.

Residents in the area have expressed frustration with the License Board decision and have launched a grassroots effort to obtain donations to help defray legal expenses. Concerned Citizens for Sensible Alcohol licensing is accepting donations sent to Citizens Appeal Fund c/o K. Coughlin, 19 Small St., N. Quincy, MA. They are also asking residents to voice their frustration to elected officials and attend the ABCC hearing which should be scheduled within the next few weeks.

Marina Bay Taxi Hearing Continued

The Quincy License Board voted Tuesday to continue until Oct. 1 a hearing regarding Marina Bay Taxi Service, 86 Sumner St. because of site conditions and the operation of the business.

Atty. Kevin Burke told the board that a new fence was installed and landscaping completed to enhance the area.

Because of complaints from residents and the fact that Sumner St. is well travelled, Burke told the board that the owners are searching for a new location and said they may move to Braintree. He asked the board's approval.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he plans to meet with the city solicitor on whether or not a Braintree license would be valid in Quincy.

Board Hits Point Pub Hard Again

to revoke the pub's liquor license.

Attorney Lou Cassis representing the pub's owners charged the couple with signing false affidavits, lying under oath and claimed the owners did not violate any law.

However, the consensus of the board and Raymondi who read regulations for liquor licensees, was that Cappola, instead of asking the women to leave was supposed to by law, call the police.

Atty. James Timmons, an assistant city solicitor for the City of Quincy, representing the board cited the owners for not notifying the police immediately.

Police Chief Frank Mullen who called the owners "respected guys" said it was "too bad they didn't adhere to the policy of the board" to call the police. Especially since the women in question "admitted to being drunk".

Chairman Joseph Shea said the subject was a "difficult call" and read a policy adopted in 1992 stating that owners must notify the police for disorderly conduct.

Fire Chief Tom Gorman and Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue both said they had heard enough evidence and said they felt that "something did happen at the bar that night". Gorman made the motion to suspend the license, seconded by Gallahue.

Council Approval Expected On Avalon Apartments

The City Council was scheduled to vote last night (Wednesday) on a request from Avalon Properties Inc. of Braintree to build an apartment home community on Falls Blvd. near the Roche Bros. Supermarket and planned Wa-Mart store.

The proposal calls for 171 units to be built on 8.3 acres on Lot 4A at Falls Blvd. The project, known as "Avalon at Faxon Park," would consist of six garden-style apartment buildings, a community center and more.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi--who ward includes the project--said at press time he backs the $12 million project, noting it has been approved by the Quincy Planning Board and met the criteria of other city officials.

Raymondi said a number of community meetings also have been held on the matter.

He added that it is expected to create 180 construction jobs as well as a number of permanent jobs upon completion. Construction would be completed 16 months after groundbreaking, Raymondi said.

Telemarketing Fraud & Protection

Your best protection is to just hang up the phone. If you think that is rude, tell them politely that you are not interested, don't want to waste their time, and please don't call back - and then hang up. If you find yourself caught up in a sales pitch, remember the federal government's Telemarketing Sales Rule.

• You have to be told the name of the company, the fact that it is a sales call, and what's being sold. If a prize is being offered, you have to be told immediately that there is no purchase necessary to win.

• If he caller says you've won a prize, you cannot be asked to pay anything for it. You can't be required to pay shipping charges. If it is a sweepstakes, the caller must tell you how to enter without making a purchase.

• You cannot be asked to pay in advance for services such as cleansing your credit record, finding a loan, acquiring a prize they say you've won. You pay for services only if they're actually delivered.

• You shouldn't be called before 8 a.m., or after 9 p.m. If you tell telemarketers not to call again, they can't. If they do, they have broken the law.

• If your guaranteed a refund, the caller has to tell you all the limitations.

And remember, don't give telemarketers your credit card number, your bank account number, or Social Security number - or authorize bank drafts - ever. If you suspect fraud, call the National Fraud Information Center at 1-800-876-7060.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Approved a request from the Robert I. Nickerson Post, 20 Moon Island Rd., for an extension of premises license into the parking area for a "family day" Saturday from 3 p.m. to 12 midnight.

•Granted a permit to G.J. Coddington's, 1250 Hancock St. for the Y.M.C.A. silent auction to be held into the Atrium Oct. 9 from 5 to 7 p.m.

•Granted a one day permit to the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association, 1416 Hancock St., to hold their sixth annual Harvest Family Festival Sunday, Oct. 20 with a rain date of Sunday, Oct. 27.

•Granted a request from Staff Auto, 519 Quincy Ave. for a Motor 11 used car license. Owners are Richard Connelly, Joseph Maguire and Ed Leahy.

•Granted a Motor 11 license to Willard Street Motor Sales, 550 Willard St. Owner is Frank Luzaitis.

•Continued a hearing regarding a request from Richard's Used Cars, 17 Bower Rd., for a Motor 11 license. Owner Richard Colarusso was told to meet with the zoning board and then return to the license board.

•Granted a request from Heff Brothers Auto Body, 65 Holbrook Rd., for a repair shop license. Owners are Patrick and Bob Heffernan. Hours will be from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Atty. Robert Fleming told the board that if anyone is there after 7 p.m. they will inform the police •Granted a request from Volaina Cafe, 317 Victory Rd., for a common victualer license. Afsaneh Eghbalian said she plans to open the restaurant about the middle of November. The site is at the former Cathay Marina.

•Continued a hearing following complaints by Roger Lyons regarding site conditions at Yannis Plaza, 216-224 W. Squantum St. The board will meet with owner John K. Blathras and Lyons at the next meeting.

•Changed the hours of Parkway Gas & Variety, 507 Furnace Bk. Pkwy. from 6:30 a.m. to 6:45 a.m. following complaints from neighbors. Former Ward 3 Councillor John Lydon spoke on behalf of owners Leo and Dorothy Gaquin. Gaquin had a petition signed by 228 residents in favor of the early hours, while Ward 3 Councillor Steve Durkin had a petition with 10 names opposing the early hours.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Club's Cabaret License Limited To Sundays

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board voted unanimously Tuesday to limit the cabaret license held by The Varsity Club, 33 Independence Ave., South Quincy, to Sundays.

In addition, club representatives will have to appear again before the board within 30 to 45 days to prove the establishment has addressed a number of concerns voiced by area residents.

The 4-0 vote followed a 90-minute discussion involving board members, neighbors, club co-owner Adam Kessler and Dennis Harrington, his attorney. Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, the fifth board member, did not attend Tuesday's meeting.

Neighbors listed numerous complaints about the establishment, including problems with the club's gate being open past a mandated 12:30 a.m. curfew, illegal parking, loud music and rowdy patrons who relieve themselves on residents' lawns after drinking at the club.

Harrington and Kessler said the club has tried to comply with all of the city's rules and regulations and that in some cases, stories told by neighbors were exaggerated or untrue.

Board members, however, said The Varsity Club has repeatedly been on the License's Board agenda over the last eight years--including the four Kessler has been there--because of complaints from residents.

"I don't think you're making this up," said City Clerk Joseph Shea, the board chairman, in an attempt to reassure neighbors. He added that Ward 4 City Councillor Michael D'Amico has told him there have been problems at the establishment, particularly with the gate and the parking.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said he thinks Kessler has made an effort to improve the situation and that the younger crowd that patronizes the club causes most of the problems.

"It's not you (Kessler) as a person, it's the clientele you attract," said Gorman, who suggested that the Kessler might have turn his business into a family-oriented establishment such as those that preceded The Varsity Club at the site.

One neighbor, Lois Ferrazzi of Federal Avenue, voiced similar sentiments.

"This club initially was presented as a family business," she said. "Adults don't act the way the clientele at The Varsity Club act."

Police Chief Francis Mullen told Kessler that while the police department assists in such matters as much as possible, it is the club ownership that ultimately must deal with such problems.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue agreed, suggesting that Kessler spend more time personally on the premises.

"You, Adam, need to be there," she said.

When neighbors said the cabaret license has made existing problems even worse, the board decided to limit the license to Sundays. Board members also said the other issues brought up by neighbors must be addressed.

Gorman said if improvements are not evident by the next time the club is on the board's agenda, he will make a motion to have the establishment's hours reduced.

"It's time to get your act together," he said.

A Breakthrough in Hearing Aid Technology.

If you've been waiting for the very latest hearing technology, we have important news for you...

Starkey's new Sequel Series hearing instruments offer performance advantages unlike any hearing aid we've offered before.

To achieve this preferred level of performance, an ideal hearing aid should not contribute undesirable perceptual elements – like distortion – that can result in poor sound reproduction, especially at high levels.

Thanks to Starkey's breakthrough SMArT Systems Technology. Sequel's sophisticated anti-distortion and efficient circuitry achieves an entirely new plateau in sound quality and performance.

CHANGING TIMES

Any decision concerning how long an interval to allow between oil changes should be based on factors ranging from driving style, traffic conditions and engine load and temperature to oil consumption. Most auto manufacturers recommend that the engine oil be changed about every 7,500 miles under normal driving conditions or about every 3,000 miles if the car is subjected to severe conditions. Before car owners automatically assume that they drive their cars under normal conditions, they should realize that some of the factors that contribute to severe driving conditions include: a lot of stop-and-go traffic; making many successive short trips during which the engine cannot build to normal operating temperatures; extended high-speed highway driving; running under a heavy load, such as towing a trailer; and/or driving under dusty conditions. Changing engine oil frequently is inexpensive insurance against costly failure.

HINT: Adding a quart of oil to the engine on a regular basis does not take the place of draining the oil and replacing the oil filter to remove contaminants and replenish additives.

Regularly scheduled maintenance can greatly extend the life of your car. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be well informed about every system in your car whether or not it is leased. PRESIDENT BILL CLINTON announced last Saturday night at Logan International Airport in Boston that he will release $100 million in federal loan guarantees to modernize the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point. Shown with him here are Sen. John Kerry, Mayor James Sheets, Sen. Edward Kennedy and Sotirios Emmanouil, the Greek shiphuilder who plans to reopen the shipyard.

Clinton Commits $100 Million In Loans

Sheets: City Funding Not Necessary For Shipyard Opening

The city will not have to provide any financial backing for a plan to return shipbuilding to the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point, according to Mayor James Sheets.

Sheets made his comments to The Quincy Sun Tuesday while discussing the proposal. On Saturday, President Clinton announced during a campaign stop at Logan International Airport in Boston that he would release $100 million in loan guarantees to modernize the shipyard.

An additional $218 million in guarantees from the U.S. Department of Transportation will be needed in order for Greek shipbuilder Sotirios Emmanouil, owner of Swampscott-based Massachusetts Heavy Industries, to go ahead with his plan to build ships at the yard which has been dormant for 10 years.

Sheets said the city will have a hand in the project in the coming months but will not have to contribute any money.

"The city will play some role, but will not float any bonds or use any city money to reopen the shipyard," said the mayor.

Quincy may offer cash guarantees through various federal programs, but details have yet to be worked out, he added. Still, the city will not put up any actual cash, he said.

Sheets said he is hopeful all of the details of the modernization component of the plan as well as the actual shipbuilding aspect will be completed by December and that Emmanouil can begin building ships in November 1997. Emmanouil already is contracted to build six double-hull oil tankers.

Although previous attempts to reopen the shipyard have failed, Sheets said this is by far the closest the city has come to achieving that goal.

Flu Clinics Begin Oct. 26

The Quincy Health Department announces flu clinics for Quincy residents over 18 years will be held Oct. 26 through Nov. 21.

This year's flu shot contains the strains A/Texas, A/Nanchang, B/Harbin to provide immunity against the types of flu which have been circulating in the past year and thought to be most likely to occur in the United States this winter.

Because influenza vaccine contains only non-infectious viruses, it cannot cause influenza.

Annual vaccination against influenza is recommended for:

•Adults and children with long-term heart or lung problems including asthma.

•Residents of nursing homes and residents of other chronic care facilities who have chronic medical problems.

•Persons over 65 years of age.

•Adults and children who have required regular medical follow-up or hospitalization during the preceding year because of chronic metabolic diseases including diabetes melli-

To Speak On Crane Library Lawn At 5PM

Hillary Clinton Will Visit Here Friday

First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton is definitely coming to Quincy Friday.

Mayor James Sheets said at press time the First Lady will speak on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, shortly after 5 p.m. Friday.

Sheets said that although she will be accompanied by local Democrats, including Sen. John Kerry and Congressional candidate Phil Johnston, the event is not a campaign stop.

"Her remarks will be related to policy initiatives, including education and the reopening of the Fore River shipyard," he said.

The mayor added that free tickets to the event will be handed out this week. The tickets are necessary for crowd control and security purposes, he said, because "several thousand" people are expected to attend.

"Everyone will need a free ticket to gain access to the viewing area," said Sheets. He also stressed that those who plan to attend must be there Friday by 4 p.m.

HILLARY CLINTON

Tickets were to be available yesterday (Wednesday) and today (Thursday) from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the wooden kiosk between City Hall Annex and the Quincy Center MBTA Station, as well as from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days at The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St.

A sign language interpreter is to be on hand for the event and handicapped seating will be available. No bottles or cans will be allowed.

City Councillor Paul Harold said this will not be Clinton's first trip to Quincy. She visited the Adams National Historic Site while attending Wellesley College, he said.

"She's a great admirer of Abigail Adams," said Harold.

Reports circulated last week that President Bill Clinton was to visit the city last Friday or Saturday. Although he did not, he announced at Logan International Airport in Boston that he was releasing $100 million in federal loan guarantees to modernize the shipyard.

Mrs. Clinton is not the only First Lady to visit Quincy. Lady Bird Johnson visited the Adams Site while her husband was President in 1967 and also made a return trip to the site last October.

$500 Abatement For City Service

Raymondi Plan Would Reduce Senior Tax Bills

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi wants to initiate a program that will give Quincy residents age 60 and older a $500 reduction in their property tax bills.

Raymondi plans to introduce a resolution at next week's City Council meeting proposing the formation of a Senior Workers' Abatement Program (SWAP) in Quincy. The program would allow the seniors' bills to be reduced by $500 in exchange for 100 hours of service performed for various city departments.

Raymondi said the program, which would be run by the Quincy Council on Aging, would benefit both the city and the seniors.

"It's good for the seniors, because a lot of seniors are finding it hard to get by in these hard economic times," he said. "And we get all of the skills of the senior citizen population. It's a program I've been wanting to take a leadership role in for a long time."

Raymondi said the services performed for the city could include clerical work or a number of other duties. The Council on Aging would accept forms filled out by seniors and would endeavor to match participants' skills with the job requests from various city departments.

Raymondi added that he spoken with Mayor James Sheets about the program and he is supportive of the concept. He will ask the mayor to request that the City Council appropriate $12,000 from the city's free cash account for 24 initial slots for interested seniors.

Going To City Council In November

Center Action Plan Wins Favorable Reaction

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The proposed Quincy Center Action Plan that will be administered by the city's downtown coordinator is gaining support throughout the community and will be presented to the City Council in November.

Bruce Arons, the downtown coordinator who works for Quincy 2000 and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, said a draft of the plan that has been presented to Mayor James Sheets' task force, the Quincy 2000 Planning Committee and, on Tuesday, to local property owners has received an overall favorable response.

Arons said the plan, which was prepared for Quincy 2000 by Sasaki Associates of Watertown, is "about 95 percent there." Issues and concerns brought up at the various meetings will be incorporated into the final draft, he said.

"We really are soliciting (comments) very sincerely," he said.

The main goals for Quincy Center, as outlined in the plan, include:

•Create a superior physical environment.

•Create an imageable and clearly defined downtown center.

•Establish a focused managerial structure and implementation agenda for Quincy Center.

•Establish a comprehensive marketing plan for the district.

Funding for some components of the plan would come from federal and state grants, city monies and possibly private donations, Arons said.

On Tuesday, Arons told local landlords the plan will help revitalize the downtown.

"There is a window of opportunity here," he said. "The potential for our community is great. The efforts of Quincy 2000 and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association will result in very positive change, and we think that will speed up in the next five to 10 years."

Maurice Freedman, senior consultant for Sasaki Associates, said the plan will focus on the downtown's three distinct areas: the civic/institutional/office area, which includes City Hall, Quincy College, the Thomas Crane Public Library, and other key buildings; the traditional retail subdistrict (lower Hancock Street) and the suburban retail subdistrict between Granite Street, School Street and the Burgin Parkway.

DOWNTOWN ACTION PLAN--Maurice Freedman, senior consultant for Sasaki Associates in Watertown, and Bruce Arons, Quincy's downtown development coordinator, discuss Quincy Center's three distinct districts--civic/institutional/office, traditional retail, and suburban retail--while outlining the Quincy Center Action Plan for local property owners Tuesday.

Freedman said in order for Quincy Center to be revitalized, three key components must be in place: a diverse retail market mix, an attractive physical environment and solid governmental structure and interest. While the support of Sheets and other city officials has been outstanding, he noted, the Action Plan outlines ways to attract new businesses and also improve the look of the downtown through improved signage and other development.

"If all three parts come together, we see this as an investment opportunity zone that will make people want to come to Quincy," said Freedman.

Those in attendance Tuesday raised some general questions about the specifics of the plan but were generally supportive. Arons said previous meetings were the same.

"We have received very positive support for the action plan," he said.

Arons and Freedman are scheduled to present the plan to downtown business owners and managers Tuesday, Oct. 15 at 6 p.m. at The Fours restaurant located near the Hancock Parking Lot.

Committee To Discuss Concourse East Link

The Quincy Center Concourse Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) will meet today (Thursday) at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at Quincy City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The committee will discuss options pertaining to the east side link of the proposed roadway that will connect Burgin Parkway with Hancock St. and the McGrath Highway in the downtown business district area.

CAC Chairman David Ezickson invites all interested Quincy residents to attend the open forum segment of the agenda at which time any suggestions from the general public may be presented.

The 10 members of the CAC are faced with a deadline to reach a decision and final recommendations regarding the $5.6 million roadway connector. City officials have announced that work on the bridge over the MBTA tracks is expected to begin next spring.

Quarry Street Park Cleanup Begins Friday

The Quarry Street Park land cleanup project will start Friday at 10 a.m.

The project will be conducted jointly by Avalon Residential, labor union representatives, and the Quincy Parks Department under the Cleaner Greener Quincy Program. Interested residents are invited to join the effort and the first stage of work to clear paths and clean up litter.

The day will mark the beginning of the work that will be shaping the park for a passive recreational area, for viewing scenic vistas and enjoying the nature in the middle of the historic City of Quincy. The area was designated as parkland by the City Council earlier this year.

For more information, call Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico at 376-1354 or Anneli Johnson at 479-1601.

Join Veterans, Local Officials In Pledge For Amendment

Johnston, Teague Among Supporters For Flag Protection

The two challengers for the 10th Congressional District seat joined veterans officials and local leaders in declaring their support for a Constitutional amendment to protect the American Flag at a press conference outside City Hall Tuesday.

Republican Edward Teague and Democrat Phil Johnson are among 13 candidates for federal office who have pledged their support for the amendment to a grassroos organization spearheading the flag protection movement.

The others are Gov. William Weld, a candidate for U.S. Senate; and Congressional candidates Jane Swift (1st District), Mark Steele (2nd District), Rep. Richard Neal (2nd District), Rep. Peter Blute (3rd District), Jonathan Raymond (4th District), Rep. Peter Torkildsen (6th District), Rep. Joseph Kennedy (8th District), Rep. Joe Moakley (9th District), and Paul Gryska (9th District).

"The backing we have received in Massachusetts will be crucial as we continue our campaign to pass an amendment to protect the flag," said Dan Wheeler, president of the Citizens Flag Alliance. The CFA, a not-for-profit, non-partisan coalition of civic, fraternal, veteran, business and labor organizations, sent questionnaires to every candidate for federal office in Massachusetts.

The CFA's goal is to pass a Constitutional amendment protecting the flag from intentional acts of physical desecration.

"By the time a new bill is introduced at the beginning of the 105th Congress, we expect to have secured pledges from a majority of members in both houses of Congress for the Flag Amendment," Wheeler said as a small group of interested veterans and local officials looked on.

Among those participating in the announcement were Congressional Medal of Honor recipient Charles MacGillvary of Braintree and Harold Russell, a World War II veteran who won a best supporting actor Oscar in 1946 in the film, "The Best Years of Our Lives."

Others taking part included John (Jake) Comer of Quincy, past national commander of the American Legion; Mayor James Sheets, and other local officials.

A bill to protect the flag passed overwhelmingly with bi-partisan support in the House during the 104th Congress. Last year, 312 members of the House (including more than 90 Democrats) voted for the amendment that would allow Congress to ban flag burning if it chose to do so.

Quincy Schools To Receive $39,726 In State Grants

The Quincy Public Schools will receive several Education Reform Fiscal Year 1997 Competitive Grants Awards totaling $39,726.

The recent announcement was made jointly by State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin.

The first grant is the $10,000 D.D. Eisenhower Professional Development Grant. The grant will be dedicated to provide assistance to local education agencies for improved teaching and learning.

"Teachers will have access to professional development activities and then incorporate the effective techniques to the educational needs of the student body," said Morrissey.

The $2,000 Safe School Program grant and the $22,726 Mckinley Homeless Assistance Act will insure that homeless children, and all youths will have the same free, safe and equal access to be public education, the delegation said.

In order to reduce the number of students from dropping out of school, the $5,000 Education Reform Reconstructuring Network grant funds the training for dropout prevention programs and basic skill remediation programs.

The grants, which are administered by the Department of Education, are designed to provide essential support for hundreds of innovative programs across the Commonwealth.

The legislative delegation praised the efforts of School Supt. Eugene Creedon and the Quincy Public School staff for their hard work in helping to acquire the grants.

AN ACTIVE APPROACH TO ALZHEIMER'S

One of the hardest things about Alzheimer's disease is that there seems to be little a person can do to fight it. Research is now indicating, however, that there is something everyone can do to make a positive difference: Live an active life. In studies of patients with Alzheimer's, doctors found that those who spent their lives in mentally of physically demanding occupations fare far better in holding onto memory than more inactive patients with similar brain damage. Whether the life-style involves managing an office full of employees, solving complex engineering problems or painting houses, the activity seems to build up a reserve so that the brain can then find a way around the debilitating symptoms of the disease. Given these latest findings, it would seem that one of the worst things a person can do is sit around and worry about the disease!

P.S. There is no cure for Alzheimer's disease, but early intervention can help lessen the impact of symptoms.

Living an active life, full of healthful eating as well as consistent exercise, can make a difference in preventing a host of illness and emotional conditions that arise as we age. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I are dedicated to treating the person, not just the symptoms. We are conveniently located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Call 472-2550 for an appointment. Presented as a public service for the benefit of all by the offices of COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE. We welcome your questions – we're here to answer them.

Remembering Dorothy Lamour

If someone asked me who my favorite celebrity has been during my years in the newspaper business, the answer would be easy: Dorothy Lamour. She was the first celebrity I ever met and interviewed. And I remember her fondly like--well, sort of like you remember your first girlfriend.

CUB REPORTER MEETS DOROTHY LAMOUR

It was back in September, 1942 and I was just out of Quincy High School, writing for the Ledger and waiting to go in the Navy.

She was one of Hollywood's biggest stars who made the sarong famous in her first movie "Jungle Princess" and by 1942 had appeared in three of the popular "road" movies with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope.

And now, she was "On The Road To Quincy" during a nation-wide bond tour to raise money to help fight World War II. Her Quincy stop was at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

And this then fuzzy-cheeked cub reporter actually got to meet and talk with her. Somebody introduced me to her. "How are you," she asked," in that honey, soft voice.

I froze.

"I-I-I," I stammered. It looked like it was going to be the shortest interview in newspaper history.

"Isn't Quincy lovely," she purred, trying to help me get through the interview. "I think it's a wonderful place. And the people are so friendly. It's one of the nicest cities I have ever been in."

"How do you like Quincy?" I asked--realizing too late that she had just told me.

She giggled and then led me through the whole interview--actually interviewing herself--so that a young, tongue-tied cub reporter could get what to him was his first big story.

Thomas Burgin was mayor at the time and had welcomed her to Quincy. She confided she thought he was "kind of cute."

My photographer sidekick, Laban Whittaker, covered the story with me. I pleaded with him to snap a photo of us if I got near her. He did and it is one of my prized possessions today.

I can still hear her now in that pretty, southern (New Orleans) voice appealing to the crowd that filled the stadium that day:

"Let's show our boys that we're not backing them 100 percent, nor 1,000 percent, nor 10,000 percent, but 1,000,000 percent.

"Let's dig down in our pockets and buy, buy, buy!

And, they dug down and bought, bought and bought!

I remember the late Joseph B. Grossman, of the Grossman lumber materials family bidding $4,000 for one of her autographed pictures. It was the top bid.

But when he went down to the platform to collect the picture, Dorothy gave him a big smile. It melted him. The next thing the crowd knew he was bidding against himself and raised the bid to $5,000.

That's how she affected people.

She raised $4,399,953 in defense bonds and stamps that day--which even now in today's era of ballooned figures was a pretty good chunk of money.

Eleven years later I was invited to see her again when she was appearing at a Boston nightclub.

And we had a good laugh about the Quincy meeting.

Then, for kicks as her husband, William Howard smiled, she slipped an arm through mine and pulled me down beside her.

11 YEARS LATER-- 'C'MON, YOU'RE NOT A CUB REPORTER ANYMORE.'

"Come on, you're not a cub anymore," she laughed.

Whit was there again with his camera to record the meeting.

She vividly remembered the Quincy visit.

"How's that cute mayor," she asked.

I cherish the memory of those two meetings with her and had always hoped we somehow would meet once again.

But now, sadly, with her death last week at 81, that will never be.

I've met a lot of celebrities and would-be celebrities down through the years.

She was one of the real nice ones. And because she came to the rescue of a young stammering cub reporter, she will always have top billing in my book.

City To Receive $40,000 Community Policing Grant

State Sen. Michael Morrissey, Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin and Police Chief Francis Mullen announce that Quincy will receive a $40,000 community policing grant.

The 1997 Fiscal Year Budget allocated $12.6 million for community policing grants for 286 police departments across the state, a total of 46 additional communities. The legislative delegation praised Mullen on his work to get this grant and the success of his community policing programs.

When taking long car trips with children, try to take your travel breaks at playgrounds—or at least an open field—so they can work off all their stored-up energy.

"Each city and town will have their own specific program," said Morrissey. "The grant will help fund a crime-fighting partnership between the community and police. Every community will utilize the grant money for their city's specific needs."

Programs in the past have included neighborhood watch programs, community police training and crime awareness activities.

The crime-fighting funds include grants that are awarded through a competitive application process and are administered by the Executive Office of Public Safety in a tiered system based on community population. All programs developed must utilize community resources and promote a closer working relationship between the police and the local residents.

Mullen said, "I am happy to get this grant and thank the legislative delegation for their efforts to promote public safety."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1940's view of the old Lincoln Theater that was located at 587 Washington St. in Quincy Point. Originally opened in the mid 1920's as the Casino, the name was changed to the Lincoln in 1929. Those familiar with the area when this picture was taken in the 40's will remember Woodruffs, the Lincoln Bowling Alleys and Lou Skolers store just beyond Rocco Vitales barbershop on the right. The snack bar was on the left. The theater closed in the late 1960's and was demolished. This is now the site of a REMax real estate office.

Johnston, Teague Among Supporters For Flag Protection

bers voted for the Amendment including Senators Dianne Feinstein and Jay Rockefeller, but the measure fell three votes short of the two-thirds majority needed for passage.

Wheeler and others pointed out incumbent Sen. John Kerry does not support the flag amendment. Weld, and Conservative Party candidate Susan Gallagher, each support the amendment. Flag proponents consider Massachusetts a key battleground in the fight for flag protection.

Teague and Johnston, who have sparred over some issues since the primary, put aside their partisan differences and expressed their support for the flag amendment.

"I'm a strong supporter of a Constitutional amendment preventing desecration of the American flag," said Teague, a U.S. Army veteran. "Burning the flag, or any other form of desecration, cannot be tolerated. The flag is a sacred symbol of our nation. You can't love your country, and scorn that symbol," he said.

Johnson said he signed on with the flag protection movement after talking with Comer and families of deceased combat veterans.

"I'm not a veteran but my father was a veteran. . . There were few things that upset my father as much as flag desecration. . . I concluded that my father, who passed away two years ago, would want me to support this flag amendment. So it's really in his memory and his honor that I tell you my strong support of this amendment," Johnston said.

The CFA said their questionnaire reflects the overall support for a flag protection amendment among the American people. A recent survey by Wirthlin Worldwide showed that more than three of four Americans would favor such an amendment.

Granite House Seeking Volunteers

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Granite House, a long-term residential education and treatment program for adolescents, is seeking volunteers to prepare meals for our residents.

As we have no cook on our staff, school and house staff members are responsible for preparing meals, which takes them away from other responsibilities. We are seeking three to four individuals who would be willing to offer an hour or two each week to assist the program in this area.

This commitment on the part of volunteers would significantly impact our staff's ability to meet all our resident's needs, and it would offer any volunteer an opportunity to be part of an exciting family-oriented treatment environment. Our present volunteers find their efforts here to be very rewarding.

Anyone having interest in this regard should call 479-4043, and ask for Buddy or Jennifer.

Dr. Djerf Blasts Survival Opponents

October 3-9
1970

By PAUL HAROLD

Dr. Charles Djerf, a former member of the School Committee and an officer of Survival Inc., blasted opponents of the organization's proposed residential treatment center in Germantown.

Speaking at the meeting of Church Women United at the Wollaston Congregational Church, Dr. Djerf said politicians had sabotaged the much needed rehabilitation housing proposal. He said he had no tolerance for "persons more interested with their political survival than with the community."

INDOOR RINK PROPOSED FOR MONTCLAIR

At a meeting of the Montclair School PTA, James McCormick, Sr., chairman of the Park and Recreation Board, announced that plans would be prepared for the construction of an indoor ice hockey rink at Bishop Field, in the black-topped area between the tennis and basketball courts.

Peter Cappola, spokesperson for the PTA, said that plans for a youth center at the site would be withdrawn.

K-9 CORPS REORGANIZED

Police Sgt. Frank Buckley said that the police K-9 corps that hadn't' been seen recently on the streets would be back in business within five days.

The reorganization dealt with hours and manpower assignments. Ideally, he said, there should be two men and two dogs on each shift.

The existing corps was made up of three officers, Buckley and Robert Forde and Joseph Buchanan and three dogs, Apache, Satan and Schultz.

For Election Day Nov. 5

500 Volunteers Needed To Help Get Out Kids' Vote

Five hundred volunteers or more are needed to help get out the Kids Vote in Quincy in the Presidential election Tuesday, Nov. 5.

For the second year, Quincy public, private and parochial school students kindergarten through high school will cast ballots in the Kids Voting program.

This year, the town of Plymouth is joining the program.

Last year, 4,737 Quincy students cast their own ballots in the city final election. Their voter turnout percentage was 47.78 percent, topping the adult turnout of 45.15 percent.

The volunteers are needed to staff the 30 Kids Voting polling places in various shifts between 6:45 a.m. and 8:30 p.m.

They will help students cast their ballots at the same polling places that their parents and other adults cast their's.

Their votes will not count in the actual election but Kids Voting, a non-profit grassroots education program, gives young people actual experience in the election process by casting ballots alongside their parents.

Each precinct in the city will have an area set aside for students to mark their Kids Voting ballot. The volunteers will help the students cast their ballot while not interfere with the adult voters.

The students and volunteers will follow the same check-in, vote, check-out procedure as that of adult voters.

The Kid Voters will mark their ballots for federal, state and county candidates and must also vote on the referendum question on whether to change the trapping and hunting laws. The ballots, especially prepared for Kids Voters, will be counted separately and the results announced election night long with the adult results.

At least three volunteers are needed at each of the 30 voting precincts which will be open to Kids Voters from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. The volunteers will serve on two-hour shifts throughout the day.

Kids Voting Massachusetts of which Quincy is the pilot program, furnishes the instructions and necessary materials.

Businesses and organizations are invited to "adopt" a precinct with the commitment to see that the precinct is staffed by at least three volunteers per shift throughout the day.

Those wishing to volunteer are asked to fill out and return the registration form on this page. Or, they may call Kids Voting Massachusetts Executive Director Harold Crowley at 471-6881.

"Kids Voting Massachusetts provides an ideal opportunity to volunteer and make a real difference in the lives of Quincy young people as well as making an important contribution to the future of our democracy," Crowley said.

FLUID SITUATION

One commonly overlooked maintenance procedure involves replacing the brake fluid. The reason that brake fluid is one of the most neglected and improperly serviced components is that many auto service manuals suggest draining and flushing the brake system only if there is evidence of fluid contamination and observable deterioration. Contamination and fluid deterioration, however, are inevitable and usually unnoticeable. By the time their effects are noticeable, the damage has already occurred. Brake fluid is exceedingly hygroscopic, meaning that it absorbs moisture from that atmosphere, likely through microscopic openings in flexible brake hoses or through openings around rubber seals. Once the brake fluid is contaminated by moisture, it begins to break down and its ability to prevent corrosion declines along with its boiling point and lubricating properties. This increases the likelihood of dragging brakes and lost braking power.

HINT: Dragging brakes refers to a condition in which the brakes remain partially applied, even though the foot has been taken off the brake pedal.

Sheila McIntyre Testifies At Organ Donation Hearing

Sheila McIntyre, wife of the late Mayor James McIntyre, testified Monday during the first-ever hearing on organ and tissue donation which was held at Harvard Medical School.

The discussion at the hearing, held by Congressman Joseph Moakley and Sen. Edward Kennedy, revolved around the severe shortage of transplant organs in the United States and the possible solutions to the shortage. Moakley, who received a liver transplant last year and Kennedy are among the founders of the bipartisan Congressional Task Force on Organ and Tissue Donation.

McIntyre has actively supported the cause since the deaths of her son William in December 1983 and her husband in March 1984. She told those at Monday's hearing she found some comfort after her son's death when she received letters from the New England Organ Bank, Eye Bank and Shriners Burn Institute telling how people had benefitted from the donation of William's kidneys, eyes and skin respectively.

"Fleeting moments they were--yet they surely helped," she said.

Her husband subsequently donated his eyes and skin, and McIntyre again received letters from the Eye Bank and Shriners.

McIntyre said she views organ donation through the eyes of a member of a donor family who sees it as a way not only to help those who suffer from various afflictions but also as a way to provide an emotional boost for those who grieve for the donors.

"I am always delighted to hear of successful transplant stories such as yours, Congressman Moakley," she said, "but my perspective is that of advocacy for the donor families because they have nothing but tremendous grief over their loss. Only if they are offered the opportunity to consider organ donation can they find the consolation that the children and I found as have other donor families.

"Although 'required request' legislation is now mandated, the caveat remains that if the physician feels that the next of kin 'can't handle it,' the request [for organ donation] need not be made," she added. "I believe very strongly that the hospital personnel do not have the right to make that decision for the family....When speaking before critical care nurses or physicians, I always stress that the decision to offer donation is not theirs to make--only is the chance to give those grieving the opportunity for consolation.

"For whatever reason, should the family decline, that's OK, but no one should be denied that source of comfort."

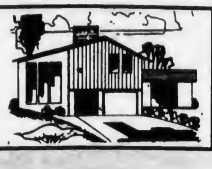
REAL ESTATE MARKET



Century 21 Goes Online

Homebuyers don't have to start looking for homes by pounding the pavement anymore.

Through Century 21 and America Online, they can have access to information about communities throughout the country right on their home computer.

"Through our relationship with America Online, we're providing consumers with important information about government, transportation and other relevant home-buying information," says Larry Rideout, regional director for Century 21 in Massachusetts. "In addition, America Online subscribers can then download information about cost of living, education, arts and culture, recreation, health care, crime, housing and jobs for major metropolitan areas. It's especially relevant for relocators or even those interested in moving within their area."

"The Century 21 system is plugging into real estate technology," says Laurie Moore-Moore, an industry consultant and co-editor of the Washington, D.C.-based real estate newsletter REAL Trends. "They've aligned with the largest Internet provider in the country, America Online, for consumer information and they're also using America Online to link their U.S. offices electronically. What it means for consumers is that Century 21 can provide information to buyer prospects all across the U.S. and deliver those prospects electronically to offices in destination cities. This means more buyer prospects for Century 21 sellers."

In place of time-consuming drives through neighborhoods looking for the right home, Century 21 Communities has assembled the comprehensive set of resources potential buyers need to research and select the neighborhood that's right for them before embarking on their search for a house.

"The information that is available through Century 21 Communities is impressive," said Arthur Foley, co-owner of Century 21 Annex in Quincy and Hanover. "It will put the nation at the fingertips of our consumers."

"We've clearly set the standard for real estate technology with this latest innovation," said Tony Lucacio, broker of Century 21 Merrimack Valley Homes in Burlington and Billerica. "Lots of companies have web sites, but trying to find them is like looking for a needle in a haystack. With America Online, we have access to more than 6 million potential buyers who can easily access us using the keywords Century 21 or Real Estate. That's a great plus for both buyers and sellers."

Century 21 Real Estate Corporation, a subsidiary of HFS Incorporated, is the largest residential sales organization in the world, with approximately 6,100 independently-owned and operated franchised broker offices in 14 countries and territories worldwide.

Flynn & Co. Sells 30 Acres In Quincy

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc.'s Commercial Real Estate division recently put together the sale of 30 acres of commercial real estate in Quincy.

The land, located off of Ricuitti Drive on the Quincy-Milton line, sold for $525,000 to Joseph Bates of Weymouth. The commercial land is zoned commercial/PUD and is prime for development. Flynn & Co. served as agent for U.S. Trust Company on Summer St. in Boston in this transaction.

"The development potential of this land is tremendous," said Flynn & Co. President Daniel J. Flynn III. "With its superior location off of the expressway and outstanding views, the development of the site is sure to be a positive addition to the city."

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc., located in the Heritage Building at 1495 Hancock St., Quincy Center, is a commercial real estate, auction, and property management firm with offices also in Springfield and Hyannis. For more information, call 479-9000.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Selecting A New Front Door For Your Home

(NAPS)—One way owners can improve both the value and appearance of their home is by installing a new entry door. An attractive, well-crafted entry door can be a true showpiece, immediately attracting the attention of guests as they arrive.

Simpson Door Company, a leading manufacturer of raised panel wood doors, offers the following suggestions for choosing the right door.

1. Examine your entryway. The location of your front entry can be a critical factor in door selection. If there is no overhang, the door will be exposed to the harshest of elements. Depending on how your house is situated, the door might receive full sunlight or complete shade. Care and maintenance are important considerations.

Inside the entry, you'll want to consider how much light you need. That will help you decide whether you want a design that features a glass insert, or an all-panel door.

2. Determine your architectural style. Is your house contemporary? Victorian? Colonial? The front door can do much to enhance or create the character of your home. Remember, a door is a focal point, so be sure to select a design that is in keeping with the rest of the architecture.

3. Develop a long-term plan. Believe it or not, buying a new front door is not an isolated event. Eventually, you may want to replace the interior doors of your house so that they will complement your new entry. If that's a possibility, you should choose an entry door that is part of a larger line. Many manufacturers offer "collections" that include everything from bifolds to French doors in the same design.

Perhaps you might also like to consider adding sidelights or a transom someday. Whatever the case, it is important to realize what your ultimate goals are, and how the door will fit into the overall picture.

4. Remember energy efficiency. Most people are looking for ways to reduce their heating bills through energy efficient building products. It may surprise you to know that many quality wood panel doors offer excellent efficiency. When energy is a concern, be sure to ask about how the door fared in laboratory testing.

There are also other elements that can be indicators of efficiency. Look at the glass in the door. If it is not insulated or coated, chances are it will not be your best bet for controlling heat loss.

Once you select your door, be sure to have it stained or painted by a qualified contractor or millwork craftsman. Proper care right from the start will help you maintain the value of your investment for years to come. For a free color brochure of wood panel door designs, call Simpson Door Company at 1-800-952-4057.

Hints On Selling A Home

(NAPS)—If you're planning to put your home on the market and want to sell it quickly, these proven tips from the experts at the CertainTeed Home Institute can help:

• Make sure the appearance of your home is neat and clean as prospects drive up to it. If the exterior needs some touch-up painting, it is worthwhile to do so where needed. Also consider planting some flowers and shrubs.

• Bake an apple pie and place fresh flowers throughout the house. Both not only make a home smell nicer, but add to its charm.

• If closets are packed tightly, remove some of the items and place in the garage. Today's homebuyers like plenty of closet space and filled closets give the feeling that they are too small.

• Upgrade the insulation levels in your attic. It is a simple job to do, especially with encapsulated fiber glass insulation products like Easy-Handler™. Today, many institutions offer energy efficient mortgages so if your home is insulated to today's energy standards it will potentially qualify a greater pool of buyers and possibly help you sell your home faster.

Homebuyers like plenty of closet space. Keeping yours half-filled gives the illusion that they are larger than they really are.

• Caulk and weatherstrip around windows, doors, electrical outlets and baseboards, again, for energy efficiency sake.

• Make the inside of your home bright and cheery by turning on the lights and opening up the window blinds.

• Get rid of clutter from the basement and try painting the basement floor battleship gray in a non-latex paint to make it appear clean and bright.

• Lastly, make sure your home is neat and tidy inside. Potential buyers want to picture themselves in the home and it is hard to do this if the home appears sloppy.

Recycling Information In NYNEX Yellow Pages

Detailed recycling information for Quincy area residents is in the new NYNEX Yellow Pages Recycling Guide.

The guide is designed to provide area residents with complete municipal recycling information and to relieve local recycling coordinators from calls they receive from consumers seeking information.

The Recycling Guide, located in the back of the NYNEX telephone book just before the NYNEX Postal Zip Code page, includes information on types of materials accepted in local programs along with addresses and phone numbers of community recycling centers.

Quincy area communities can now recycle old phone books in their local recycling programs, including Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Milton, Randolph and Scituate.

All NYNEX telephone directories in circulation are published with a minimum of 25 percent recycled content.

Raymondi Meeting Oct. 10 On Playground, Traffic

Ward 2 City Councillor will hold a neighborhood meeting Thursday, Oct. 10 at 7 p.m. at the Martensen St. Senior Complex, Sawyer Towers Community Room.

Topics will include improvements to Elm St. Playground and to traffic in three areas: Quincy Ave. at Water St., Scammell St. and Blanchard Rd.; South Street at Scammell St.; and Dysart and Elm Sts. Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon will be in attendance to answer any questions.

All are welcome. For more information, call 479-9044.

Tom King President Of Kiwanis Club

Thomas J. King, a vice president at Fleet Bank, was installed as president of the Kiwanis Club of Quincy for the 1996-97 year during a recent ceremony and dinner at the Common Market, West Quincy.

Other officers for the new year are:

Paul Graham, president-elect; Tony Agnitti, vice president; James Mullaney, treasurer; and Robert Bosworth, secretary. Serving on the Board of Directors will be Wallace Pimental, Walt Fraser, Robert Bunstein, Beverly Reinhardt (all one-year terms); and John Farmer, Richard Sweeney and John Keohane (two-year terms.)

Mullaney is the immediate past president of the club. Aldo Saluti serves as treasurer emeritus.

John Worswick, lieutenant governor for the Kiwanis District 17, served as the installing officer.

Yves Poirier, a distinguished past president and chairman of the club's special events committee, was master of ceremonies.

Approximately 70 Kiwanians and guests attended the function.

King has been active in Kiwanis since joining the service organization in January, 1990. He served on the Interclub Committee from 1991-94, including a year as chairman; the Membership Growth and Retention Committee from 1991-93 and the Finance Committee from 1994-95.

In addition, King was a distinguished club secretary, vice president and president elect before becoming club president.

King also serves in other capacities besides Kiwanis. He is presently a trustee and assistant treasurer of the South Shore Economic Development Corporation.

King began his career with Fleet (Shawmut) Bank in 1981 in the management training program. He served as branch manager until 1984 when he became a relationship manager in the commercial market. King has serviced small and middle market companies in Massachusetts since that time.

He received a bachelor of science degree in marketing/management from Bentley College and his masters degree in business administration from Suffolk University. He and his wife have two children and live in Duxbury.

Several long-time Kiwanians were honored for their many years of commitment to the service organization. Three Legion of Honor members, Don Deware (50 years), Win Bettinson (35 years) and Nils Johnson (30 years) were presented plaques in recognition of their service.

Kiwanis also recognized members for perfect attendance, past presidents and lieutenant governors as well as retiring officers and Board of Directors.

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy is celebrating its 72nd year. Kiwanis strives to develop, by precept and example, a more intelligent, aggressive and serviceable citizenship. It also attempts to provide a practical means to form enduring friendships, to render altruistic service, and to build a better community.

Over the years, the Kiwanis Club of Quincy assisted an array of worthy causes, including the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute, Iodine Deficiency Disorder, YMCA camperships, scholarships and other needy causes including underprivileged children.

QUINCY'S 2ND ANNUAL LEAF COMPOSTING PROGRAM

LAST YEAR...we composted over 2,500 tons of leaves, and saved over $200,000 of your tax dollars.

THIS YEAR...we hope to hit 4,000 tons, and save your valuable tax dollars.

1. RAKE YOUR LEAVES

2. BAG THEM

It is mandatory that you use the paper leaf composting bags sold at most stores. They're easy to fill, recyclable and biodegradable. Bag only leaves, twigs and grass clippings. No trash. No large branches.

3. PUT THEM ON THE CURB WITH YOUR TRASH.

Just separate them from your trash and recyclables, so we know which bags are which!

Kolson Seeks Solution For Sea St. - QSD Traffic Problems

City Council President Peter Kolson is working with other officials to solve traffic problems at the intersection of Sea St. and Quincy Shore Drive.

In recent months, an ongoing traffic problem at the intersection has caused a major inconvenience to residents from Merrymount, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, and Germantown and others traveling through the intersection, particularly during morning commuting hours.

Kolson said communications have been forwarded to MDC Commissioner David Balfour seeking to rectify the problem by making street and traffic light adjustments. As yet, the city has received no response.

Kolson is attempting to work with the MDC commissioner and the director of public safety simultaneously to find a solution.

The initial answer was to put a police officer at the intersection during the peak commuting hours of 7 to 8:30 a.m. to assure a smooth traffic flow, and Kolson said that with the presence of the police officer toward the end of the school year last spring, traffic did flow much smoother.

"However, this temporary solution was and will be used only until a permanent solution is in place. The decrease in traffic during the summer contributed to the smoother flow but now that we are into fall and the new school term, the problem has again escalated," he said.

Kolson said he is hoping for cooperation with the MDC and the Department of Public Safety but will also continue to work on an alternative plan through the mayor's office in an effort for the city to assume complete responsibility of the lights at the intersection.

"There is enough frustration during the day to say the least, without having to start the day with unnecessary commuting problems," he said.

A Breakthrough in Hearing Aid Technology.

If you've been waiting for the very latest hearing technology, we have important news for you...

Starkey's new Sequel Series hearing instruments offer performance advantages unlike any hearing aid we've offered before.

To achieve this preferred level of performance, an ideal hearing aid should not contribute undesirable perceptual elements – like distortion – that can result in poor sound reproduction, especially at high levels.

Thanks to Starkey's breakthrough SMArT Systems Technology, Sequel's sophisticated anti-distortion and efficient circuitry achieves an entirely new plateau in sound quality and performance.

ATTORNEY AT LAW

MATTERS OF INTENT

Most civil lawsuits are based on the law of torts, the actions (or inactions) of a person that injure either someone else, property, or both. A tort of negligence occurs when a person causes the injured party to suffer a loss as a result of failing to exercise a reasonable amount of care under the circumstances. An intentional tort occurs when someone deliberately takes some action (or fails to act) in a way that causes someone else harm. Common types of intentional torts include assault (raising the fear of imminent attack) and battery (making physical contact in an offensive manner), as well as fraud, conversion (stealing another person's property), false imprisonment, libel and slander. Another kind of intentional tort occurs when a person causes emotional stress in another through his or her outrageous conduct. This tort is known as intentional infliction of emotional distress and those who engage in it are liable for damages.

HINT: The intentional tort of false imprisonment involves confining someone against his or her will and does not necessarily restrict itself to police action.

When you need a lawyer for personal injury, automobile accidents or wrongful death claims, we are only a phone call away and would be more than happy to discuss your situation with you. The consultation is free and we will handle your case on a percentage fee basis. We only receive payment if a recovery is made on your behalf. Walsh 'Unbelievable' In North Quincy Win

Red Raiders Host Plymouth South Friday

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Note to fans planning to attend North Quincy's home opener against Plymouth South Friday night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium:

Keep an eye on No. 35, Brian "Muskie" Walsh, senior running back-linebacker for the undefeated Red Raiders (2-0).

In North's 16-14 win at Old Colony League opponent Falmouth Friday night, Walsh dominated play on both sides of the ball.

Offensively, he carried the ball 23 times for 191 yards (8.3 yards per carry), including a 27-yard touchdown run. Defensively. he collected 23 tackles (including three for a loss), forced a fumble and picked off a pass.

Following last week's 20-tackle performance (seven for a loss) against Stoughton, Walsh has compiled 43 tackles (10 for a loss) in two games this season.

"He's one of the best players in the Old Colony League, without question," said Red Raider head coach Ken McPhee. "After this game, coaches came up to me and told me that was the best two-way performance they had ever seen.

"He was unbelievable. He was all over the place, making big plays. The rest of the defense feeds off him emotionally. He comes up with the big hit and gets everyone pumped up. He's definitely All-Scholastic material."

In the first quarter, Walsh blew past the Clippers' defense for a 27-yard score and a 6-0 lead for North Quincy. Jim Finn's extra point was blocked, but he increased the Red Raiders' lead to 9-0 in the opening quarter with a 22-yard field goal.

Along with his field goal kicking and kickoffs, McPhee was impressed with Finn's punting prowess.

"He booted a 55-yard punt all the way in the air and kicked us out of trouble," said McPhee. "That was a big-time punt. He kicked it from our 25 to their 20. It was amazing.

"If he's not the best punter I've ever coached, he's easily one of the best. He's averaging well over 40 yards a punt this season. Our whole kicking game is in pretty good shape."

RED RAIDERS running back-linebacker Brian "Muskie" Walsh ran all over Falmouth last week for 191 yards and a touchdown. Walsh, who wears No. 35 (not No. 41 as seen here in scrimmage), smothered the Clippers' offense, recording 23 tackles, including three for a loss. He also forced a fumble and intercepted a pass in North's 16-14 victory Friday night.

Falmouth's talented running back Willie Ford scored the first of his two touchdowns on a 36-yard run, and Tom Bushy's extra point brought the Clippers to within two, 9-7, in the second quarter.

Before the half ended, the Red Raiders got some breathing room when quarterback Tom Coughlin kept it himself and scored on a five-yard run. Finn's extra point was good, and North led, 16-7, at the break.

"Tom did an extremely good job," said McPhee. "He's really coming of age. He ran for about 55 yards on some big, big plays. When we needed yards, he got first downs for us. He had some nice touch passes for first downs. He just played an outstanding game."

Ford, who rushed for nearly 150 yards on 30 carries, rumbled 26 yards into the end zone for his second score of the game in the third quarter.

"Ford's as good a runner as I've seen around," said

Point Panthers Notch First Win Of Season

The Quincy Point Panthers notched their first win of the season with a 30-8 victory over the Milton Mustangs in the second week of the Quincy Youth Football League season.

The Panthers rolled to a 24-0 halftime advantage thanks to the two-way play of Kris Kamborian and Joe Thorley, along with the running game of Mark Robertson.

Mike Lorenzano and John Lupo turned in strong first-half performances for the winners. James LaFleur played a fine game at receiver, scoring one of four Panther touchdowns.

Milton, in its first year in the QYFL, got on the board with its first points of the year, late in the third quarter.

The Panthers answered with another score but the Milton defense stopped the two-point conversion attempt.

Sunday at 4 p.m. at the Stadium, the Panthers battle the undefeated Houghs Neck Manets.

The standings:

West Quincy Elks (2-0), Houghs Neck Manets (2-0), North Quincy Apaches (1-1), Milton Mustangs (0-2), Squantum Storm (0-2).

$22,000 Raised For Charities, Scoreboard

Nearly 2,000 Compete In Degan Road Race

Along with preserving the memory of the fallen U.S. Marshall, the fourth annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race raised funds for Quincy DARE and for the building of a new scoreboard at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Dan Stock, one of the race's organizers, said nearly $22,000 was raised this year, doubling last year's total of $11,000. A portion of the funds was donated to Quincy DARE, Toys for Tots, and Marine Corps charities. Stock said approximately $10,000 was set aside for the new scoreboard at the Stadium.

The scoreboard, Stock said, is scheduled to be unveiled at a ceremony before the annual Thanksgiving Day showdown Nov. 28 between Quincy High School and North Quincy High School at the Stadium.

Nearly 1,500 registered runners participated, though Stock said the number of participants grew to almost 2,000 with the many Marine Corps racers and other servicemen and women who entered the day of the event.

Among those were "Degan's Devils," members of the Marine Wing Support Squadron 474, who participated in memory of Degan, their fallen reserve commander.

Also participating in the race were Gov. William Weld, Mayor James Sheets and several other Quincy elected officials, along with Bryan and William Degan Jr., sons of Degan, the late Quincy native who was killed in an FBI standoff four years ago.

In the women's 10K division, Tracey Timmins of Quincy captured top honors with a time of 39.14. South Weymouth's Marilou Moore and Braintree's Maureen Lamir came in second and third. Quincy's Kathleen Dunn (45:12) and D.M. Parry (45:14) finished fourth and fifth.

Boston's Jay Mustapha won the men's 10K division with a time of 34:27. David Donahue (34:48) of Norwell and John Saville of Brockton (35:09) rounded out the men's top three finishers.

In the men's 5K division, Christopher Ballum of Quincy came in first with a time of 18:24. Fellow Quincy residents Brian Klier (18:37)and Joseph Linskey (19:22) finished second and third, with Patrick McGahan (20:43) in fifth.

Gayle Laing repeated as champion of the women's 5K division, winning with a time of 20:35. Ginny Linney of Brighton and Tina Currin of Framingham placed second and third in the event.

Dottie Klied of Quincy won the women's age group 40-49 division in the 5K race in 24:41.

Louise Nortell and Regina Hussey, both of Quincy, came in first and second in the women's age group 50-59 division of the 10K race. Nortell won in 58:53, with Hussey the next finisher at 61:29.

In the women's age group 70-98 division, Quincy's Eileen Glora (58:33), Irene Tordoff (60:10) and Camille Horkum (61:55) swept the top three spots in the 5K race.

Quincy also swept the women's age group 60-69 division in the 5K race, with Mary Depolo (48:42) leading the way. Finishing second through fourth were Irene Parry (50:37), Ramona Shea (53:24) and Marjorie Morrissey (54:10).

Four Quincy youngsters dominated the girl's 16 and under division of the 5K race, paced by Genevieve O'Brien and Lynda Wilson, who finished first and second with times of 23:29 and 23:30. Laurie Flynn came in fourth (24:04) and Sarah Kane placed fifth (25:14).

In the men's 70-98 age group, Ray McPeck of Quincy came in first in the 5K race with a time of 44:56. Quincy's John Noonan placed third at 68:45.

North Quincy's Robert Rantuccio captured first place in the men's 50-59 age group with a time of 20:48 in the 5K race. David Gibbons of Quincy came in fourth at 24:49.

Quincy's Brian Breslin and Eric Wilson finished one-two in the boy's 16 and under division of the 10K race. Breslin came in first at 43:34 followed by Wilson at 51:26.

New Zealand's Gavin Foulsham took home top honors in the wheelchair division, finishing the race in 21:46. Quincy's Fran Reavy finished fourth with a time of 29:52.

"It has become a real city of Quincy event," said Stock. "It's not just a road race anymore, either. We have a lot of family activities and everyone gets involved, including the city's senior citizens.

"The race is getting known. Every year, the numbers go up a lot. It just gets bigger and bigger."

Presidents Look To Bounce Back At Taunton Friday

Quincy Overpowered By B-R Ground Attack

By LIAM FITZGERALD

In Friday night's 28-0 loss to Old Colony League foe Bridgewater-Raynham, Quincy held the Trojans to 34 passing yards.

Unfortunately for the Presidents, those yards came on one play, a 34-yard touchdown toss from quarterback Mark Nixon to Ken Collins.

As is turned out, the Trojans (2-1) didn't have to pass the ball to win this game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Sophomore running back Doug Bessette (14-101, TD) and junior running back Sean Lennon (5-86, 2 TD's) sparked a consistent ground attack which racked up 240 yards against Quincy (1-2).

Despite the loss, Quincy head coach Peter Chella commended his team's effort against a powerful B-R squad.

"I'm proud of our kids, because they never packed it in," he said. "We were never out of the game physically. They (B-R) are a tough team, in the class Barnstable was last year, a hard-nosed team.

"They present a tough combination: tough, strong linemen and quick, powerful running backs. They are real strong up front and just kind of wore us down."

The Presidents will look to bounce back Friday night at 7 when they visit Old Colony League foe Taunton (1-2), which has averaged just over six points a game this season.

"We have to puli together and dedicate ourselves to our next game against Taunton," said Chella. "I'm convinced we'll come back with a victory next week."

In their victory over QHS, the Trojans took command on their first series of the second quarter. On the third play of the drive, Bessette broke up the middle, shook off Quincy tacklers and scampered 36 yards for the game's first score. The first of Brian Ronayne's four extra points gave B-R a 7-0 lead.

"We got caught in a change," said Chella. "We were trying to switch up and confuse them, but he (Bessette) burst into a hole in the middle and scored."

Bessette, who often spun away and eluded the grasp of President defenders for extra yardage, impressed Chella with his size and strength.

"He's a real good back and doesn't mind the contact," said Chella. "He has tremendous physical maturity for a kid his age. He'll spin, bounce off and get a few more yards.

"He broke a lot of tackles tonight. And we're going to have to see him two more times (in the next two years)."

On their next possession, the Trojans increased the bulge to 14-0 when Lennon crossed the goal line untouched for a one-yard scoring run. Lennon's first TD capped a nine-play, 61-yard drive which shaved three minutes off the clock late in the half.

Quincy's offense started to click as the half drew to a close, but a penalty negated a huge gain deep in Trojan territory. On a second and four from B-R's 49, Quincy quarterback Mark Glynn (8-16, 83 yards) hit Mark Belanger with a short toss, which Belanger brought to the Trojan 15. The play was called back by a holding penalty on Quincy, and Glynn was sacked on the next play as the first half concluded.

The Trojans put the game completely out of reach with two touchdowns in the third quarter. The first came on Nixon's 34-yard pass to Collins on B-R's first possession of the second half.

After holding the Presidents to two yards and forcing them to punt, Lennon found an opening on the right side and outran Quincy's secondary for a 38-yard touchdown run, his second of the game.

B-R not only controlled the game offensively, but it also prevented Quincy's offense from making a comeback. Glynn, who was sacked five times, found himself under pressure from the massive Trojan defensive line more often than not.

"The first two games, we gave him (Glynn) a lot of protection, but that didn't happen tonight," said Chella.

The Presidents managed only 137 total yards from scrimmage (95 passing, 42 rushing), their lowest output of the season.

"I told our team we faced a very good team, " said Chella, "and that we have a lot of good football left to play. A win this weekend will cure all our ails."

Walsh 'Unbelievable' In North Quincy Win

McPhee. "He makes people miss, and he's a big, tough runner. 'Muskie' (Walsh) did put him out for a few series with a great hit, though."

Bushy's point after Ford's second TD was good, cutting North's lead to 16-14 in the third quarter. However, that would be the game's last score as both defenses stiffened up, keeping both offenses off the scoreboard the rest of the game.

"Our defense was able to keep the rest of their offense in check for the most part," said McPhee. "Our defensive coaching staff (defensive coordinator Earl Metzler, assistant coach Sean Glennon) did a great job."

McPhee was also pleased with the entire team's effort, in particular the blocking of the offensive line, backs and receivers.

""Charlie (Plaskasovitis) was exceptional, blocking and tackling, and (Mike Powers) did a nice job of blocking," he said. "The two offensive guards, (Norm) Connell and (Brian) Wells played well.

"The two offensive tackles, Todd DeBoer and Kevin Bowes aiso looked good. Bowes had a real solid two-way game. At the wing, Frank McNamara did a super job. "The wide receivers (Pat Egan, Tim Semchenko, Finn) did a great job blocking."

Regarding North's home opener Friday against Plymouth South (1-2), McPhee hopes the Red Raiders will continue to play with the same intensity they have the first two games.

"We're playing with confidence now, but we can't get overconfident," he said. "They're not a great team, but there not as bad as some think. They play a lot of young kids, and they have a lot of quickness.

"They put the ball in the air a lot and run a bunch of different formations. If we don't take anything for granted and not take them lightly, we should be O.K.

"Two weeks ago, if you told me we'd be 2-0, I'm not sure I would've believed you. We didn't look good in the last two scrimmages, but we have really played some outstanding football the last few weeks."

Soccer

O'Donnell Leads North Girls Past Quincy, 1-0

On the strength of freshman Caitlyn O'Donnell's third goal of the season, the North Quincy girls soccer team edged Quincy, 1-0, Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

O'Donnell, a quick-footed wing, took a pass from sophomore midfielder Kristen Bowes and drove a low shot which just snuck by the far post, out of the reach of Quincy netminder Crystal Kazolias. North's Hillary O'Donoghue, playing despite a hamstring injury, began the play with a solid cross to Bowes.

Earlier, senior tri-captain Lisa Bragg stopped Leanne Martin from close range on Quincy's best scoring chance of the evening. Neither team generated much offense, with North dominating play in the first half before Quincy took control for part of the second half.

Among those who played well for North were midfielders Jill Picardi and freshman Ashley Murphy and defenders Katie Koch, Rachael Powers and Kristen Keohane.

North's JV squad also defeated Quincy, 3-0, behind goals by Erin Tormey, Kathlyn Gates and Kristin Coughlin.

Earlier in the week, defending Old Colony League champion Bridgewater-Raynham used a strong first half, building a 4-0 lead en route to a 7-0 shutout win over the Raiders.

North was flat and played ineffectively for most of the game. Some bright spots for North was the play of defenders Maureen Casey and Katie Koch, while Laura Shea also played well.

In the first game of the week, North dropped a hard fought 3-1 decision to Weymouth at the Wildcats' home field.

Weymouth scored early from 18 yards out. North came back to tie the game as Ashley Murphy's rocket from 25 yards out was saved, but Betsy Stone collected the rebound and scored from five yards out for her fourth goal of the season. The goal was only the second allowed by Weymouth keeper Heather McIntosh this year.

The Wildcats took a 2-1 lead into the half, scoring with five minutes to play. Bragg made a brilliant save to stop the Wildcats' first bid, but the Raiders did not clear the rebound, leaving Bragg with no chance at stopping the goal.

North outplayed Weymouth in the second half as Picardi, Koch and Kristen Keohane were all solid in their defensive end. The Raiders nearly tied the game with 10 minutes left as Caitlyn O'Donnell was sent in on a breakaway. However, she lost her footing while shooting and was unable to tie the game up. Weymouth scored a late goal to ice the win.

Liz Bennett and Dorothy Cronin played excellent defensive games for the Raiders, while forward Melissa Keefe also played well.

North (3-5-2) played Plymouth South at home yesterday (Wednesday), then visits Falmouth Friday for a 7 p.m. varsity game. The JV game is at 5 p.m.

U.S. House Passes Bill In William Degan's Honor

The U.S. House of Representatives has unanimously approved a bill sponsored by Congressman Gerry Studds to extend educational assistance to the children and spouses of federal law enforcement officers slain or disabled in the line of duty.

The bill, known as the Federal Law Enforcement Dependents Assistance Act, honors the memory of Deputy U.S. Marshal William F. Degan, a Quincy resident who gave his life in the line of duty during the violent confrontation between federal marshals and white separatist Randy Weaver at Ruby Ridge, Idaho on Aug. 21, 1992.

The Studds bill extends to families of federal law enforcement officers the same benefits currently provided to survivors and dependents of members of the Armed Forces who are killed or disabled in the line of duty.

In a statement released following the House's action last week, Studds said:

"I am thrilled that the House has approved this measure. It is a fitting tribute to Bill Degan, a patriot who responded to the call of duty and a husband and father devoted to the father he left behind.

"The Congress long ago established an educational assistance program for the survivors and dependents of members of the Armed Forces who are killed or disabled in the line of duty. Today we have acknowledged that the brave men and women who put their lives on the line to ensure our domestic tranquility deserve no less.

"This legislation will guarantee that Bill's sons, William Jr. and Brian, and others in their situation, will be able to afford the kind of education their parents would have wanted them to have.

"This is a victory for the men and women of the U.S. Marshal Service and their colleagues throughout the law enforcement community who have worked so hard in support of this legislation and who continue to exhibit the courage and selflessness that Bill Degan so exemplified.

"Most of all, this is Karen Degan's day," Studds added in tribute to Degan's wife. "She has earned our admiration for her dignity and courage, and our thanks for all she has done to honor Bill's memory and enrich his legacy."

Studds also credited Thomas R. Kiley, a Boston attorney and close friend of the Degan family, for initiating the campaign in today's House action.

The bill was co-sponsored by Congressman Jon Fox (R-Pa.) and the entire Massachusetts Congressional delegation. The Senate approved an identical measure sponsored by Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) on Sept. 20. The bill now goes to President Clinton who is expected to sign it into law.

Quincy P.A.L. All-Stars Charity Softball Game Oct. 8

The Quincy Police Athletic League All-Stars will play the New England Ice Sharks in a charity softball game Tuesday, Oct. 8 at 6 p.m. at Adams Field, with proceeds benefiting the Police Athletic League and Quincy's Olympic hopeful, Karen Cashman.

The Quincy P.A.L. All-Stars will be led by captains Mayor James Sheets and Quincy Police Officer John Kelly Jr., president of the P.A.L. The P.A.L. team will consist of officers from P.A.L. and various city officials, including City Council President Peter Kolson and other city councillors.

The Ice Sharks will be led by former Boston Bruins' captain Rick Middleton, along with former Bruins Kenny Linesman, Johnny "Pie" Mackenzie, Brad Park, Jay Miller, Lyndon Byers, former Boston Red Sox pitcher Bill Lee, former New England Patriot Mosi Tatupu, Olympic bronze medal winner Jim Pedro, NESN sports announcer Christian Mastriani and hockey standout Cleon Daskalakas.

All of the athletes will sign free autographs and numerous raffles will be held. Refreshments will be available.

For ticket information, call 1-800-337-8278.

Excel Marketing President Speaks At Chamber Breakfast

Paul Talkowski, president of Excel Marketing, spoke at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce's recent monthly "90-Minute Seminar."

The seminar was entitled "Powerful Ideas for Marketing Success." Talkowski spoke on the broad spectrum of marketing tactics to an audience of business people and fellow Chamber members from all over the South Shore. A question-and-answer session followed.

"Our main goal for the seminar was to provide each person in attendance with some bit of marketing advice that will ultimately help their company grow," said Talkowski after the seminar. "Excel Marketing is very similar to all of the businesses that were there, so from a marketing standpoint we can really relate to their needs."

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"Stubborn as a mule." No one seems to know how or when the saying started. The Bible says something about it. In Psalm 32 we read, "Be not as the horse or as the mule which have no understanding." Maybe the saying comes from there.

Some people are more stubborn than others. Stubbornness can be described as hard-headedness, hard to get along with, set in one's ways and so on. When one is in such a mood or has that attitude, it is often impossible to reason with that person. As such times 'they have no understanding' has special meaning. It takes patience to try to reach an understanding. When understanding is reached, stubbornness vanishes like a smoke ring ... When two people stubbornly hold opposing views, it is impossible to reach an understanding because neither one strives with understanding for an understanding. When an issue is big enough, it is important for at least one of the two 'stubbornheads' to have an understanding of the other person's lack of understanding.

Board Suspends Restaurant License For One Day

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board voted to suspend the liquor license for one day at Sarsfields, 1464 Hancock St. citing violations of closing guidelines and for delivering more than two drinks to a person at one time.

Owners Declan and Marianne Kelly were told they have five days in which to appeal to the ABCC The one day suspension which will be on a Friday followed reports from Sgt. Richard Laracy, Quincy Police Liquor Inspector and Lt. Robert Crowley, Quincy Patrol Commander.

Laracy told the board that he entered the establishment and found that drinks were still being served as late as 1:50 a.m. He said he noted that a patron picked up six bottles of beer at the bar and was carrying them to the dining room.

Laracy said he has "tried to work with Kelly" and said "it can't be done without some kind of a warning by the board."

Crowley said when he rode by at around 1:20 a.m. he saw numerous people at the bar and when he went inside, "no one was telling them to leave". Mr. Kelly said they were "waiting for cabs". However, when Crowley observed the patrons leaving, he noted that most were driving off in their own cars.

Kelly presented a letter from a cab company confirming that Sarsfields is more diligent in calling cabs than anyone in the city.

Chairman Joseph Shea said having an establishment in the square is like a "two headed dragon". The area is non residential and there are no neighbors to complain. Thus, he said it all falls on the police department.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, after listening to Laracy and Crowley said he thought it was all pretty "clear cut" and suggested the suspension.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said Laracy and Crowley "reflected his position" and recommended a 12 midnight closing time and no alcohol be dispensed with after 12 midnight for one year. Following a discussion involving board members Building Inspector Matt Mulvey and Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue, the board voted to suspend his recommendation.

Shea said if anything happens within a year, Sarsfields would then have to close at 12 midnight instead of 1 a.m.

Shea noted that if the Kellys plan to appeal, and the ABCC agrees with the board, then the board will decide which Friday the restaurant will close before the end of the year.

Sheets: City Funding Not Necessary For Shipyard Opening

"We have the full weight of the White House behind us now," said Sheets. "There's still work to be done, but I'm very confident in the future of shipbuilding in Quincy. I would be very surprised if we don't build ships. I believe we're going to build ships."

The mayor said the success to this point can be attributed to a joint effort between Clinton, Sens. Edward Kennedy and John Kerry, Congressman Gerry Studds, Gov. William Weld, Emmanouil and the city.

The reopening of the shipyard would create 1,000 shipbuilding jobs, Sheets added. If all goes according to plan, hiring could begin next spring, he said.

Raymondi Plan Would Reduce Senior Tax Bills

If the council approves the program, participants will have to be Quincy residents, at least 60 years old, a property owner who lives in the property for which the abatement is used, and the only member of the household participating in the program. Seniors eligible for other real estate tax exemptions will be excluded from the SWAP. Hours worked at appointed positions on municipal boards, committees and commissions also will be excluded.

Raymondi said the program is modeled after similar efforts used in about 10 other Massachusetts communities.

'National Coming Out Day' At Crane Library Oct. 9

The Impact Quincy Gay-Straight Alliance will celebrate "National Coming Out Day" Wednesday, Oct. 9 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The event is being held in conjunction with the celebration of Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual History Month in October.

Among the featured speakers will be Stephen Driscoll, president of the Quincy High School Class of 1968; Tennille Draffen, a 1996 Quincy High graduate and Angela Bohl, a 1995 graduate of North Quincy High School. Also on hand will be Mary Brelsford and Norman Grenier, who participated in the event last year.

All are welcome.

Bank Of Braintree Develops Future Marketing Strategy

Bank of Braintree has developed a new marketing strategy for the future.

In March 1994, the bank teamed with McKay Fried & Partners Inc., a full-service advertising and public relations agency, to launch a comprehensive award-winning and highly recognizable advertising campaign. In addition to transforming the bank into a premier community commercial lending institution, the campaign also assisted the bank to grow physically and financially.

Prior to unveiling its fall campaign, bank officials encountered a challenging decision--to continue with the trademark ads or implement an entirely new creative execution. After much research and analysis, with a focus on current consumer trends, Bank of Braintree and its marketing team, McKay Fried, determining to forge ahead with the popular and effective original concept of customer testimonials.

Don Olson, president and CEO of Bank of Braintree, said, "Our past advertising campaigns have been completely on target and repositioned the bank according to our strategic focus. While many of us wanted to see a fresh look prior to entering our fifth campaign, research and customer attitudes told us to continue with the successfully proven creative execution."

The bank's campaign, which caused an immediate branding over two years ago, has become a South Shore symbol and the talk of the business community. Bank officials said many current and prospective clients have inquired as to the feasibility of having their business featured in one of the ads.

Recognized throughout the South Shore, the Bank's campaign not only illustrates its growth and success, but also highlights its pride in Bank of Braintree's reputable and well-respected client list. The fall 1996 campaign will continue the tradition, and emphasize the industry theme that customers choose to leave "big banks" and come to community banks like Bank of Braintree for its attention and personal service.

Bank customers to be highlighted in the most recent campaign are successful South Shore business owners whose names and faces are as well known as the companies they run. They include: Paul Hart, principal and CEO, Lantana, LLC; Dana Katz, president, Milton's; Bruce Ayers, president, Ayers Handicap Conversion and Sean Galvin, president, Galvin Construction.

John McKay, president and CEO of McKay Fried, said, "Our agency is extremely pleased with the success of previous Bank of Braintree campaigns. From the first campaign in spring 1994, the bank was instantaneously branded as a commercial lending institution and has demonstrated such proven success since that we could not recommend moving away from the original execution. We are all looking forward to the impending launch and the overwhelmingly positive response we have encountered in the past."

Bank of Braintree, with nine branch offices operating along the South Shore in Quincy, Braintree, Hanover and Randolph, is a division of Walden Bancorp.

Democrats Rally At Marina Bay

Johnston Win Upheld

Delahunt To Challenge Recount Figures In Court

Recounts have upheld Philip Johnston as the Democrat nominee in the 10th Congressional District but runner-up William Delahunt is going to court to challenge the recount figures in three towns.

Secretary of State William Galvin certified Johnston as the official winner of the Sept. 17 primary by 181 votes--85 less than his election night 266-vote margin.

Galvin gave the go-ahead to have the Nov. 5 election ballots printed with Johnston's name on them.

Delahunt said this week he will challenge the recount figures in three of the nine communities--Weymouth, Abington, and Orleans where the number of blanks were high.

Delahunt said he will ask a Superior Court judge to re-examine ballots in Weymouth, Abington and Orleans, saying flaws in the punch-card system used by those towns may have cost him the election.

"My purpose is to give voice to voters who braved a driving rainstorm to vote and had their ballot 'blanked' by a flawed punch-card system in these three communities," said Delahunt. "I will ask a Superior Court judge to examine these almost 1,000 contested ballots to record the clear intent of the voter to cast a ballot in this contest. We will ask for expedited action so that the Democratic Party can unite behind the winner of the recount process in the Superior Court."

Last week, Delahunt told The Quincy Sun he did not expect the recount to make a difference but the alleged problems with the punch-card system demand that the integrity of the democratic process be upheld.

He said the punch-card system is not reliable because sometimes a voter thinks his or her vote has registered when in fact the stylus used has not actually punctured the card.

The Democratic winner will square off against Republican Ed Teague of Yarmouth in the Nov. 5 final election.

Massachusetts Secretary of State William Galvin has said that any lawsuit challenging the 10th Congressional District primary would throw general-election planning into chaos and possibly disenfranchise some voters.

Galvin said Massachusetts ballots for the Nov. 5 election, by contract, had to be sent to the printer by Tuesday. At press time, it was unclear how Delahunt's actions would affect that timetable.

Johnston, who claimed victory in the primary following the recount, held a second victory party Monday night in his Marshfield headquarters.

National Troopers Endorse Teague

The National Troopers Coalition has endorsed state Rep. Edward Teague, Republican nominee for Congress in the 10th District.

"Ed Teague has been a champion for the Massachusetts State Troopers and other local police officers," said Jim Rhinebarger, chairman of the National Troopers Coalition. "While serving as state representative, Ed worked closely with the Massachusetts State Troopers on issues ranging from new police cruisers to tough on crime measures. We are proud to endorse his candidacy for Congress."

The National Troopers Coalition has over 45,000 members nationwide and 2,100 statewide.

Rhinebarger pointed to Teague's stands in support of mandatory minimum sentencing, the death penalty, the truth in sentencing. Especially important to the National Troopers Coalition was Teague's effort to allow the death penalty for those convicted of killing a police officer.

One of Teague's top priorities for the next Congress is fighting crime. His Ten Point Plan calls for deporting alien criminals after they serve their sentence, ending frivolous appeals for inmates on death row, and guaranteeing restitution for victims.

Invited To Unveil Statue

First Lady May Spring To Honor Abigail Adams

By MICHAEL WHALEN

First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton may visit Quincy again in the spring to pay tribute to another First Lady.

Mayor James Sheets said this week the Quincy Partnership has invited Clinton and her daughter Chelsea to unveil a statue of First Lady Abigail Adams in a dedication ceremony scheduled for Saturday, May 3. The ceremony is being held by the Partnership, a non-profit organization dedicated to preservation and community enhancement.

SJC Rules:

Delahunt The Final Winner

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The state Supreme Judicial Court (SJC) has declared Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt the winner of the Sept. 17 Democratic primary in the 10th Congressional District race.

The court's six justices made their decision Tuesday. Delahunt, a Quincy resident, will face Republican Rep. Ed Teague of Yarmouth, the Massachusetts House of Representatives Minority Leader, in the Nov. 5 final election. The winner will claim the seat held for 24 years by Congressman Gerry Studds.

"I'm glad that it's over, but it ain't over," an elated Delahunt told reporters in front of Quincy City Hall Tuesday. "It's the beginning of the end. We're ready to move on, and we're going to win this seat."

Delahunt's final margin of victory was not known at press time. A formal press conference was scheduled for later in the day.

Delahunt initially appeared to have lost the election to Philip Johnston of Marshfield, former New England director of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, by 265 votes. After a subsequent recount in several communities reduced Johnston's ruling to 175, however, Delahunt turned to Superior Court Judge Elizabeth Donovan who declared that the district attorney actually had won by 108 votes.

Johnston's last-ditch effort to have the SJC over-

Mullen: All Sex Offenders Must Register With Police Dept.

Police Chief Francis Mullen announces that under the State's Sex Offender Registry Law, which took effect Oct. 1 for past sex offenders and Oct. 3 for those under supervision, any sex offender living in Quincy must register with the Quincy Police Department.

"Anyone convicted of a sex offense or adjucated as a youthful offender or delinquent juvenile by reason of a sex offense, or released from supervision for such an offense after Aug. 1, 1981, must register with their local Police Department," said Mullen. The law was signed on Aug. 5.

Sex offenses included under the law are: Indecent assault and battery on a child under 14; indecent assault and battery on a mentally retarded person; indecent assault and battery on a person who has obtained the age of 14; rape including aggravated and carnal abuse; rape of a child under 16 with force; rape and abuse of a child; assault with intent to commit rape; assault of a child under 16 with intent to commit rape; kidnapping a child under the age 16; open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior; and unnatural and lascivious acts with a child under 16.

Mullen said anyone needing information on the law may call 1-800-93MEGAN, a special toll-free information line which contains information on who must register, and how the public can obtain the information. Anyone 18 years of age or older may also receive at no cost from the Criminal History Systems Board a report on whether an identified individual by name, date of birth or other personal identifying characteristics is a sex offender, a list of convictions for sex offenses and dates of convictions. These forms are available at the Quincy Police Department.

Sex offenders must register in person with the Police Department in the community where they reside. They must register with the local police department if they turn the judge's ruling failed.

Johnston, who has thrown his support to Delahunt, issued a brief statement following the SJC's decision.

"Although I disagree strongly with it, I accept the court's decision," the statement reads. "I am very proud of the thousands of volunteers who produced a miraculous near-victory in this election. They worked hard because they're committed to a government which cares for its people. I will continue to work with them to bring about progressive change in our district and country. I congratulate Mr. Delahunt on his victory and I wish him well."

At press time, the SJC had released only a two-line statement on its decision.

"The judgement of the Superior Court is affirmed," it said. "Opinion or opinions to follow."

Delahunt has said he initially requested a recount after Johnston's stunning apparent victory Sept. 17 because of flaws in the punch-card voting system used in Weymouth, Brockton, and several other communities where ballots were recounted.

The stylus used by voters who participate in the punch-card system often does not fully puncture a card, and the ballot is counted as a "blank," Delahunt said. Indentations on a card, however, can reveal a voter's intent, he noted.

On Tuesday, he reaffirmed his desire to do away with punch-cards permanently.

"This system has to go," said Delahunt.

Asked if those communities that still use the punch-cards might be able to switch to a different system before November, Delahunt said he was not sure. He added, however, that he is confident Massachusetts Secretary of State William Galvin will make sure those communities are extra vigilant if they are still using the current system next month.

Separate ballots with either Delahunt's or Johnston's name had been printed at Galvin's request prior to the SJC's decision.

Quincy was among the communities that used the punch-card system prior to the Sept. 17 primary. At City Clerk Joseph Shea's request, however, the city purchased electronic scanning machines that were used for the first time during last month's election.

The new machines are both faster and more accurate, according to Shea.

"My concerns with the punch-card system stemmed mainly from what happens after 8 o'clock (when the polls close)," he said. "The main reason I asked for them was to save time after the polls close and to save on the wear and tear of the people working the election.

"However, I am aware that the hanging chads and indentations (on cards not properly punctured) have caused some problems," Shea added.

CONGRESSIONAL HOPEFULS Philip Johnston (left) of Marshfield, former New England director of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt of Quincy join together in a sign of unity in front of Weymouth Town Hall Monday. On Tuesday, the state Supreme Judicial Court declared Delahunt the Democratic primary winner in the 10th Congressional District race who will face Republican Ed Teague of Yarmouth in the Nov. 5 final election.

$60,000 Approved For Graffiti Removal Machine

The city will soon be using a machine to remove graffiti from public buildings throughout Quincy.

The City Council appropriated $60,000 from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account for the purchase of the machine Monday night.

Council President Peter Kolson voiced support of the appropriation.

"The machine is very environmentally safe, adaptable to almost any type of solution, and can be used on almost any surface," he said.

Kolson also said the council should work with business owners to see what can be done about removing graffiti from private businesses, an issue that has been brought up by the council in the past.

"I think we should readdress that issue again," he said.

He also noted that the problem of graffiti is not one to be taken lightly.

"It's a serious matter," said Kolson. "It's a felony, not a misdemeanor, now."

Landtaking For Traffic Improvements

The city has taken over a small piece of land in order to improve traffic at the intersection of Water Street and Quincy Avenue.

The City Council appropriated $3,600 for the landtaking from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account Monday night.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath said the land in question is a vacant lot previously owned by Massachusetts Electric. Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said city workers will perform "a bit of a shaving" on both sides of the site in order to make passage for traffic safer.

At the request of Councillor Timothy Cahill, Raymondi agreed to have beautification efforts at the site stepped up as well.

City Receives $495,360 Grant For Veterans' Home

Quincy has been selected to receive $495,360 in funds under the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD's) Homeless Assistance Program.

The funds will be used for eight rental certificates for homeless veterans at the property located at 191 Burgin Parkway. The Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) will administer the certificates for the veterans' project with the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC) providing management for the property.

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services Inc. (QNHS), a non-profit housing development agency, is the organization developing the project and will oversee all aspects of development.

HUD's funding for the veterans' housing certificates will dovetail with current funding for the purchase and renovation of the property.

QNHS Director Norm Grenier said he was elated when he learned of the $495,360 HUD grant.

"I think it's a great thing," he said. "This pretty much guarantees the success of this project."

QISC Executive Director Joseph Finn said the grant will not be received in one lump sum but will be spread out over a 10-year period. The eight veterans living in the house on Burgin Parkway will be required to contribute 30 percent of their income for rent and the balance will be paid by the grant funds, he added.

"It's (the grant) very important," said Finn. "What this ensures is that the people who go in their will be able to get fair market rent."

Officials said funding for acquisition and renovation of the property came from a variety of sources:

•$100,000 from the city's HOME Program.

•$100,000 from the state's HOME Program.

•$50,000 from a Hibernia Savings Bank loan.

•$60,000 from the Federal Home Loan Bank.

•$7,000 from the Brooks Foundation.

•$5,000 from private donations.

The completion date is scheduled for the end of this year. After completion of the project, QNHS will transfer ownership to QISC.

A HOME FOR VETERANS--Quincy Painters Local 35 recently donated labor and materials to spruce up this house at 191 Burgin Parkway which is to be used as a veterans' home in the near future. The city has received a $495,360 federal grant for the property, which is being developed by Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services and will be operated by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition.

Police Dept. Receives $10,000 For Radar

The City Council appropriated $10,000 from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account Monday night for the purchase of a new radar device for the Quincy Police Department.

The Speed Monitoring Awareness Radar Trailer (SMART), designed by Kansas-based Kustom Signals Inc., displays the speeds of oncoming vehicles on a 12-inch tall digital display that can be seen from up to 100 miles away. Police Chief Francis Mullen said the portable device, which will be used for "education nd enforcement" purposes, will be used at various spots throughout the city.

At the council's last meeting, Councillor Michael Cheney requested that a vote on the appropriation be delayed to see if another company offers the device at a lower price. Mullen told the council Monday night, however, that he has found Kustom Signals Inc. is the only company that designs the SMART device.

Cheney spoke in favor of the appropriation at this week's meeting.

"It's not a lot of money for the amount of education we're going to be receiving," he said. Cheney added that although there have been some concerns that moisture can cause problems with the device, he was willing to support the appropriation because the equipment comes with a one-year warranty.

Also speaking in favor was Councillor Timothy Cahill, who said seeing one of the devices while recently driving in Boston prompted him to slow down.

"I think it works well," said Cahill.

Mullen said Quincy will become only the second Massachusetts community to use the device.

In a separate appropriation, the council gave the police department $8,500 from the free cash account for new color guard uniforms.

Michael McFarland, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, told the council the 16 members currently in the color guard wear the special uniforms to formal events such as funerals. The current uniforms are about eight years old, he noted, and the life span of a uniform is roughly five to seven years.

Accent On Quincy Center

By BRUCE ARONS

New Feature In Debut

In July of this year, I was hired to fill the newly-created position of Quincy Center Development Coordinator.

This position is jointly funded by the Quincy 2000 Corporation and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. I currently work out of Quincy 2000's office and report to an advisory board comprised of members of the QCBPA and Quincy 2000.

My primary responsibility will be implementing the comprehensive Quincy Center Action Plan which is being prepared by Quincy 2000 to guide, manage and encourage the continuing development of Quincy Center as a vibrant, mixed-use district and commercial center for the City of Quincy and the South Shore.

In addition to this work, I will be developing and implementing a marketing and promotional campaign for the downtown area and targeting and recruiting suitable companies for Quincy Center.

Since I began work in July, I have noticed many positive changes occurring in Quincy Center. Several buildings are being renovated, new stores are opening and business in general is on the increase. The occupancy rate in Quincy Center is the highest in 10 years.

Twenty-one new businesses have located in Quincy Center this month. With the opening of Expose' Fashions in the Adams Arcade building and Westlon Uniform Company at 10 Ross Way, the downtown work force continues its strong growth.

With the Quincy Center Concourse roadway project scheduled for construction in 1997, and planning for additional office space, a hotel, entertainment and small specialty retailers in progress, Quincy Center is well on its way to becoming a vital and prominent downtown shopping and cultural district on the South Shore.

In my next column, I will be identifying many of the exciting and positive "happenings" taking place in Quincy Center and who is responsible for them.

Hillary's Sentimental Moment

Paul Harold says I brought tears to Hillary Rodham Clinton's eyes during her triumphant visit to Quincy.

Sentimental tears.

Actually, Harold was responsible for it happening.

Let me explain.

Hillary's father, the late Hugh Rodham, was my commanding officer during boot training at the Great Lakes, Ill. Naval Training Center during World War II.

I was in Company 1968 assigned to the Camp Green Bay section of that sprawling training facility.

HUGH RODHAM and HENRY BOSWORTH AT GREAT LAKES

At the completion of three months of basic training, the Navy took a graduation photo of the company along with individual photos for us to send home for morale purposes.

I still have that company photo and one of Hillary's father and me alone looking like a couple of buddies. But he was a chief petty officer and the CO and I was a young boot who just graduated from apprentice seaman to seaman second class.

Anyway, a few days before the First Lady's arrival, I happened to mention to Harold, one of those in charge of arrangements for her appearance, that I knew her father, and that he was my CO in boot camp.

I also told him I still had a photo of him and me together.

"That's interesting," he said, and asked me for a copy of the photo which I gave him.

Members of the City Council were invited to meet with Mrs. Clinton inside the Crane Library last Friday shortly before she was to speak outside.

While Harold was chatting with her, he pulled out the copy of the photo and showed it to her.

"Wow!" she said, quite surprised to suddenly see a photo of her father in Quincy. "Look at those two handsome guys," (Thanks, Hillary).

Then it kind of hit her. Her father died in 1993 and here she was looking at a photo of him as a young man in the Navy. It was an unexpected sentimental moment for her.

"Tears just welled in her eyes," Harold said. He then gave her the copy of the photo.

He told her who I was and at the end of the speaking program, she came by where I was standing and Harold introduced us.

"Thank you, so much, for the photo," she said, reaching out to shake hands. "It was such a nice surprise."

We spoke briefly and as she was to leave, she said, "I am going to write to you."

I said I would look forward to that.

I forgot to tell her about the photo showing her father with the entire Company 1968. I will make a copy of that, though, and send it to her. I think she would like it as a family memento.

What was her father like?

Well, he was a tough CO. No horsing around. It was: "You're in the Navy now. You're going off to war--not to a high school picnic. You better be ready," etc.

That's what he was being tough about. We weren't overly fond of him at first, but by the time we finished boots that March, a bunch of kids who made up most of Company 1968 had gotten his message. And, later, appreciated it.

Sometimes I think I see some of that toughness in his daughter. But I found out last Friday she has sentimental softness, too.

She has her fans and her critics. I must confess I have found myself in the latter camp. I guess I'm a bit old fashion and prefer my First Ladies more traditional--a little less independent and a little less aggressive.

But I also learned something else last Friday. She is a dynamic campaigner. Great on her feet. Articulate. Knowledgeable. And much more attractive in person.

You may like her. Or dislike her. But you can't ignore her. She is a major player on the national political scene and will be even a bigger one in the next four years if her husband is re-elected.

There are those out there looking for the first woman president and see Hillary Rodham Clinton or someone like her.

Well, from the estimated 10,000 turnout and the royal reception she received here last Friday, she could be a pretty good bet to carry Quincy.

Fuel Assistance Applications Available

Quincy Community Action Programs Inc. (QCAP) is accepting applications for fuel assistance.

Residents of Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton who need help in paying their home heating bills may be eligible for the federally-funded program.

Appointments are necessary for new applicants.

Eligibility is based upon household size and income. In determining income, QCAP uses an applicant's last four weeks of information.

Simplified, the eligibility chart is as follows: One household member, annual income of $13,545 or below; two, $18,130 or below; three, $19,470 or below; and add $3,930 for each additional household member.

The amount of benefit provided to each household also depends upon both income level and household size. Fuel Assistance Program recipients are also eligible for a 33 percent discount on Mass. Electric bills, 20 percent discount on Boston Gas bills, and $9.50 off monthly NYNEX telephone bills.

All types of heat covered with the program--oil, gas, electric, and cases in which heat is included in the rent. For more information, call 479-8181, ext. 101.

ATTENTION QUINCY & WEYMOUTH RESIDENTS

Due to Columbus Day, Monday, October 14, 1996, rubbish collection will be a day late. Monday's rubbish will be collected on Tuesday. Tuesday's will be collected on Wednesday, etc. There will be a Saturday collection for rubbish usually collected on Friday. This applies to all routes.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1940's view of the old Capitol Theater building that was located at 1573 Hancock St. in Quincy Square for almost 40 years. One of Quincy's first theaters, it opened around 1915 to show moving pictures and run vaudeville shows. It became known as the Quincy Theater in the twenties and then at the end of World War II it was named the Capitol. With its balcony it had 1382 seats. It closed in the early fifties just before the Korean War and remained boarded up for many years until it was used as part of the old Sears Roebuck store. This is now the site of Pier 1 Imports.

Ask What You Can Do For Your Country

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

How quickly you forget "Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask what you can do for your country."

Bob Dole answered that call. The worst insult to any veteran came from a woman who called the Howie Carr show. She said, "I don't want an old crippled man to be my President." If he didn't answer the call, he would not be crippled and the old hag would be under German or Japanese rule. Thanks to us vets, we won.

I am a 78-year-old vet also. My generation never heard or asked for a free lunch or welfare. We went through a tough Depression, World War II and a lot of sickness.

The liberal Democrats say that the Republicans want to starve our children and pollute the air and water. Don't we all drink the same water and breath the same air?

Starving the children?

Clinton and Gore don't worry about that. They went to private schools and are sending all their children to private schools.

Go to the library and find out how many Democrats are millionaires. Then, while you are there, find out about the disgusting Partial Birth abortions. That is murder.

Who Will Answer For This Mayhem?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Partial-birth abortion, unspeakable as it is, will continue because we have a President who has shown that he has little respect for human life.

Last spring, members of our Congress, reflecting the will of the majority of our citizens, voted to ban partial-birth abortion. A presidential veto of the bill negated the action of the Congress.

Now a subsequent vote by the Senate to override the presidential veto has failed due to the stubbornness of some senators, Kennedy and Kerry of Massachusetts among them, who, like the President, still refuse to acknowledge that the fully-formed baby who is removed from the mother in a partial-birth abortion and who will never live to laugh and love, is a masterpiece in God's plan of creation. And that masterpiece has an eternal destiny, as do we all.

Who will answer for this mayhem?

Supt. Gossard Urges City Junior College

October 10 - 16
1953

By PAUL HAROLD

In his annual report to the School Committee, Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard urged that the city establish its own junior college.

He recommended a study of new personnel that would be needed and a survey of persons who would be interested in attending. It was expected that existing school buildings would be used in the evenings, thus eliminating the need for new space.

Also in his report, he noted that after considerable planning, kindergarten or pre-primary classes were scheduled to begin next September.

BARBADORO, GEORGE SEEK RECOUNT

Louis George, head of the Quincy Housing Authority and former city councillor, took out petitions for a recount in the race for councillor, having lost out to Councillor Charles Shea by one vote in the recent preliminary election: 2,371 to 2,372.

Also seeking a recount was Nicholas Barbardoro, who lost in his bid for nomination by 45 votes. Fourteen were nominated in the all at-large council.

City Clerk Hattiemay Thomas said the 32 percent turnout was the result of rainy weather on the preliminary election day.

GROSSMAN CO. MAY BID ON 'SPRUCE GOOSE'

Sidney Grossman, president of the Grossman Company, confirmed reports that company representatives were negotiating with the federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation to bid on the surplus $40 million flying boat built by Howard Hughes.

Grossman said they had no plans for its use, but they felt they could eventually find value for it, as they had with their purchase of other surplus government materials.

The 200-ton wooden flying boat was the world's largest plane.

Louisa May Alcott Topic At Library Saturday

"Louisa May Alcott," the fourth and final program in a four-week humanities series on great American writers, will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The series is co-sponsored by Quincy College and the library. Admission is free and refreshments will be served.

The Alcott program will be presented by Frank Perkins, professor emeritus at Quincy College. He specializes in teaching American Literature and was former chairman of the college's English Department. Perkins also collects first editions of American writers.

YMCA 'Celebration '96' At Presidents Place

Presidents Place in Quincy was the site for the seventh annual South Shore YMCA "Celebration '96," an event to celebrate and recognize the YMCA's dedication and service to the South Shore community.

The event was held last night (Wednesday) from 5:30 to 7:15 p.m. South Shore YMCA members, program participants, staff, volunteers, business and community leaders, and the general public were invited.

Ticket prices were $8 per adult and were available in advance at the South Shore YMCA, 70 Coddington St., Quincy, and at the door yesterday (Wednesday) at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The event was the kickoff of the final phase of the South Shore YMCA's $2.5 million Capital Campaign to raise funds for building renovations and improvements to better serve program participants at the Y's 79 Coddington St. facility. To date, nearly $3 million has been raised through private gifts, corporate pledges and grants. The goal of the final phase is to encourage community participation via special fundraising events and projects.

Celebration '96 award presentations included the Benjamin J. Hodgkinson Adult Volunteer Award to recognize Quincy resident Bill Donovan. Donovan, a volunteer, works alongside his wife, Ellie, at the Member Service Desk each morning to help get the building ready, greet members and help wherever needed.

'Into The Woods' Opens Oct. 17 At ENC

The Eastern Nazarene College Communication Arts Department will present the award-winning Broadway play "Into The Woods" Friday through Sunday, Oct. 17-19 and 24-26.

On Oct. 17 and 24-26, the performances begin at 7 p.m. The Oct. 18 performance begins at 8 p.m. On Oct. 19, performances will be at 6 and 9 p.m.

The musical comedy-adventure with words and music by Stephen Sondheim and book by James Lapine, takes the collage of traditional fairy tale characters and weaves them together with new material and a score to explore the myth of "happily ever after."

Tickets are $8 and may be purchased at the Cove Fine Arts box office at 65 Wendell Ave., Wollaston, or by calling 745-3715.

Fall Festival Oct. 19 To Benefit Beechwood Knoll

The Beechwood Knoll Improvement Committee (BKIC) will sponsor a Fall Festival Saturday, Oct. 19 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll School, 325 Fenno St., Wollaston, to renovate the Beechwood Knoll playground park in Quincy.

The event will include games, rides, food and more. Area businesses have donated money for the festival.

A silent auction will also be part of the day's festivities. Items donated by local businesses and Quincy residents will be bid upon.

Other highlights will include raffles, a pumpkin patch, pony rides, moonwalk, obstacle course, carousel, food, face painting, a cake walk and other family festivities. BKIC has also made up t-shirts that can be ordered and will be displayed for purchase at the festival.

For more information, call Michelle Lydon at 472-7423.

Steve Infasalli Represents Fire Dept. On Telethon

Steve Infasalli represented the Quincy Fire Department on WCVB-TV 5's recent local broadcast of the Jerry Lewis "Stars Across America!" MDA Labor Day Telethon.

Infasalli presented a check for $7,000 that was raised through this summer's "Fill the Boot" campaign and MDA's Shamrock's program.

The relationship between MDA and the International Association of Firefighters was born in Massachusetts over 40 years ago when Charles Crowley walked into the Old Broadway Fire House in South Boston seeking help. He explained that his two sons had muscular dystrophy, and asked if the fireman could help.

Ever since, firefighters have been MDA's number one national sponsor, consistently surpassing their yearly fundraising totals. The "Fill the Boot" campaign is key to the firefighters' success.

THE ROUTINE OF MIRACLE TRANSPLANTS

It wasn't so long ago that the idea of organ transplantation was strictly the stuff of science fiction. Today, many types of transplants have moved from experimental to mainstream medicine. Most of the problems with early anti-rejection drugs have been solved, making long-term healthy survival possible. One of the more common and straightforward transplant operations involves the kidney, which may be given by a healthy donor. At least two-thirds of all kidney transplant patients pass the two-year milestone with their adopted kidney functioning normally. Other relatively commonplace transplants include the pancreas (sometimes transplanted along with a kidney in diabetes mellitus patients), heart, lung, liver, and intestines. Bone marrow transplantation is now a treatment of choice in many cases of leukemia, Hodgkin's disease, and other lymphomas and cancers.

P.S. Anyone who would wish to donate an organ may carry a Uniform Donor Card, signed by two witnesses, to make sure that wish is honored.

Over 25 Companies Sponsoring Kids Voting

More than 25 companies are sponsoring this year's Kids Voting Massachusetts, a voter-education-registration program for kindergarten through high school students and their parents in Quincy and Plymouth.

The nonpartisan program, started in Massachusetts with last year's Quincy city election, teaches children about the importance of knowing about the candidates and the issues, and then voting to sustain American democracy.

Major sponsors of the overall project are NYNEX, Arbella Insurance, Boston Edison, Adelphia Cable, Compass Bank, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, MTV-Nickelodeon, Quirk Ford, The Old Colony Memorial of Plymouth, The Patriot Ledger of Quincy, WCVB-TV (Channel 5) in Boston and Stop & Shop.

Other sponsors of the Quincy program are the city itself, the Quincy public schools, The Quincy Sun, Thomas Crane Library, Continental Cablevision, Adams Inn, Atlantic Development, Hurley Insurance, O'Connor & Drew, Derbes Brothers, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance, Advantage Marketing, Quincy College, Bank of Braintree, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Keohane Funeral Homes, Presidency Systems, Quincy Kiwanis Club, Quincy Lions Club, Quincy Rotary Club and State Street Bank.

Kids Voting began in Arizona in 1988 and this year has been expanded to more than 40 states.

In the weeks leading up to the Nov. 5 election, hundreds of local pupils in Quincy and Plymouth will discuss the candidates and issues in the classroom with their teachers and at home with their parents.

Like their parents, the students will register to vote, and will go to actual polling places on election day to vote at booths set aside for them. The results will be announced and published at the same time as the adult vote.

The curriculum is age appropriate. Kindergarten, for instance, discuss what a leader is: a person in charge who shares, is fair and doesn't hit. When they talk about elections, they make a snack ballot by voting for ice cream or cookies. Older kids examine the political issues of the day and how the local and national candidates are addressing them.

Quincy officials said Kids Voting was a big success in the 1995 city election. City Clerk Joseph Shea said nearly 800 new adult voters registered in the city, and the voter turnout rose by 8 percent over normal.

Special voter registration sessions are being held this fall in both Quincy and Plymouth in connection with Kids Voting.

Anyone interested in more information about Kids Voting Massachusetts can contact Executive Director Harold Crowley Jr. of Quincy at 471-6881.

RAKE IN THE SAVINGS

QUINCY'S 9TH ANNUAL LEAF COMPOSTING PROGRAM

LAST YEAR...we composted over 2,500 tons of leaves, and saved over $200,000 of your tax dollars.

THIS YEAR...we hope to hit 4,000 tons, and save your valuable tax dollars.

1. RAKE YOUR LEAVES

2. BAG THEM

It is mandatory that you use the paper leaf composting bags sold at most stores. They're easy to fill, recyclable and biodegradable. Bag only leaves, twigs and grass clippings. No trash. No large branches.

3. PUT THEM ON THE CURB WITH YOUR TRASH.

Just separate them from your trash and recyclables, so we know which bags are which!

Program runs October 14 thru November 22, 1996

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

MAKING COMMON SENSE OF THE LAW

While certain accidents involve factors which make it relatively easy to assign liability, it is not always as simple to lay the blame for others. In all cases, however, the law initially asks one common sense question in order to decide who is legally responsible. That is, did the accident victim act with reasonable care, or did he or she act carelessly in a way that contributed to the accident? If the injured party was acting carefully and the other party's carelessness or negligence led to the accident, then the other party is legally responsible. There may be a host of other legal questions to be answered, and a lawyer can make common sense of them, too, if given the opportunity.

HINT: If a negligent person works for another person, that employer can also be held legally responsible.

Don't go it alone! The legal arena is an area for professionals familiar with the law and past cases. Protect your rights by utilizing such experience. Remember that your legal rights are only as good as your ability to protect them. If you've been injured and need legal advice, call 773-2880 for a free consultation. We're located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street. Our expertise and track record of success speak for themselves.

HN Community Council To Hold Awards Night Oct. 20

Three long-time residents with a total of 180 years in Houghs Neck will receive special recognition at the annual Awards Night of the Houghs Neck Community Council Sunday, Oct. 20.

The program will follow a 6 p.m. dinner at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow St.

One guest of honor will be Merwin E. "Red" Durgin, "Good Neighbor," born in 1922 at 289 Rock Island Rd., who, except for a short time in war service, lives now at 288 Rock Island Rd. A Quincy Trade School graduate, he served as a lieutenant in the Army Signal Corps in World War II. Now retired, he worked 39 years for the New England Telephone Co. He and his wife, Muriel, have been married over 50 years. Their children, Joan Lutz-Durgin and Chris Noren-Durgin, have presented them with six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

As a boy on a bicycle, Durgin delivered groceries in Merrymount, Houghs Neck and Adams Shore for the local First National. Now he devotes his hours being helpful and a friendly visitor to his neighbors.

Retired Deputy Fire Chief John Menz, named "Distinguished Senior Citizen," has lived in Quincy since 1921. He has been married for 56 years to the former Doris Blake of Houghs Neck, with whom he has five children: Fire Lieutenant John H. Menz Jr., Douglas Menz, an automobile and truck businessman; Cheryl Lynn and Carol Walters; as well as eight grandchildren. John Jr. was ordained in September as the first Deacon from Most Blessed Sacrament Church and serves at St. Boniface.

Receiving "Civic Honors" is Michael Berry of 221 Manet Ave. A 31-year resident, he was 16 when he moved to Houghs Neck. An Eagle Boy Scout, he regularly assists with Boy Scout Troop 6 and Cub Pack 6 at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church. A Quincy Vo-Tech graduate, he is an electrician at The Boston Globe, and an officer of the Massachusetts Electrical Union. He assists neighbors with electrical problems and volunteers his expertise on Christmas floats and works on other parade floats throughout Quincy.

Berry is married to the former Mary Slocumb of Houghs Neck. Their son, Michael Berry Jr., is a sophomore at Eastern Nazarene College, while their daughter, Karen Berry, is presently studying marine biology in Australia at a laboratory run by the government.

The committee voting on the honors election included Jack Nigro, Awards Night chairman for the Houghs Neck Community Council; Joan Giordani, representing Our Lady's Sodality of Most Blessed Sacrament Church; Betty McLean, prefect, Court Corpus Christi, Catholic Daughters of the Americas; Joanna Roman, president of Houghs Neck Senior Citizens; Richard Wainwright, Adjutant Houghs Neck American Legion Post; and Kathleen and David DiBona of the Houghs Neck Community Council.

Others assisting at the Awards Night will be Peggy O'Connor, council president; Peggy Nigro and Jean Bragg.

Tickets are on sale from Tom Timcoe, ticket chairman, at the Houghs Neck Community Center, 1193 Sea St., and other committee members.

Alpha Story, president of the Mothers and Others Club, was unable to attend the voting sessions.

Body Piercing Hearing To Be Held Oct. 21

The City Council will hold a public hearing regarding a proposed ordinance that would regulate the practice of body piercing in the city Monday, Oct. 21 at 6:45 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

The ordinance has been prepared by Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue at the request of Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers. Gallahue submitted a draft of the ordinance to the council in June.

The new law has been proposed as the result of the opening of the Body Xtremes piercing shop at 414 Hancock St. in North Quincy. City officials have expressed concerns about the safety of body piercing and want to make sure it is properly regulated.

Ayers, whose ward includes the piercing shop, has said health concerns expressed by neighbors are the main reason he asked Gallahue to write the ordinance.

The proposed ordinance was based, in part, on a similar law used in Oklahoma, one of only a handful of states that has such regulations. Gallahue has discussed the matter with the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Oklahoma State Health Department and the National Association of Professional Body Piercers in California.

Body Xtremes owner Mik Miller has said while he supports the regulation of piercing, the proposed law goes too far.

First Lady May Return To Honor Abigail Adams

buried along with her husband, son and daughter-in-law.

Sheets said when he presented the First Lady with a letter from the Partnership inviting her to the event, she said she was interested in attending.

"Obviously, the President would have to be re-elected first," he said. "But if he is, and her schedule allows, she will come. She said she wanted to do it. Those were her words to me: 'I want to do this.'"

Sheets added that Clinton very much enjoyed her initial visit to Quincy and commented on the beauty of both the city and of the Thomas Crane Public Library, where she spoke on the front lawn.

An estimated crowd of 10,000 packed the library lawn and part of Washington and Coddington Streets to hear the First Lady speak. Her speech, designed to rally support for Democrats whose names will be on Massachusetts ballots during the upcoming Nov. 5 election, generated an enthusiastic response from those in attendance.

Clinton said the election of her husband and Vice President Al Gore in 1992 has reaped considerable benefits, including the creation of 10 million new jobs and the lowest unemployment rate in 28 years.

"We have to make sure we stay on the right economic road in the next four years," she said.

The First Lady also cited the President's pledge of $100 million for the reopening of the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point as well as his backing of the recently-passed Family Medical Leave Act and support for education, universal health care, public safety, the elderly, minorities and the poverty-stricken.

On the subject of education, Clinton said the President will make going to a college or university more affordable in three specific ways: tax-free IRA savings accounts for education, "hope scholarships" that will let everyone interested attend at least two years of community college via a $1,500 tax credit, and allowing Americans to deduct $10,000 a year to pay for the cost of college.

"We will make it possible for every family to be able to afford college for their children," she said.

Clinton added that the President will continue to work toward linking all of the nation's classrooms to the information superhighway and keep pushing for universal health care.

The First Lady urged those in attendance to support Democratic candidates who will help make the President's future goals a reality.

"My husband believes in a positive future for America, and I think you do, too," she said.

Not all of her speech was quite so serious, however. The First Lady received a huge laugh from the crowd when she poked fun at herself for her well-reported "conversations" with the late First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt while referring to Quincy's own First Lady, Abigail Adams.

"During my last conversation with Abigail Adams, she asked me to say 'hello' to everyone in Quincy," she said.

Several prominent local Democrats preceded Clinton at the podium, including Sens. Edward Kennedy and John Kerry and Congressmen Gerry Studds and Joseph Moakley.

All of the speakers urged support for the President and local Democrats while saying the Republican Party's agenda is quite different.

Moakley brought down the house with a line about House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

"He's the most unpopular person I've heard of since Judas Iscariot," he said.

"We are finished with the Dole/Gingrich Congress," added Kerry, who is seeking re-election in a tight race with popular Republican Gov. William Weld.

Studds and Kennedy spoke of Quincy's admiration of the First Lady.

"You are going to like Quincy," Studds told Clinton. "This is one of the places in America where politics is a good word. Mrs. Clinton, the people here are on your side. This is your village."

"No one loves you more than the people of Quincy, Massachusetts," said Kennedy. "We're glad to have you here."

FALL CAR CARE

Low Mileage Used Car Driven By Little Old Lady: Buyer Beware

When young Jack Porter bought a beautiful 1977 Ford from his Aunt Maude, he figured it ought to be a really good deal.

Having been driven only 23,000 miles in all those years, it should be in great shape.

To all outward appearances it was, and certainly Aunt Maude was honest. But Jack soon learned the hard way that car that's been driven about 35 miles a week, little more than Sunday trips to church, can be filled with problems waiting to occur.

Consequently, driving the car the way it was designed to be driven, one things after another arose. First it was the engine overheating. She hadn't had the cooling system flushed since Uncle Crandall died back in the mid 1980s. "He always took care of everything," she lamented. Jack inherited the results of her ignorance.

Next, a ticking noise from the engine. It turned out to be a sticking valve lifter, the result of not having changed the oil in 4,000 miles. For most drivers that's a reasonable interval but for Aunt Maude it was more than two years of stop-and-go driving, the kind that can turn the oil to sludge. That sludge really messed up the inside of her engine and resulted in an expensive repair bill.

Also expensive was the replacement of the heater core, which disintegrated as a result of the neglected cooling system...not to mention a complete braking system overhaul because no one had looked at the brakes since before Maude and Crandall had taken their vacation trip.

Lucky for Maude that her neglected '77 Ford had not gotten her in some kind of trouble.

Jack has survived all of the fixing up and Maude now drives a new car which, thanks to the urging of her nephew, gets the more frequent service intervals recommended for her short trip stop-and-go driving.

For anyone who drives relatively few miles a week, suggests the Car Care Council, it's a good idea to turn to the SEVERE, or UNIQUE DRIVING CONDITIONS section of your owner's manual. It's maintenance recommendations, which include more frequent service intervals for drivers who do a lot of short trip driving (under 10 miles), should be taken seriously.

The Council offers a brochure on the fundamentals of car care entitled, "How to Find Your Way Under the Hood and Around the Hood." For a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Dept. UH, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, Ohio 43452.

Foul Weather Driving Tips

(NAPS)—Driving safely when the weather turns foul takes concentration and planning. These tips from the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP) will help.

• Always wear your seat belt.

• Make sure your windshield and mirrors are clear of frost, snow and ice and the driver's seat is positioned properly.

• Plan ahead. Leave earlier than usual to allow extra time to reach your destination.

• Keep a "winter emergency kit" in your car. It should include a flashlight, flares, jumper cables, snacks, extra gloves, hat, blanket, sand, a small shovel and boots. A warm sleeping bag is also a good idea.

When driving in snow and ice, leave extra distance between your car and the car in front of you.

• Carefully assess road and driving conditions when driving on unfamiliar roads. Be especially cautious on bridges and ramps.

• Drive at speeds appropriate for road conditions. Use "defensive" driving attitude and actions.

• Keep your distance from other autos and obstacles.

• In a skid situation, if your car is equipped with an Anti-Lock Brake System (ABS) remember to maintain continuous pressure on your brakes. If your car does not have ABS, and you feel your car starting to skid, pump your brakes lightly. Turn your car to follow the direction of the skid to help maintain control.

Remember, if the road and weather conditions are truly hazardous, reschedule your travel.

American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP) is a national medical specialty society representing more than 18,000 emergency physicians who specialize in emergency medicine.

Winter Storage Leads To Stale Gas In RV/Boat

Most of us who have tugged repeatedly on the starter cord of a power mower or outboard motor are familiar with the stale gas syndrome.

Gasoline does not store well over long periods of time. After several months of storage, when it lies dormant in fuel lines or in the carburetor, gas may deteriorate due to oxidation, causing per-formance problems and obstructions in fine orifices. It can also damage rubber and other polymers in the fuel system.

The extra can of gas you may have kept around for an emergency also is a potential source of fuel system trouble, especially if it has not had stabilizer added, which helps prevent deterioration of stored gas. While most small engine manufacturers recommend the use of this kind of product, they also warn against storing fuel for more than 30 days.

If your drive a pick-up truck, van or motor home with dual gas tanks, remember occasionally to switch from one tank to the other to avoid ending up with one tankfull of gas that's gone stale.

Car Care Council emphasizes that clean, uncontaminated gas is essential for fuel-injected engines, whose tiny orifices are vulnerable to impurities. Buy quality fuel and change fuel filters regularly, suggests the Council.

FALL CAR CARE

A Car's Interior, Exterior Should Also Be Maintained

When most people think car care, changing the oil, tuning the spark plugs, and replacing the air filter are all activities that come to mind. Properly maintaining the interior and exterior of a car is often overlooked.

A full auto detail should be given to your car two to three times per year. A detail will not only dramatically improve the appearance of your vehicle, it will also prolong the interior and exterior of your car.

The interior is an expensive part of an automobile and can deteriorate quickly if not properly maintained. The interior temperature of an automobile may reach 150 degrees in the summer and fall well below zero degrees in the winter.

Under these extreme conditions, upholstery, carpet vinyl, leather, and plastic are composed of material that will fade, dry, and eventually split apart from overexposure and daily use. Protecting and conditioning these surfaces can't prevent deterioration but it will dramatically slow the process.

An auto detail can also preserve the exterior of your car. Modern cars are painted with acrylic enamels or acrylic uerathane in a one or two-stage system. These coatings rarely exceed .008 of an inch.

Without continuous protection, acid rain, UV light, industrial fallout and tree sap will start to break down your car's coat of paint within four years. A full auto detail will provide your car with the proper type of wax coating necessary to prevent this deterioration.

Thrifty Car Rental, 166 Washington St., Quincy Point, has two full-time detailers on staff. For any questions concerning the detail process or to make an appointment, call 984-0693.

High Tech TLC For Your Car

When the family car gets sick you probably worry about it.

You're anxious to get Old Faithful into the shop, where you'll find a technician trained to diagnose its symptoms. His diagnostic equipment may look like the props from a science fiction movie, but that's often what it takes to locate the trouble in today's complex, computer controlled vehicles, says the Car Care Council.

High-tech methods notwithstanding, the human element still must prevail. The service personnel generally do their best to maintain a high level of customer confidence, to treat every vehicle as if it were their own.

Performance problems in a late model car can be like human malfunctions except the car has several "brains," about a mile of wire and a complex system of sensors. Computers may play a role in numerous functions, including starting, steering, braking, climbing a hill, changing the inside comfort level and on and on. Microprocessors can turn on the lights, tune the radio, report how many miles until the gas tank is empty and, in some cases, lead the driver to his destination.

When any of the above functions and others fail, your technician turns to a computer to diagnose and correct the problem. Eventually he or she may tackle the repair with hand tools (special, of course) and the repair generally isn't likely to be a speedy one because of the crowded conditions under the hood.

Today's vehicles, despite their complexity, require far less maintenance and repair than their forefathers, says the Council. Unfortunately, as in the case of high-tech medical care, training and equipment don't come cheap.

Our cars not only are thinking for us, in some cases they can diagnose their own problems. With the help of computerized test equipment, trained technicians can locate and correct most driveability problems that, only a few years ago, would have eluded the best of them.

Urging motorists to recognize and act on signs of pending car trouble, Car Care Council offers a pamphlet entitled, "The Eight Most Common Signs Your Car Needs A Tune-Up." For a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Dept. T, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, Ohio 43452.

Tips For Car Convenience And Safety

(NAPS)—A host of car convenience and safety items is now available from mobile electronics manufacturers, reports the Consumer Electronics Manufacturers Association (CEMA).

New remotes unlock car doors, flash parking lights, pop the trunk and turn on the car's interior lights. Some even start the engine, activate the heating/cooling system and start the defroster.

Lose your car in a parking lot? Hit the remote button and car's lights start flashing. Some devices also start the horn honking. These convenience items work as safety devices as well.

There are back-up lights that flash while a siren beeps when the car is in reverse. Automatic weather lights turn on headlights when it gets dark or bad weather hits. The lights turn off automatically when the ignition is off.

Other devices such as radar detectors with the new "safety warning system" warn drivers of approaching emergency vehicles, railroad crossings, school zones, accident scenes and heavy fog.

Local mobile electronics retailers know how to install these items. To find the nearest Mobile Electronics Certification Program-certified technicians, call 1-800-767-MECP.

One acre will park one hundred cars.

A Homeowner's Dilemma: Add on or Buy a New House?

(NU) - If you're a homeowner with a growing family, the need for a larger home is probably high on your list. But which solution is right — adding on to your present home, or buying a new one?

You live in a pleasant neighborhood. There is a new shopping center a short distance away and the freeway is just a mile up the road.

Your family has lived there for seven years and has outgrown the house. The home is in good condition, but the family needs another bathroom and maybe a family room.

You've looked at larger homes that would fit your needs, but they are across town, in a different school district and a little further from conveniences. The kids would have to make new friends and you will have to establish new social contacts.

Another consideration is the higher property taxes you'll face based on the new purchase.

What about building an addition to your home? There's adequate land to add the bath and family rooms, but is it economically smart to do so?

Adding to the problem is too much information from various sources, much of which conflicts and only confuses you further.

Your realtor tells you to make the move and supplies reams of data supporting that choice. On the other hand, your local builder tells you that you can't go wrong upgrading a house in a well-established neighborhood.

What Do You Do?

It's time to ask an independent third party to help you make your decision.

According to the American Society of Appraisers, an independent real estate appraiser will perform an appraisal of the existing home, as well as one with the proposed addition. After obtaining a contractor's estimate of the cost of the proposed additions, you can make a decision to move or expand.

An independent appraiser can also offer advice on the layout of the addition for maximum utility and value.

The ASA urges you to be sure that the appraiser whose services you obtain has experience, credible credentials and a track record that includes strict adherence to the Uniform Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice.

Look for the designation "ASA" or "AM" following the appraiser's name. ASA means the appraiser has been awarded the designation of accredited senior appraiser. AM means the appraiser is an accredited member of the society. Both are members in good standing of the American Society of Appraisers.

The American Society of Appraisers builds and maintains appraiser qualifications and requires strict adherence to the Principles of Appraisal Practice and Code of Ethics.

For more information on hiring a professional, independent real estate appraiser near you, call the American Society of Appraisers toll-free at 1-800-ASA-VALU and ask for Dept. NU. Or write to the American Society of Appraisers, International Headquarters, Dept. NU, P.O. Box 17265, Washington, DC 20041.

17th Ranked Raiders Host Barnstable

Walsh, North Quincy Run Away With It, 36-13

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Senior tailback Brian "Muskie" Walsh wasted no time Friday night showing why he is one of the elite running backs in the Old Colony League.

In North Quincy's 36-13 league victory over Plymouth South, Walsh (17 carries, 227 yards, three TD's) electrified the Veterans Memorial Stadium crowd with a 66-yard touchdown romp on NQ's first play from scrimmage.

Walsh, the subject of this week's Channel 5 "High Five," then caught the conversion pass from backup quarterback Tim Semchenko for an 8-0 North lead. Later, Walsh scored on runs of one and 14 yards as the Red Raiders (3-0 overall, 2-0 in OCL) cruised to their third consecutive victory.

"He (Walsh) is as good a running back as I've had," said NQ head coach Ken McPhee. "He's so tough and so good at avoiding tackles. He's built so low to the ground, it's like hitting a bowling ball. The only way to stop him is to gang tackle him."

The win propelled North Quincy into the No. 17 spot on The Boston Globe Top 20 high school poll, its first regular season appearance since the Super Bowl season of 1992. The 3-0 mark is also the Red Raiders' best start since that Super Bowl season.

"I'm proud of our kids, because they played as hard as they could to win, without our starting quarterback (Tom Coughlin) and another starter (Kevin Bowes)," said McPhee. "Walsh did his thing, the defense came up big again and every kid on the team got in. We had the total package working for us."

Coughlin and Bowes were not available, but both will return to action this week. With second string QB Chris Bregoli out with a dislocated shoulder, Semchenko filled in at quarterback.

Though North Quincy's next opponent, Barnstable (0-4, 0-1), has yet to win a game this season, McPhee knows his team cannot take last year's Super Bowl champions lightly.

The four teams that have defeated Barnstable this season--Brockton (3-0), Weymouth (4-0), North Attleboro (3-1) and St. John's Prep (2-2) --are a combined 12-3 heading into this weekend's action.

"They're the best 0-4 team I've seen," said McPhee, referring to Barnstable. "They're a very big, physical team that was injured earlier but getting healthy now. They haven't played well of late, but they're the type of team that if they get hot, they'll kill you."

Pacing Barnstable offensively is three-year starting quarterback Mike Griffin, senior wide receiver Ryan Johnson, junior halfback Guito Joseph and senior halfback Adam Burnett.

North and Barnstable tangle Friday night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"We're going into the game with a lot of confidence," said McPhee. "We really don't want to change

Joe Ryan Sweeps Men's Singles Events

City Crowns Tennis Champs

For the first time in the 26-year history of the Quincy Tennis Tournament, one player, Joe Ryan, has won all three men's singles events.

Ryan captured the men's 50 and over, men's 35 and over and the Lionel "Shine" Buckley Cup in the men's 50 and over. Ryan has been a long time participant in the annual event sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department and co-sponsored by the Quincy Municipal Credit Union this year.

Ryan defeated Paul Vespaziani, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 to win the singles championship. Vespaziani had defeated the No.1 seed Paul Carty earlier in the tournament and played strong tennis to reach the final.

In the men's 50 and over, Ryan topped Lenny Ciavarro, 6-3, 7-5 and won the men's 35 and over with a hard fought 6-4, 6-4 victory over Steve Myatt, a tournament veteran.

Tournament Director John Franceschini and assistant Michelle Drury also presented championship bowls to Ryan's daughter, Elizabeth, who won the women's singles and the girl's 16 and under championships.

Defending doubles champions Tom Savoie and Peter Trafton defeated Bruce Riddick and Lenny Ciavarro, 6-4, 6-1, to hold onto the cup for another year.

The mother-daughter team of Gail and Wendy Trafton played well and topped a up and coming team of Yun Yu and Nawal Saffarianil, 6-3, 6-1. Boy's 16 and under defending champion Joe Holland retained his title, defeating Andrew Bisconte, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

In a final that featured two past winners of the mens "B" event, Bob Palermo downed last year's champion, Bob Yee, 6-3, 6-0.

Capturing the William F. Ryan Cup in mixed doubles were Peter and Aileen Eleey, who defeated Peter and Wendy Trafton, 6-3, 6-3.

Recreation Director Barry Welch thanked the players for the sportsmanship and understanding in the tournament, which was delayed due to the weather. Over 150 matches were played in a 10-event, 19-day period. All tournament matches were played on the newly reconstructed Russell Park Tennis Courts.

Champions:

Quincy Turns It Over To Taunton, 15-13

Presidents Visit Plymouth South Saturday

In a game dominated by Quincy on both sides of the ball, six turnovers spelled doom for the Presidents in a 15-13 loss at Old Colony League foe Taunton last Friday night.

"This game was the game from Hell," said Quincy head coach Peter Chella. "It was terribly frustrating. Everything meshed to make it your basic coach's nightmare. We lost to a team that we never should've lost to, and the kids and the coaching staff are terribly disappointed, to say the least.

"Overall, we performed very well offensively. We got over 300 yards of offense, and we held them to about 75 yards offensively. But when you have six turnovers, you open the door to the other team."

Following their second straight defeat, Chella hopes the loss to Taunton will serve as "a wake-up call" for the Presidents (1-3 overall, 0-2 OCL), who visit Plymouth South Saturday at 1:30 p.m. The Panthers (1-3, 1-2) are coming off a 36-13 drubbing at the hands of North Quincy last week.

"Plymouth South can hurt you offensively," said Chella. "They're not big, but they're real quick. We can't allow their passes to go unpressured. We need to pressure the QB with our down linemen. Ours are bigger and stronger, so we should be able to pressure them.

"If we hold onto the ball we'll be fine. We only turned the ball over once in the first three games, so it's something we normally don't do."

Against Taunton, Quincy drove the ball deep into Tiger territory on its first two series, only to lose the ball both times.

Taunton (2-2, 1-1) jumped ahead, 7-0, when wide receiver Jonathan Kahn caught a 40-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Ryan Colton in the first half.

The Presidents drove towards the tying score late in the half, led by quarterback Mark Glynn, who connected with Bob Walsh and Andrew Byrne, and fullback Tim Santos, who picked up a couple of first downs on the ground to help bring Quincy to the 1-foot line with 10 seconds left in the half.

On the next play, running back Kevin Connolly (120 yards, one TD) appeared to cross the goal line, but the officials ruled the ball did not break the plain and the half ended with Taunton ahead, 7-0.

"By all appearances, he got into the end zone," said Chella. "If the officials called a time out to discuss it, we may have gotten another play off before the half ended."

Quincy drove 66 yards (all on the ground) to open the second half with its first score of the game. Connolly went three yards untouched up the middle for the touchdown, his fourth of the season. The Presidents opted to go for two and the lead, but the conversion attempt failed and Taunton still led, 7-6.

Turnovers continued to plague QHS on its next three drives with a fumble, and two interceptions. The first interception came on a play in which receiver Mark Belanger appeared to outleap three Tigers for a touchdown, but one of the defenders snatched the ball and the score away from Quincy.

"Mark caught it, but a defender grabbed it from him and they disallowed the score," said Chella.

The other interception came on a tipped pass in the flat which Kahn returned 60 yards for the game-winning score. Kahn pushed Taunton's lead to 15-6 when he scored the two-point conversion on a fake kick attempt.

Glynn, who completed 10 of 16 passes for 126 yards, connected with Jon Ryan for an 18-yard touchdown to bring the Presidents within two with about two minutes to play. Quincy got the ball back for one final drive, but an interception denied the Presidents a comeback victory.

Quincy's defense stifled the Tigers' running game, holding them to just 31 rushing yards on 23 carries.

"Their offense got nothing against us," said Chella. "Most of the quarterback's passes were thrown off his back foot, because he was being pressured or tackled by our defense."

Unbeaten Elks, Manets Battle This Weekend

The Houghs Neck Manets and West Quincy Elks remained unbeaten and the North Quincy Apaches improved to 2-1 in recent Quincy Youth Football League action.

This weekend, the undefeated Elks and Manets will battle it out for first place.

With a 14-0 victory over the Quincy Point Panthers, the Manets improved to 3-0 and have yet to be scored upon. The Manets had a solid effort from quarterback Jordan Virtue, running back Dan Dorsey (two touchdowns), Shawn Richardson (interception), running back Justin Analowski, John Santos, Jim Cashin, Tom Brown, Paul Flynn, Greg Walsh, Peter Turowski, Steve Scatteo, John Alves and Danny Galligan.

The second half was a strong defensive battle as the Panthers came up with a big defensive stand late in the third, stopping the Manets at the one-yard line.

Kris Kamborian and Mark Robertson led the Panthers' defense, while Michael Lorenzano played a superb two-way game.

The Elks posted wins No. 2 and No. 3 to up their record to 3-0. The Elks, who have yet to be scored upon, topped a tough Apaches squad, 16-0. Leading the way was quarterback Dean Zoia, who rushed for one of the Elks' scores. Jonathan Okereke plunged in for the two-point conversion.

Max Ferreira stood out with two interceptions, a 60-yard touchdown run and added a two-point conversion to cap a superb performance.

The Elks led a stampede over the Milton Mustangs, 32-0. Quarterback David Centrella paced the Elks' offense behind the line of Bryan Cooper, Paul Sing, Chris Sullivan, Matt Tupe and Bryan Gately. Wide receivers Jack Liuzzo and John Chevalier threw some great blocks, allowing several sweeps that resulted in touchdowns.

Lumaghini would not be denied his first touchdown of the season. Also turning in great games for the Elks were Joe Swanson, Mike Ferreira, Richie Churchill, Brett Schwamm and Jeremiah "Mad Dog" Hasson.

The Apaches defeated the Squantum Storm, 22-0, but lost guard Steve Joyce and quarterback Matt Burke to injuries.

Burke opened the game by leading the Apaches' offense on an impressive drive. On the fifth play, Burke went down with a wrist injury, and Pat Bregoli filled in at QB. Bregoli would score on a 20-yard quarterback sweep around the right end. The point after failed.

In the second quarter, Apache running backs Matt Delorey and Reid Donovan combined on a 70-yard drive that was capped off by a 20-yard TD by Delorey. Bregoli passed to Donovan for the two-point conversion and the Apaches led, 14-0, at the half.

In the third, Delorey and Donovan again led the Apache offense downfield. Delorey ran 30 yards up the middle for the score and Bregoli tossed to Dan Sheehan for the two-point conversion to close out the scoring.

Standings: Manets (3-0), Elks (3-0), Apaches (2-1), Panthers (1-2), Mustangs (0-3), Storm (0-3).

In addition to the showdown between the Elks and Manets, the Apaches take on the Panthers and the Mustangs tangle with the Storm this weekend.

anything. We just have to keep doing what we've doing the past three weeks.

"A lot of the inspiration has come from the senior group, who have used the saying 'Get off the bus ready to play football,' and it's been working for us."

Against Plymouth South, the Red Raiders' defense made its presence felt early and often, intercepting six passes (four in the first half).

In the 25 years I've been here, it was the most I've ever seen," said McPhee. "It has to be a record."

On the Panthers' second possession, North's Mike Powers intercepted quarterback Steve Moyer's pass and galloped 25 yards for a score. Clearing a path for Powers was Brian Wells, who demolished a Panther with a solid block at the Panther 10. James Finn's extra point extended NQ's lead to 15-0 with 6:17 left in the opening quarter.

"Mike (Powers) has come up big for us, made a lot of nice hits along with three interceptions and a couple of scores," said McPhee.

An interception by Manual Vasquez set up Walsh's second touchdown, a one-yard run, late in the first quarter. The Red Raiders' advantage increased to 22-0 with Finn's successful extra point.

Before the half ended, North's offense capitalized on another interception by Powers at the Panthers' 45. On the ninth play of the drive, Semchenko ran eight yards before fumbling the ball at the two-yard line. Teammate Matthew Kane recovered it in the end zone for the Red Raiders' fourth touchdown and Finn added the extra point for a 29-0 halftime lead.

The drive's key play came on a 17-yard run by Semchenko on a third and eight from the Panther 33. A crunching block by Charlie Plaskasovitis on Panther defender Leo Darosa allowed Semchenko to collect the first down at the Panther 16. Three plays later, Kane pounced on the fumble for the touchdown.

"Charlie had a great hit on that waggle, then on Walsh's punt return, he knocked out two guys with one block," said McPhee.

In the third quarter, North's offense picked up where it left off, as Jason Turner (three returns for 112 yards) returned the second-half kickoff 44 yards to the Panthers' 42. Three plays later, Walsh rumbled 14 yards for his third score and Finn's fourth point after gave North a 36-0 lead.

The Panthers (1-3) avoided the shutout when Justin Close scored on an eight-yard run late in the third. Close's brother, Adam, ran seven yards for a touchdown in the fourth for the game's final points.

Editor's note: Maureen Cox, president of the North Quincy Football Boosters, assures all fans planning to attend Friday night's game that plenty of coffee and hot chocolate will be available for purchase.

"Our coffee and hot chocolate were so good we ran out by halftime (against Plymouth South)," said Cox. "We'll be well-stocked for Friday night's game against Barnstable."

North Quincy Girls' Swimmers, Divers Bow

Despite strong performances by a number of swimmers and divers, the North Quincy girls swimming and diving team dropped three recent meets.

In a 100-83 loss to Cambridge Ringe and Latin, senior tri-captain Marianne Blaikie paced North Quincy (1-4) with victories in two individual events and was also a member of two winning relays.

Blaikie finished first in the 200 free (2:14.24) and 500 free (6:03.61) and swam the anchor on the 200 free relay (2:12.37) and 400 free relay (4:34.83) first-place teams.

Teammates Katie Johnson and Laura Cadogan each won an individual event and were also members of the two winning relays. Johnson captured top honors in the 50 free (28.70) ahead of Cadogan, who finished second. In the 100 free, Cadogan edged Johnson with a time of 1:06.36.

Also having a good meet was Jessica Flanigin, who came in second in the 100 back (1:25.24), was a member of the winning 200 free relay team and the third-place 200 medley relay team.

North's Kara Dempsey, on the winning 400 relay team, and Michelle Raimondi, on the third-place 200 free relay team, were both on the third-place 200 medley relay team. Jen Bradford and Candy Chung were on the third-place 200 free relay team.

In 1-meter diving, senior Susan Haydar finished first with a 136.10 in just her second meet this season. Freshman Lisa Della Croce, in her first diving competition, took third with 92.60.

In other action, North fell to New Bedford, 97-64, despite a solid performance from Blaikie, who won two individual events and was on the winning 400 free relay team (4:38.71) and the second-place 200 free relay team (1:59.14). Blaikie took top honors in the 50 free (27.17) and 100 free (59.72) events.

Also on the winning 400 free relay team were Johnson, Cadogan and Dempsey. Johnson and Cadogan were also on the second-place 200 free relay team, along with Blaikie and Jen Bradford. Bradford captured first in the 100 breast in 1:38.50.

Flanigin finished second in the 100 back (1:22.36) and Amy Fagerlund came in second in the 100 breast (1:51.66) and third in the 200 IM (3:06.50).

Raimondi, Kim Stetz, Janna Lentini and Melissa Cooke were on the second-place 400 free relay team.

In a 106-76 loss to Brockton, one of the highlights for North was Haydar's performance in the 1-meter diving event. In her first meet of the season, she finished second with 132.30. points, her highest total in four years.

Three Raider swimmers captured first-place finishes: Blaikie in the 200 free (2:11.31) and 500 free (6:03.51), Johnson in the 50 free (29.02) and Raimondi in the 100 fly (2:01.86). Johnson also came in second in the 100 free (1:07.33), followed by Dempsey in third (1:13.65).

The 200 free relay team of Johnson, Dempsey, Cadogan and Blaikie captured first place in 2:02.41.

North's 400 free relay team (Jonson, Dempsey, Blaikie and Lentini) won the event in 4:58.87.

Soccer

Quincy Girls Drop Two

The Quincy High girls soccer team battled three tough teams last week--Weymouth, Taunton and North Quincy--and came away with one victory and two losses.

In a 7-0 loss to Weymouth, Quincy lost goalie Crystal Kazolias to an injury before the game and was unable to stop Weymouth's potent offensive attack.

Quincy's Marisa Ross fed Erin Flaherty,, who lifted a shot over the Taunton goalie's head for the game-winner in a 2-1 win over Taunton.

At the 11:35 mark of the first half, Quincy's Angela Hogrell shot the ball at the Taunton goalie, who initially made the save before the ball squirted out of her hands and into the net.

"Our girls worked very hard to get this victory," said Quincy coach Robin Welinsky.

Earlier in the week, Quincy battled rival North Quincy but came up just short, losing to the Red Raiders, 1-0.

Playing well for Quincy were Kazolias, sweeper Kara McSweeney, stopper Kim DiBona, Julie Gibbons, Michelle Boncek, Kelly Raymer and Becky Mackey on the outsides, Leanne Martin at center half, and Kerry Duffy and Hogrell at the two outside halfback positions.

Quincy's strong forward line of center Kim Mackey, left wing Jessica DiBona and right wing Flaherty also gave North all it could handle.

"My girls worked their hearts out on that field," said Welinsky. "We played a good passing game with a lot of physical effort exerted. We just need to finish."

After games against Boston Latin and Bridgewater-Raynham earlier this week, the Presidents return to action Monday to host Plymouth South at 10 a.m.

NQ Cross Country Improving,

The North Quincy cross country teams are steadily improving, but their efforts were not enough to stop a powerful Falmouth team on the Clippers' 5-kilometer course.

The North girls lost, 21-35, while the North boys dropped a 20-35 decision.

The improving girls team was led by Lauren Molloy (20:52) and Lynda Wilson (20:53). Sarah Houghton (21:54) and Ashley Crawford (22:10) also made the top 10 for NQ. North's girls had their best team performance in history on Falmouth's course, besting 1992's team which placed fifth in the Allstate that year.

The boys, despite the loss, put five athletes in the top 10 with Jimmy Wan (fifth-17:55), Joe Linskey (sixth-18:23), Matt Quinn (seventh-18:29), Mike Devin (eighth-18:39) and Bryan Linskey (ninth-18:42). Jay Newhall (19:11) just missed the 10th spot.

"Falmouth is a mature, experienced team, and they're tough to beat on their home course," said NQ coach Geoff Hennessy. "We're the team of the future. I'm not the least bit disappointed. We have three freshmen in our top seven girls, and they're improving in leaps and bounds.

"Older runners don't do that. Also captain Lauren Molloy ran the fourth-best time by an NQ runner on Falmouth's course. That's really something."

COMING CLEAN ON CLOGGED INJECTORS

If a car owner uses a brand name gasoline that contains sufficient detergents and deposit control additives, it is seldom necessary to have the fuel injectors cleaned. Back in the mid-1980s, clogging of electronic fuel injectors arose as a problem on cars equipped with multiport fuel injection systems. Such systems have an individual fuel injector to supply fuel to each cylinder in the engine. When it was found that deposits accumulated on injectors of this type to cause rough idle (and engine misfire and poor gas mileage, in severe cases), the petroleum industry quickly came up with the solution of putting special additives in their gasolines that could actually clean the injectors with the engine operating in normal use. Since then, it has not been appropriate to use rough idle as an excuse to clean fuel injectors, unless an improper fuel has been used.

HINT: Fuel injector cleaning is generally of no use on throttle-body fuel injectors, which basically take the place of the old-fashioned carburetor.

Don't hesitate to ask any questions about your fuel injection system or about anything else related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified, service technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon. - Fri. 6 am - 9 pm, Sat. 7 am - 9 pm, Sun. 9 am - 5 pm. Emergency Management, Students Help Prepare For First Lady's Visit

Thirty Quincy Emergency Management personnel joined forces with 40 Air Force Junior Reserve officers last Friday to help make First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton's visit to Quincy a memorable one.

Emergency Management and ROTC personnel worked under the supervision of newly-appointed Deputy Director of Emergency Management William Murphy, Deputy Director John Blackadar and Communications Supervisor John Chetwynd.

Working under the watchful eye of the Secret Service and the Advance White House Team, Emergency Management and ROTC personnel manned the gates where the public passed through with tickets in hand.

"We are fortunate to have a director of Emergency Management, Police Chief Francis Mullen, who is a firm believer in community service," said Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano. "All ninth graders at Quincy High and the Center for Technical Education received training in procedures at the high school and hands-on information through field trips at the Emergency Operating Center at the Quincy Emergency Management Agency.

"School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Lt. Col. Joseph Ciampa, and Sgt. Edward Holland of the ROTC have been most cooperative and enthusiastic regarding the Emergency Management Program. All students who complete the program become members of the Emergency Management/Incident Command System Team consisting of a bike unit, technical support, search and rescue.

"It was an honor for the Emergency Management Agency to assist at the First Lady's visit to Quincy," added Siciliano, who praised the efforts of the city's traffic, public works, police and school departments during the event.

Mullen Commends Police For Actions During Clinton Visit

Police Chief Francis Mullen has commended members of his department for their actions during the visit of First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton last Friday.

In a letter to department members, Mullen wrote:

"It was indeed an honor for me as I stood beside the Officers of this Department at the ceremony for the First Lady, Hillary Clinton, on Friday, Oct. 4.

"During the entire planning stages, through numerous meetings with the Secret Service, the First Lady's advance unit, the Boston and State Police Department, and City of Quincy officials, the Quincy Police Officers were professional and were most instrumental in setting up the security of the entire function.

"Each and every officer, from every rank, and civilian employees as well, displayed professionalism, dedication, and were a credit to themselves, to their department, this city, and the United States of America.

"At this time, I want to commend all of you and thank you for your performance at this historical event. Both the Secret Service and the First Lady's Advance Team recognized the Quincy Police Department as the 'best' and 'most cooperative' department they had ever worked with."

License Board To Inspect Dumpster After Complaints

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board Tuesday voted to perform an on-site inspection immediately regarding the location and overflowing dumpster at Alfredo's Restaurant, 73-77 Franklin St.

Alfredo's was forced to move the dumpster recently because of the construction of the new Hibernia Savings Bank

Chairman Joseph Shea read a letters from Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico and building inspector Matt Mulvey who were both unable to attend the meeting.

According to D'Amico's letter, discussions held with the neighbors regarding the new bank, specified the dumpster not be located next to the residential community.

Mulvey's letter was in regard also to the location and size of the dumpster.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue had earlier suggested eliminating the dumpster and consider more frequent pick-ups after her visit to the site.

Complaints from Don Spinks, an abutter, plus the letters from D'Amico and Mulvey prompted the board's action for the on-site inspection.

Spinks told the board that he and his wife "can't sit in their own backyard" because the "odor drives them back into the house." He also complained about the 50 gallon grease barrel out in back of the restaurant that is uncovered.

Spinks, who has lived in the area for 36 years told the board that he had "been everywhere from the health department to the mayor's office" to move the dumpster away from his property.

Managers of the restaurant Kelly and Christos Chronos promised to purchase a larger dumpster and have BFI pick up three times a week instead of the usual two.

Gallahue admitted after her inspection that "it is a problem with the overflowing and the odors" and added she had received "lots of calls". She advised the Chronos to keep the lid closed and and following the inspection to totally enclose the dumpster.

Shea said the building department and fire department will also inspect the dumpster with the license board.

Police Chief Francis Mullen assured Spinks and the Chronos that the board would come to a "positive solution", following the inspections.

The board will continue the hearing Oct. 15.

Curbside Leaf Collection Begins Oct. 14

Curbside leaf pickup will begin Monday, Oct. 14 and run for six weeks until Friday, Nov. 21.

Leaves will be picked up on the same day as regular trash by a separate truck. They should be put out for pickup either loose in uncovered trash barrels or in 30-gallon biodegradable kraft paper bags, which automatically decompose along with the leaves. Leaves will not be accepted in plastic bags because the State D.E.M. has imposed a statewide moratorium on plastic in landfills.

In the event that the leaves prove persistent and fall wind and rain are mild, the Fall curbside leaf collection will be extended as necessary.

Since the fall of 1990, the city, through its refuse contractor, Browning-Ferris Industries (BFI), has picked up leaves curbside for municipal composting. Leaves are brought to the decomposition pad at the Department of Public Works Corporation Yard, 55 Sea St. Then the leaves decompose into a rich loam, which is reused by the city, and made available to residents at no charge.

The program has been successful for the past five-and-a-half years, keeping an estimated 20,000 tons of leaves out of landfills, and thereby saving the city the associated costs. The elimination of plastic bags will further improve the program and provide additional savings.

Biodegradable kraft paper bags are available in grocery stores, neighborhood convenience stores, and home improvement outlets. The bags are easier to use than plastic bags for picking up raked leaves, hold more leaves, and are fully recyclable.

BFI will attempt to make the change go as smoothly as possible by tagging improperly prepared leaves at the beginning of the collection program. It is expected that tagging will effectively inform anyone who is unaware of the policy change.

USS Franklin Plaque Dedication Aboard USS Salem Saturday

Former crew members of the USS Franklin will place a plaque on board the USS Salem at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point Saturday at 2 p.m.

The plaque will be dedicated to the 921 who gave their lives, and all the other crew members who served on the ship during World War II. The Franklin was an Essex Class aircraft carrier which on March 19, 1945 was struck by two 500-pound bombs while launching her planes 50 miles off the coast of Japan.

In the ensuing conflagration on the Franklin, 725 were killed and 265 wounded. The Franklin was able to regain power during the night and proceed to Ulithi and eventually to the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

The Franklin was the most seriously damaged U.S. Navy ship to make port under her own power during World War II. She also suffered the most casualties of any U.S. Nacy ship that survived.

SPOTLIGHT ON BUSINESS

Personal Touch Continues At Oil, Air Conditioning Firm

Joe Reggiannini Following In His Father's Footsteps

JOE REGGIANNINI, owner of Reggie's Oil, 299 Water St., Quincy, with his father, Armando, who started the business out of his Quincy home over 45 years ago. Joe prides himself on hard work with a personalized touch by getting to know the customer and his or her needs.

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Twenty-six years ago, when he went to work at his father's oil business in Quincy, Joe Reggiannini was determined not to make it his life's work.

Nowadays, however, Reggiannini is the owner of Reggie's Oil, the heating and air conditioning business his father started from his Quincy home in 1950.

"At 19, I went to work with my father and never stopped," said Reggiannini, a Quincy native. "I saw how hard he worked--too hard, and it didn't pay enough, and said 'I'll never do what he does.' Now, I am doing what he did, so I never say never anymore."

Reggiannini, who has headed the business at its present location of 299 Water St. for over 15 years, said he learned on the job from his father, Armando, a 74-year-old native of Quincy.

After graduating from Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth, Reggiannini, 45, spent a year at a business school, then "worked at a few different trades" before going to work for his father.

As the owner of Reggie's Oil, Reggiannini prides himself on doing the job correctly, servicing the customers with a personalized touch.

"I know most of the customers, if not all of them," he said. "I have a lot of experience, and I believe people benefit by it.

"I've been in the business 26 years full-time, and my father is still around and has a lot of knowledge about the business. The other serviceman I have working with me has been in the service industry for 20 years, so we can offer the customers many years of experience.

"I know when I have someone over to work at my house, I want to know about them, their background, if they are really knowledgeable people. I like to go to a person who I trust."

Another aspect of his business Reggiannini touched upon was that despite its relatively small size (850 customers), the quality is not lacking.

He feels the bigger companies are unable to preserve quality because of the large number of customers they service.

"We're still a small company, and it's hard growing today," he said. "I'd like to grow at the right pace, keep the quality and assure the customers that it will stay. We might not be the slickest, but we give the customer a lot for his money. I don't know of any company with volume that does quality work.

"I've always felt that quality and volume just don't go together. If you're big, you just can't do quality work every time. You can't know the people--they're just gallons, volumes, numbers. Young people think being big must mean being successful. They're big because they make money."

Over the last several years, Reggiannini has expanded his business's service area, which includes Boston, Pembroke, Brockton, Holbrook, Randolph, among other nearby communities.

"We cover areas within about 15 miles of Quincy," said Reggiannini. "We've spread out quite a bit the last seven or eight years, though."

Along with Reggiannini, there are two other servicemen and an oil driver who service Reggie's Oil customers, including those who have moved from Quincy.

"People move away, but I still service them," he said. "The company has spread out and grown a bit to service a big area."

How does a smaller company like Reggie's Oil attract new customers, when the larger companies have employees whose position involves recruiting new customers?

"We pick up accounts from referrals, through word of mouth, and we mail letters to new homeowners every week," he said. "It's tough, because the big companies have all the resources, sales staffs and marketing people to bring in new customers. Unfortunately, these new customers aren't being serviced the way they should be."

A West Quincy resident, Reggiannini lives with his wife, Pat, and three sons, Matt, Dan and Joseph, all of whom participate in Little League baseball and Quincy Youth Hockey.

The regular business hours for Reggie's Oil are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and the phone number is 471-2095. For calls during off-hours, there is an answering service available for customers wishing to reach Reggiannini or another employee.

Besides the weekday services, Reggie's Oil offers 24-hour emergency service every day, said Reggiannini.

"We have a serviceman on call every night, and his truck is fully stocked with tools," he said "Ninety-eight percent of the time we can do the job right from our truck."

The busiest months, said Reggiannini, are October to January, when everyone is looking to keep their house warm and insulated from the frigid air outside.

"Things start flying for us in October, though once February starts, things start to quiet down," he said. "It's pretty hectic, competitive and demanding."

Reggiannini's average work week during the winter is 70 hours, an increase of approximately 20 hours over his summer schedule.

"Sometimes running the business is tough, because it's not something people like; it's not a vacation or a day at the beach," he said. "But I do enjoy dealing with people and doing the work right."

College Fair Oct. 15 At Quincy High School

The counselors of the Quincy Public Schools will conduct a College Fair Tuesday, Oct. 15 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Quincy High School Gymnasium.

A Thought For The Week

"Pessimists say, "It can't happen," when it will; "The boss won't buy it," and he does; "We have never done it that way," but now we are.

Orville Wright flew his airplane 120 feet. Marconi sent his signal across the ocean, and Oldsmobile advertised that it was cheaper to buy a car than feed and stable a horse. And it was... Dr. Norman Vincent Peale called this triumph of "can do"... The Power of Positive Thinking.

Beethoven was deaf. Edison's grades were poor in school. Churchill lisped during childhood. But men like these, men who might have been counted out before they began, somehow turned history against pessimism. And now nobody loves a pessimist anymore. It seems pessimism is a dying art...

People are learning not to accept the impossible, the improbable, the inevitable or the prediction of defeat or failure.

They are also learning that for one man to move the world, he must first move himself...

Quincy College To Offer Domestic Violence Forum

Quincy College's Criminal Justice Department is offering a three-week forum addressing issues of violence in local communities.

The programs will be held on Thursdays Oct. 10, 17 and 24 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Quincy High School Auditorium, 52 Coddington St., Quincy Center.

Today, the forum will address issues of "Domestic Violence." Topics will include elder abuse, the impact of domestic violence on children, community services available to victims of battering, batterers' treatment programs and the role of law enforcement in combating domestic violence.

On Oct. 17, the topic will be "Violence Prevention and Intervention." Participants will learn how mediation stops violence in our homes, schools and communities by exploring conflict resolution and confrontation skills. Concepts and strategies will cover effective management of conflicts within the family, peer mediation in schools and mediation of community experts.

All program are open to the public free of charge. For advance registration, call 984-1655.

PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 96PE0106-PP1

To Harriet Goldman of Quincy, Vincent A. DiRusso of Quincy and the City of Quincy all within the County of Norfolk and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Joan Wechsler of 148 Puritan Drive, Quincy, in the County of Norfolk representing that she holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County and briefly described as follows: A certain parcel of land, in Quincy, Norfolk County, Massachusetts said to contain 1.33 acres of land, more or less, as outlined on a Map made by E.W. Branch in 1907, as published by the said Branch in a Map showing the area of the property in Quincy which may more particularly be described as follows:

Beginning at the Northeast corner of the land, now or formerly of one McGrath, on Douglas Street (the portion of which is now known as Springfield Street) in West Quincy, and running Westerly 190 feet on the land, now or formerly of said McGrath, then Northerly by the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, to the Quincy Quarries Company Railroad, thence from that point northwesterly on the land, nor or formerly J.S. Swingle, then Northeasterly on the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, then Southeasterly on the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, to the Quincy Quarries Railroad, then Easterly to Douglas Street, then via Douglas Street (the portion of which is now known as Springfield Street) to the point of beginning, the same lot being Lot No. 5 on a map of October 1904, as made by H.T. Whitman, C.E., together with the building or buildings thereon, with an exclusive right to all the privileges connected with the well that attaches to the land sold at the present time setting forth that she desire that all of said land my be sold at private sale for not less than $350,000 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham, 649 High St., P.O. Box 269, Dedham, MA 02027-0269 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the thirtieth day of October 1996, the return day of this citation.

INVITATION TO BID

INVITATION TO BID

The Department of Public Works for the City of Quincy, Massachusetts will receive sealed bids for Coastal Seawalls Rehabilitation Project: Phase V until 10:00 AM local time on October 24, 1996 at the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, Massachusetts 02169, at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The work under this contract consists the rehabilitation work (repair, restoration and/or replacement) of existing seawalls, stone revetments, shoreline utilities and amenities, stabilization of beach and other areas adjacent to seawalls, tidegates, tidegate chambers, walks, paved areas, roads, fences, and other associated infrastructural facilities.

All work shall be performed in accordance with the Massachusetts Highway Department's Standard Specifications for Highways and Bridges (1988 edition) and Construction Standards (1977 edition), all as last revised, unless specified or directed otherwise.

A work under this contract shall be completed in 120 calendar days, no inclusive or winter recess.

A non-refundable deposit of $75.00 in cash or check is required for each set of Contract Documents. Bidders requesting Contract Documents by mail shall pay an additional non-refundable amount of $15.00 per set to cover shipping and handling costs. All checks shall be made payable to the City of Quincy.

The Contract Documents may be obtained during the business hours of 8:30 AM to 4:30 PM at the Offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, Engineering Division, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 on or after Wednesday, October 9, 1996.

A pre-bid conference will be held in the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works on Wednesday, Thursday, October 17, 1996 @ 2:00 PM. All prospective bidders are urged to attend.

Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid security in the amount of five percent (5%) of the total value of the bid in the form described in the Instructions to Bidders. The Successful Bidder shall be required to furnish a one hundred percent (100%) Construction Performance Bond and a one hundred percent (100%) Payment and Performance Bonds from a surety company acceptable to the City. The bidding and award of this contract shall be in full compliance with Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 30, Section 39M, as last revised.

No bidder may withdraw the bid within 60 calendar days after the actual date of the opening of the bids.

All prospective bidders must be certified by the Mass Highway Department. A pre-bid qualification certification from Mass. Highway must be presented to the DPW prior to obtaining plans and specifications.

All Federal/State and City of Quincy regulations in relation to Minimum Wage Rates, Minority Business Enterprise, Women Business Enterprise, Minority Work Force, Equal Employment Opportunity and Employment of Quincy Residents must be complied with. The project goals in these areas shall be as given below:

1. The Contractor shall maintain on the project a not less than ten percent (10%) ratio of minority employee manhours to total manhours in each job category.

2. A minimum of ten percent (10%) MBE participation and five percent (5%) WBE participation by state-certified MBEs and WBEs will be required and maintained on this project. The bidder shall submit completed MBE/WBE forms with the bid.

3. Compliance with the City of Quincy's Ordinance No. 532 requiring Contractors working on City-supported construction projects to hire a certain percentage of Quincy Residents is mandatory.

4. Performance with the minimum wage rates for all workers, as mandated by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries issued in the most current "Wage Decisions" as applicable to the project area shall be enforced.

Failure to comply with these requirements may render the bid non-responsive, and thus ineligible for further consideration. No waiver for any portion of these provisions will be granted. The City reserves the right to waive any informality in or to reject any or all bids if deemed in the best interest of the City. The City does not condone submission of unbalanced bids. Such Bids may be summarily rejected.

Concourse Committee Meeting Today

A special meeting of the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Quincy Center Concourse will be held today (Thursday) at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Two options relative to the basic operation of the proposed $5.6 million roadway linking Burgin Parkway with McGrath Highway in the downtown Quincy business area must be decided by the CAC to meet scheduled deadlines.

One option is the Hession Alignment, which provides for a continuous two-way route from Burgin to McGrath Highways. The second proposal, called the Mechanic Street Westbound Preferential, would provide for a traffic flow limited to westbound direction east of Hancock Street.

All committee members are encouraged to attend.

Ayers Seeks Enforcement Of Sex Offender Law

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers is seeking strict enforcement of a new state law requiring sex offenders to register with their local police department after moving into a community.

The City Council passed a resolution introduced by Ayers Monday night requesting that Police Chief Francis Mullen appoint a representative from the Quincy Police Department to be responsible for information received regarding such offenders.

The state's Sex Offender Registry Law, which was passed in August, went into effect earlier this month.

Ayers said he wants the police representative to monitor related information and work with state Public Safety Secretary Kathleen O'Toole.

Ayers also introduced a second resolution that would require coaches and volunteers for sports teams, clubs and organizations to run their names through the sex offender registry.

"We have to protect the children," said Ayers.

Also on Monday night, the City of Marlborough passed legislation that similarly targeted offenders who become involved with youth activities.

Mullen: Sex Offenders Must Register With Police

plan to change addresses within the community, and offenders must annually appear in person at the police department to verify that the data on file is accurate.

"Those affected by this law face up to two and one-half years in the House of Correction or up to a $1,000 fine upon conviction for failing to register. A second or subsequent conviction carries a minimum sentence of 90 days and fine of up to $5,000," said Mullen.

Sex offenders must register until 20 years elapse from either conviction or adjucation or release from all custody or supervision, whichever is the later time. Someone convicted of two or more sex offenses committed on different occasions must register for life.

"This law will enable neighbors and the public in high risk cases, and affected groups who may come in contact with these offenders in cases of moderate risk to be notified by the Quincy Police Department," said Mullen.

Council Accepts $25,000 From Atlantic Development

The City Council on Monday night accepted a $25,000 gift from Atlantic Development of Hingham that will be used for various improvements in Ward 2.

The money is part of the mitigation package Atlantic Development agreed to in 1994 when the council granted the firm a permit to build the Granite Crossing shopping center near The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point. The center includes the Roche Bros. Supermarket and a planned Wal-Mart store.

City Auditor Robert Foy said the $25,000 will go into a special account until it is dispersed by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

GROUND WAS BROKEN Tuesday for Harbor Express, a new catamaran commuter ferry service scheduled to begin operating Nov. 15 between the Fore River shipyard and Boston. Among those attending the ceremonies at the shipyard were, from left, Leland Bishop II, president of Water Transportation Alternatives Inc. of Quincy which will operate the service; Mayor James Sheets and Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi. 20-Minute Run From FR Shipyard

High Speed Ferry Service To Logan Starts Nov. 15

Ground was broken Tuesday at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point for a high-speed catamaran commuter ferry service that will whisk passengers to Boston's Logan International Airport and Long Wharf in 20 minutes.

The service, scheduled to begin Nov. 15 to Logan and Dec. 15 to Long Wharf, is the first of its kind in New England.

Among those in attendance were Mayor James Sheets and officials from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, which owns the shipyard; Massport, which operates Logan International Airport in Boston, one of two destinations of the ferry service; and General Dynamics, which is financing the $5 million commuter boat venture.

The catamaran commuter ferry, known as Harbor Express, will be operated by Water Transportation Alternatives Inc. of Quincy.

The new service, which will run daily, follows the opening of another commuter boat service last month between Marina Bay and Long Wharf. Harbor Express will begin service to Logan Nov. 15 and service to Long Wharf Dec. 15.

Sheets said the groundbreaking was held for the structure at the site where tickets will be sold as well as a parking area. He added that he is glad to see the service is coming to the city.

"I'm thrilled," he said. "It extends our capacity as the hub of the South Shore."

The mayor added that the service will include two ferries that can each transport about 150 people per trip.

Although Harbor Express is a subsidiary of General Dynamics--the shipbuilding giant which closed its manufacturing operations in 1996 and sold it to the MWRA--the commuter boat project was originally the idea of two South Shore businessmen: Bill Walker of Duxbury and Mike McGurl of Scituate, a former Quincy

ABCC Decision On Stop & Shop License Expected This Week

The Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) could reach a decision as early as this week on whether Stop & Shop's new North Quincy store will sell beer and wine, according to the city's liquor inspector.

Sgt. Richard Laracy of the Quincy Police Department said the ABCC ruling could come as early as Friday. The commission promised a decision within 30 days following a lengthy hearing last week.

"The decisions usually come within a week or two," said Laracy.

A group of Montclair residents led by Kevin Coughlin, president of the Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association, is appealing a Sept. 10 vote by the Quincy License Board to grant a liquor license to the store. The board voted 3-2 to grant the license.

Coughlin and opponents of the license say alcohol sales by a supermarket sends the wrong message to children.

"I just think it desensitizes kids to the whole issue of alcohol," Coughlin said this week. He added that while some neighbors could live with a compromise of the sale of alcohol in a segregated wing of the store, the "overwhelming consensus" is that there is no need

AIDS Consortium Setting Up Emergency Fund

The Quincy/South Shore AIDS Consortium (QSSAC) is establishing an Emergency Fund for people living with HIV and AIDS in Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth.

The emergency fund will be used as a "last resort" for crisis situations in which no alternative funding sources can be found. Funds will only be provided at times when clients have a plan in place to maintain their own expenses in the future.

Applicants to the fund will be screened by QSSAC members and no direct cash payments will be made to clients. Instead, the QSSAC will provide vouchers, and give direct payments to individuals and companies to whom money is owed when no other funding sources are available.

Donations are very important at this beginning stage of development as the QSSAC builds a fund that will always have resources available should a crisis arise. Donations are needed to establish the resource fund. Once a base fund is established, the QSSAC will publicize that applications are being accepted.

To make a donation, send a check payable to Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, 38 Broad St., Quincy, MA 02169, Attn: John Yazwinski. Specify that the check is for the QSSAC Emergency Fund.

For more information, call Yazwinski at 770-3314 or Kathy Kurtz at 472-2828.

Entertainment, Discount Prices Among Highlights

Quincy Center Festival Sunday

The sixth annual Harvest Festival, sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, will be held Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The event will include special discounts from downtown merchants and a number of other displays and attractions. Discounts also will be offered throughout this week at a number of businesses as the QCBPA celebrates Harvest Festival Week. In addition, the official grand opening of the Quincy Promenade along Ross Way will be part of the event.

Hancock St. will be closed Sunday during the festival to vehicular traffic from Granite to Cliveden Sts. Rain date for the festival is Oct. 27.

Among the highlights will be a Children's Costume Parade for youngsters in Grades K-5 scheduled to form at 1:45 p.m. The parade will pass down Hancock St. past a panel of judges from the business and artisan communities. There will be two categories--children 6 and younger and children 7 and older--and four trophies designed by Everlasting Engraving will be awarded in each category.

To register a child in the parade, call the QCBPA office at 471-3232.

Entertainment for the festival from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. will consist of the popular local band Group Therapy, Gerrie's Clowns, and The Balloon Man. The event also will include special offerings from vendors and crafters, pony rides, and several kiddy rides.

The grand opening of the Quincy Promenade, a Faneuil Hall-style marketplace along Ross Way, will begin around 4 p.m. Entertainment will be provided by headlining act The Drifters who will be preceded by local favorites Clutch Grabwell and the Led Foot Horns.

For more information about the festival or Harvest Festival Week, call the QCBPA office.

THE CHILDREN'S COSTUME parade and contest will again be one of the highlights of the annual Harvest Family Festival to be held on Hancock St. Sunday. The festival is sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. The costume parade starts at 2 p.m.

Squantum Flood Project Completed

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers announces that the Squantum Flood Mitigation Project has been completed in time for the winter season.

Ayers has been working with Public Works Commissioner David Colton, Mayor James Sheets and other city officials to help resolve the problems of flooding and seawall construction in the Squantum area before the onset of the fall and winter seasons are upon us.

Colton recently reviewed the entire project which now includes a seawall extension along East Squantum St., a backyard drainage installation, and tidegate restoration, which had been performed in various stages over the last few years.

The project also included street and sidewalk reconstruction along with the drainage improvements. Ayers said he has been working with the neighbors over the last few years and has set some short and long term goals toward the flooding problems which have haunted the Squantum residents in the past.

"Now that the project is completed, it will provide adequate protection for the residents," Ayers said.

Most recently, the City, with the support of Ayers and Sheets, completed the East Squantum Street Transportation Improvements Project which included signalization, traffic pattern modification, sidewalk installation, etc. Ayers praised the efforts of Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Bellotti

Vote On SQ Social Club Liquor License Nov. 12

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The South Quincy Social Club, 480 Quincy Ave., will have to wait until next month to receive a Club All-Alcoholic Beverage License from the Quincy License Board.

The board, which traditionally has anyone requesting a liquor license appear before it twice, voted Tuesday to continue the matter until its next meeting Nov. 12. In addition to following standard procedure, board members said they want to speak to Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi about the request.

Atty. Edward Fleming, who spoke on behalf of the club, said the non-profit organization is seeking to provide its members with alcoholic beverages while they are on the premises. The club, which recently moved from Granite Street, has no plans to serve alcohol to the public, he added.

The club, founded in 1974 by 10 members, now has about 69 members, according to Fleming. He said it has made charitable contributions to Quincy Community Action Programs, Sterling Middle School, Veterans Memorial Stadium and various athletic, children's and veterans' organizations.

Fleming said the South Quincy Social Club has made about $30,000 worth of renovations to the Quincy Avenue property, including new windows, gutters and bathrooms. The club's plans have the support of the real estate business next door as well as nearby South Shore Mental Health, he noted, and has received no initial objections from Raymondi.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said he has noticed the improvements made to the property.

"They've done an excellent job cleaning up the grounds," he said. "They've improved the area already."

Gorman added that the planned widening of East Howard Street also will work in the club's favor.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, the License Board chairman, said the city is close to meeting the limit of 91 liquor licenses the city is allowed by law. Club licenses, however, are exempted from that limit, he said.

Elks Receive Keno License

The Quincy License Board voted 4-0 Tuesday to grant a Keno license to the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., West Quincy.

Michelle Murphy, speaking on behalf of the Elks, said the game will be available to lodge members only in the building's downstairs lounge. The bartender will not be allowed to operate the game during lunchtime, she added.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, the License Board chairman and a member of the Elks Lodge, abstained from the vote.

At the conclusion of Tuesday's meeting, board members agreed to have Quincy businesses caught allowing minors to play Keno during a recent "sting" conducted by the state brought before the board at its next meeting Nov. 12.

"They caught several of our convenience stores," Shea noted.

Sheets said he also believes the service will bring more tourists to the shipbuilding museum.

Two Domestic Violence Programs At Quincy College

Quincy College is holding special programs today (Thursday) and Thursday, Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Quincy High School Auditorium as part of a forum on domestic violence.

Today's program, "Violence Prevention and Intervention," is designed to teach participants how mediation stops violence in homes, schools and communities by exploring conflict resolution and confrontation skills. Concepts and strategies will cover effective management of conflicts within the family, peer mediation in schools, and mediation of community disputes.

On Oct. 24, a live performance of "The Yellow Dress," the acclaimed one-woman play about teen dating violence will be presented. Discussion facilitated by community experts will follow the play.

For more information and advance registration, call 984-1655.

Forum On Disabilities At City Hall Nov. 7

A public forum entitled "Disabled People Helping Disabled People: Focus Your Abilities in Working With a Disability" will be held Thursday, Nov. 7 from 6 to 8 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

A panel of speakers will share their experiences, including disappointments and triumphs, towards going to work.

Admission is free. An award presentation will be held.

ATTORNEY AT LAW

PUTTING UP A DEFENSE

While much has been said about victims' rights and their ability to recover damages for injuries they have suffered, relatively little has been said about those named as defendants in civil lawsuits. After receiving a summons, the defendant has a specified period to respond to the complaint with an "answer." This response may be used to deny the plaintiffs charges entirely or it can be used to assert an "affirmative defense" to the plaintiff's claim, such as the plaintiff was injured through his or her own negligence. The defendant may also file a counterclaim that states, in fact, that it was the plaintiff who took some action which resulted in damages to the defendant. For instance, while the original complaint may charge the defendant with negligence in operating his or her car (resulting in an accident and damages to the plaintiff's car), the counterclaim may state that it was the plaintiff who was negligent and responsible for damage to the defendant's car.

HINT: One common answer to a complaint is one which contains a motion asking the court to dismiss the charges for failing to state a cause of action.

If you've been injured as the result of another's negligence, you don't want to have to worry about what is allowed under the law and what is not. Don't waste any time, get the advice of an experienced attorney immediately! Remember, your rights are only as good as your ability to protect them. Voter Registration Booming

New voter registration for the Presidential election Nov. 5 has been booming at City Hall.

"We have been averaging about 100 a day the last two weeks," reports City Clerk Joseph Shea. "They are coming by mail and in person.

SHEA

"If it continues, it could get us up to the 50,000 mark in total registration before the deadline." (Wednesday, 8 p.m.)

Shea doesn't have a breakdown, yet but the new voters reflect the fact that Quincy is still very much a Democratic stronghold.

"Most seem to be registering as Democrats with unenrolled second and Republicans third," says Shea.

The 50,000 mark if reached would be a gain of some 1,500 over the number of registered voters at the time of the primary elections last month.

But, 50,000 would not be a record high for the city. The record is 51,193.

And it wasn't set in 1960, as you might think, when John F. Kennedy defeated Richard Nixon in that famous cliff-hanger.

It was actually 1972 when Nixon won in a landslide over George McGovern. The McGovern-Shriver ticket took only Massachusetts and carried Quincy 23,528 to 17,763 over the Nixon-Agnew team.

Some 42,419 of Quincy's 51,193 (82.8 percent) registered voters turned out for that election.

Registered voters here in 1960 totalled 49,470 and 45,565 or 92.1 percent went to the polls to give Kennedy-Johnson a 26,990 to 18,163 win here over Nixon-Lodge.

Quincy, at that time, was just turning Democratic thanks largely to voter registration drives by the Kennedy campaign.

THIS YEAR'S QUINCY voter registration figures should come as good news to both William Delahunt and Tim Cahill.

CAHILL

They are the only two Quincy candidates in contested races on the Nov. 5 ballot with Delahunt running for Congress in the 10th Congressional district and Cahill for Norfolk County treasurer.

A big Quincy turnout and vote would give them a good--and needed--send-off into their respective districts on election day.

SPEAKING OF DELAHUNT, a Globe-WBZ-TV poll gives him a "wide" lead over his Republican opponent Edward Teague. The best thing Delahunt could do with that poll is to ignore it. At least not take too much comfort in it.

The poll shows Delahunt leading 47 to 35 percent with 18 percent undecided. Now, if that undecided 18 percent was leaning toward Teague it could add up to over 50 percent.

Delahunt may have made the mistake of believing the polls before the primary election that pronounced him the strong front runner. Observers think he started "to coast" as a result and found himself in a recount-court battle to finally wrest the nomination away from Phil Johnston in what turned out to be a razor-thin win.

TEAGUE CERTAINLY ISN'T taking anything for granted. He even has his mother out on the campaign trail.

TEAGUE

Margaret Teague, mother of 12, could be a big help in a close race campaigning and "helping my son get his common sense message out."

Never, never underestimate the power of a mother. Especially the mother of 12 children.

KERRY

SENATOR John Kerry will be back in town Sunday as the keynote speaker at the Quincy Democratic City Committee fundraiser brunch (10 a.m.) at the Bryan VFW Post on Broad St. Tickets are $15.

DAN FLYNN, head of the downtown realty-property management firm that bears his name and president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, has departed the eligible bachelor ranks.

FLYNN

Wedding bells rang from him and Margaret Mullen in St. Clement's Church, Somerville, Saturday. The bride is a registered nurse at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Congratulations and best wishes.

A FEW LEFTOVER thoughts from Hillary Rodham Clinton's visit to Quincy:

HILLARY

In addition to campaigning for Democratic candidates while here she accented the need for strong public education. But it struck me as a little ironic when members of the City Council got to meet her inside the Crane Library but members of the School Committee were not invited.

And, the Bernazzani School fourth grade choral group directed by Susan Glaser performed before the First Lady arrived on stage and then bravely sat through the long program in chilly weather. Too bad they weren't asked to sing while she was there to hear them. I'm sure she would have been delightfully impressed.

Hillary will probably long remember Quincy for the warm reception she received her. A member of her advance team will long remember Quincy for another reason. Sabrina Corlette, in from Washington, was arrangements coordinator for the Quincy visit, had her wallet stolen shortly after arriving.

And, of course, there is always someone seizing the opportunity to show a perverted sense of humor: The guy who picked up two ticks for the First Lady's visit and gave him name as Vincent Foster.

Overall though, it was a good day for Quincy to long remember.

The words to the national hymn, America, were written by the Reverend Samuel Francis Smith in 1831 for a children's Fourth of July picnic in Boston.

NQHS Back-To-School Conference Night Oct. 24

The North Quincy High School Staff and Parent Council will hold a Back-To-School Conference Night Thursday, Oct. 24 from 6:45 to 9:30 p.m. at school, 318 Hancock St.

Parents are invited to attend and follow their student's schedule, meet his or her teachers, have an opportunity to receive a handout outlining the course content, expecta-tions, tests and homework, and to conference with each teacher.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1940's view of the Wollaston Theater on Beale Street in Wollaston Center. Built in 1926, it opened as the New Wollaston even though there is no evidence that there was an 'old' one. The 'Wollie,' as it is called by the locals, is the only surviving Quincy neighborhood theater. It is quite large with 1259 seats on one level. The old traditional styled marquee shown here was replaced shortly after this picture was taken and the two lamps and statues on the top of the building are gone, but otherwise the streetscape of this building is pretty much the same today with different tenants in the shops. The large building on the right, no longer extant, was built as the Masonic Temple and later became home of the Wollaston Legion Post 295.

New Wing Needed For Wollaston School

October 17 - 23
1963

By PAUL HAROLD

Wollaston School Principal Robert Hamilton advised the School Committee of the increasing need for classroom space and proposed a new wing to meet the ongoing increase in students.

Two classes were meeting in the basement, and the 125 kindergarten students were being bused to other schools, but the projection for next year showed the need for two additional classrooms.

Great Hill School representatives voiced similar overcrowding problems.

School projections had forecast a decrease in school population, but this year alone there was an increase of 300 over last year's total.

MEXICO TRIP OKAYED FOR NQHS CLASS

The School Committee gave its approval to Mable Pratt's Spanish class to travel to Mexico. The trip for the 21 students was recommended to the committee by both principal John Walsh and Supt. Robert Pruitt.

Before the vote, committee member Frank Anselmo tested Miss Pratt's knowledge of Spanish with a brief dialogue, much to the amusement of committee members and the audience.

SUB WORK SOUGHT FROM ELECTRIC BOAT

Top level discussions took place this week between officials from Bethlehem Steel and General Dynamics on an agreement to sub-contract Electric Boat work at Fore River.

In the past Bethlehem Steel had done machining and hull sections for General Dynamics for both Polaris and attack submarines. With 16 contracts, industry observers said Electric Boat had more work than it could handle.

Fore River General Manager Samuel Wakeman had no comment on the talks.

Supports Senior Citizen Property Tax Rebate Program

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I was pleased to read in the Oct. 3, 1996 edition of The Sun of Councillor Daniel Raymondi's desire to initiate in Quincy a senior citizen property tax rebate program for senior volunteers.

As a member of Quincy's Family Council, I first recommended this program and provided documentation about it to Mayor Sheets and Council on Aging Director Brian Buckley in the fall of 1995. Such a program seemed particularly apropos given the Mayoral proclamation of 1995 as the Year of the Senior.

The Senior Citizen Tax Rebate program was first developed in Littleton, Colo., in January 1990 as a pilot program allowing senior citizen volunteers to work off a portion of their school property taxes by performing volunteer work part-time in schools. Its success quickly spread throughout Colorado.

Chelmsford was the first community in Massachusetts to implement this type of program in 1992 and as Marty Walsh, Chelmsford's Senior Center Director related to me last year, it has been a wonderful success. It benefits the senior homeowner who may be house-rich but cash-poor with a much needed tax break while giving the community the benefit of that senior's skills and experience. It also provides many intrinsic social benefits offering another avenue for retired seniors to feel productive and connected to the community. Additionally, it could provide another forum within which to bring different generations together through the use of seniors as mentors and tutors.

Although as with any new initiative, the devil is in the details, I am certain that the success experienced in other communities with this program can be translated to Quincy. I hope that Mayor Sheets and the City Council will support this modest proposal.

Johnston Thanks Voters For Their Support

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I want to express my deep gratitude to the thousands of people on the South Shore, the Cape and the Islands who supported my candidacy for Congress.

Although the bizarre events of the past few days have been difficult to absorb, my family and I are very proud of the campaign we waged. When we began last winter, we were far behind in the polls. We were outspent by other candidates but we were never outworked. Our volunteers in every community in the district worked their hearts out for many months. They are the reason we did so well on Sept. 17.

I ran for Congress because I wanted to advocate on behalf of a policy agenda which I believe is in the interests of average working people in our country. I believe that every American should have access to high-quality, affordable health care, that our public schools should be the best on earth and that our natural resources should be protected. The voters responded positively to that agenda and I am grateful for that.

As President Kennedy pointed out, life is unfair. I will always believe that a plurality of voters supported my candidacy on Sept. 17. A recount confirmed that, but a judge ruled otherwise. Despite the pain of that ruling, my family and I will look back on the campaign as a time of joy and passion, when our friends joined with us to produce a near-miracle. We will continue to work together to advance our agenda to make the South Shore, the Cape and the Islands--and, indeed, our entire nation--a better place for all our people.

Salvation Army Seeks Help For The Holidays

[The following is an open letter to the residents of Quincy.]

Christmas is only two months away. We are very aware of that here at The Salvation Army.

We know that in a couple of months we will be called upon to help make the holiday more special for Quincy families and individuals. You have worked in partnership with us in the past to make this possible, and we ask you to join us again.

There are many ways you can help. If you have a large company, you might consider a food or toy drive. Smaller groups might consider sponsoring a family. Volunteers are needed to take applications, distribute gifts, and stand kettles. Donations of funds are always appreciated.

Please call us at 472-2345 for more information on how you can participate. Thank you and God bless you.

Stuffed Acorn Squash

Over the weekend I had a "dry run" Thanksgiving Day dinner. With a large family, as a lot of you readers know, sometimes it's difficult to have a peaceful dinner.

This time, my husband thought it would be nice to invite two of our six children with their families.

Instead of the usual butternut squash as one of the vegetables, I prepared stuffed acorn squash. One was stuffed with sweet potatoes and the other with butternut squash. It turned out so delicious, colorful and different.

STUFFED ACORN SQUASH

1 large acorn squash
2 sweet potatoes
1 8 ounce package of frozen butternut squash (or fresh equivalent) cinnamon to sprinkle around the sides and middle of the acorn squash and the butternut squash butter or margarine
salt and pepper to taste

Cut the acorn squash in half lengthwise. Scoop out the seeds. Set aside.

Cook the sweet potatoes either in the microwave or boiled. Skin and mash adding butter, salt and pepper (or margarine) Set aside.

Defrost the butternut squash for about 4 minutes, so it is manageable I then added a smidgen according to taste..

Stuff one half of the acorn squash with the mixed sweet potatoes, and the other half with the butternut squash. In a slightly greased baking dish place a cup of water on the bottom. Place the squash and cover. Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 30 minutes. Uncover and bake for another 5 to 10 minutes, depending on how tender the sides of the acorn squash are.

After they had cooled, I sliced them about an inch thick. The colors were so autumn like and each person had a choice of which one they wanted. (some took a little of both). It got raves!

'Remembering Ruth Gordon' At Adams Academy Oct. 24

The Quincy Historical Society will present a program and open an exhibit on the life of career of actress-author Ruth Gordon Thursday, Oct. 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy.

The event is being held in recognition of the 100th anniversary of Gordon's birth.

RUTH GORDON

Gordon, a Wollaston native, was one of the century's most distinguished stage and screen actresses, a highly-regarded author of plays and memoirs, and a figure beloved by the American public. She maintained lifelong ties with and interest in Quincy and returned to the city frequently. The range of her achievements and the enduring influence of Quincy upon her are subjects of the exhibit and live program.

The opening program, "Remembering Ruth Gordon," will combine biography and reminiscence. Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth, former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, and Patriot Ledger critic Constance Gorfinkle will be among those commenting on personal acquaintance with Gordon. Historical Society Director Edward Fitzgerald will present an overview of her life and career. Guided tours of the exhibit and a reception with refreshments will follow. Admission is free and all are welcome.

The museum exhibit, "Ruth Gordon, From Quincy To the World," traces Gordon's biography through photos, documents, and artifacts. Included are rare childhood photos and her Christening cup.

The exhibit will be on view from the evening of Oct. 24 through Jan. 17. Musuem hours are weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from 1 to 4 p.m. The museum is free to Historical Society members. Voluntary donations from non-members are appreciated.

In conjunction with the exhibit, the society will present an educational series beginning Oct. 25 on Gordon as screen actress and screenwriter, featuring screenings of several of her films. The series is free and all are welcome.

For an exact schedule, call 773-1144.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

City To Receive $19,000 From DARE Program

The city will receive $19,000 in grants from the statewide DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program.

The announcement was made jointly by state Reps. Michael Bellotti, Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano and Sen. Michael Morrissey. Statewide, $4.3 million in funds are being distributed.

At a recent State House ceremony, members of the Quincy delegation, DARE program members, DARE officers and officials from throughout the state were joined by Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci and Public Safety Commissioner Kathleen O'Toole in announcing the grants.

"These DARE programs do some of the most important work in this state, and they're working toward our goal of helping young people in Massachusetts get a healther, safer start in life," said Bellotti.

Morrissey said, "The state-funded DARE program in Fiscal 1996 trained nearly 240,000 students across Massachusetts in grade school, with special emphasis on fifth and sixth graders."

Currently, DARE programs are operating materials which the officers and students will need for the 17-week curriculum the program offers.

"We are pleased that just this past summer through this program with the assistance of the district attorney's office we implemented Summer Camps in 14 areas including Quincy, thus providing the opportunity for young people to enjoy outdoor activities," said Mariano.

Added Tobin, "These activities teach trust, teamwork, and a feeling of accomplishment for all those involved."

City Curbside Leaf Collection Underway

Curbside leaf pickup began this week and will run for six weeks until Friday, Nov. 21.

Leaves will be picked up on the same day as regular trash by a separate truck. They should be put out for pickup either loose in uncovered trash barrels or in 30-gallon biodegradable kraft paper bags, which automatically decompose along with the leaves. Leaves will not be accepted in plastic bags because the State D.E.M. has imposed a statewide moratorium on plastic in landfills.

In the event that the leaves prove persistent and fall wind and rain are mild, the Fall curbside leaf collection will be extended as necessary.

Since the fall of 1990, the city, through its refuse contractor, Browning-Ferris Industries (BFI), has picked up leaves curbside for municipal composting. Leaves are brought to the decomposition pad at the Department of Public Works Corporation Yard, 55 Sea St. Then the leaves decompose into a rich loam, which is reused by the city, and made available to residents at no charge.

The program has been successful for the past five-and-a-half years, keeping an estimated 20,000 tons of leaves out of landfills, and thereby saving the city the associated costs. The elimination of plastic bags will further improve the program and provide additional savings.

Biodegradable kraft paper bags are available in grocery stores, neighborhood convenience stores, and home improvement outlets. The bags are easier to use than plastic bags for picking up raked leaves, hold more leaves, and are fully recyclable.

BFI will attempt to make the change go as smoothly as possible by tagging improperly prepared leaves at the beginning of the collection program. It is expected that tagging will effectively inform anyone who is unaware of the policy change.

For more information, call Michael Wheelwright at 376-1901.

YMCA Capital Campaign Underway

The South Shore YMCA's Capital Campaign is underway to raise $2.5 million for construction, renovations and improvements to the Y's facility at 79 Coddington St., Quincy Center.

The work will include the addition of a new pool. Currently, more than 650 children remain on waiting lists to learn to swim.

South Shore residents can support the effort by purchasing an engraved commerorative brick to be placed in a new walkway from the parking lot to the redesigned facility entrance. For each $150 contribution, a brick can be customized and placed in the walkway as a lasting visual symbol of support for the YMCA.

Tiles, medallions and benches also are available for engraving with a personalized message to commemorate other levels of support at costs of $1,500, $5,000 and $5,000 respectively.

For more information, call Linda Dyment at 479-8500, ext. 102.

Parade Committee Seeks Flatbed Owners

The Quincy Christmas Festival Committee, a non-profit organization, is seeking owners of trucking flatbeds willing to donate the use of their equipment for parade floats.

REPORT STREET LIGHT OUTAGES
24 hours, 7 days
376-1490

The annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade, the largest of its kind along the East Coast, attracts up to 250,000 spectators from the start along the three-mile Hancock St. route at Quincy Ave. to the terminus at North Quincy High School.

The need for additional flatbeds this year is due to an increase in the number of organizations planning to enter parade floats.

Float entries must conform to certain parade guidelines and are eligible for prizes to be judged in various categories. This year's parade will be held Dec. 1.

Flatbed truck owners wishing to donate the use of their equipment are asked to contact Festival Committee Float Coordinator Paul Kennedy at 423-3612.

Sheltering Coalition To Present Recognition Awards Oct. 29

The Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC) will hold its Annual Meeting and Recognition Dinner Tuesday, Oct. 29 at Raffael's in North Quincy.

The event, which is open to the public, will begin with a social hour at 5:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m.

Award recipients this year include Building 19 1/11 in North Weymouth, for its support of Father Bill's Place; Arlene Kelley, RN, who will receive The Edward F. Fitzgerald Award for her nursing work with the Harvard Pilgrim Alliance for the Homeless at Father Bill's; and Hugh Nawn, for his volunteer work with the Direct Care Program.

Also, Mark Nolan, for his pro bono legal work with QISC; Jim Pansullo, for his fund-raising efforts on behalf of homeless agencies throughout Greater Boston; and Mayor James Sheets, for the city's innovative housing programs to meet the needs of the homeless.

Seating is limited. Reservations are required and may be made by calling Janice or Linda at 376-2255.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER A STROKE

Like heart attacks, strokes are crisis events that can result in sudden death or disability. Also, as is the case with heart attacks, the most critical time for a stroke is what follows within the first minutes and hours after it occurs. The main symptoms of a stroke include loss of feeling and ability to function. Often one area or side of the body will be most affected, depending upon which part of the brain bears the brunt of the stroke's impact. Emergency treatment can help minimize the damage and even save a life. Tests such as a computed tomography (CT) or magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) may be ordered to determine the exact location and degree of brain damage. Drug therapy is often begun immediately to stop new clots from forming and keep existing ones from growing. Surgery may be necessary to reopen arteries, allowing life-sustaining blood to flow again to the brain.

P.S. Although a stroke occurs suddenly, it is often caused by years of such factors as smoking, high blood pressure, and clogging arteries.

Today there have been many advances in the treatment of stroke through the early administration of drugs if the individual receives treatment right after the stroke happens. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. I am also board certified in cardiology and internal medicine. Call 472-2550; office hours by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Engineer To Outline Steps For Concourse

The Quincy Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the planned Quincy Center Concourse will meet Wednesday, Oct. 23 at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

John Daniels, an Earth Tech engineer assigned to the CAC as facilitator, will outline the various steps to be taken now that the CAC has given initial approval to the roadway linking Burgin Parkway with both the west and east sides of Hancock St.

After almost three years of meeting monthly, holding open public forums, and studying maps and reports of various private and government agencies, the CAC is now ready to address the more controversial aspects of property and land takings, concourse design, traffic control and safety.

The 10-member CAC, appointed in 1994 by Mayor James Sheets, was charged with studying all aspects of the proposed concourse and gathering public consensus regarding the multi-million dollar project.

American Medical Response of Massachusetts

MORE DEDICATION MORE CONCERN

We're helping people lead healthier and safer lives.

We're making a difference in the community with our educational programs, special events, and on-going activities. The response we've seen has been very uplifting. Sometimes it's the look of wonder from a child or the smile of appreciation from an elder citizen. Often it's communicated in letters and phone calls from city and school officials and parents telling us how important our training has been to their lives.

AMR's commitment to Quincy is working. We believe the only way a company can stay in touch with the needs of its community is to be a part of it.

Courtesy of American Medical Response of Massachusetts, the children, elders and families of Beechwood on the Bay community life center were treated to a Health Day featuring blood pressure clinics, CPR demonstrations, ambulance tours and safety tips.

A Breakthrough in Hearing Aid Technology.

If you've been waiting for the very latest hearing technology, we have important news for you.

Starkey's new Sequel Series hearing instruments offer performance advantages unlike any hearing aid we've offered before.

To achieve this preferred level of performance, an ideal hearing aid should not contribute undesirable perceptual elements – like distortion – that can result in poor sound reproduction, especially at high levels.

Thanks to Starkey's breakthrough SMArT Systems Technology, Sequel's sophisticated anti-distortion and efficient circuitry achieves an entirely new plateau in sound quality and performance.

Business Eligible For Trade Mission To Turkey

State Rep. Stephen Tobin announces that area businesses are invited to join a state organized trade mission to Turkey in December.

"With a market of more than 60 million people, Turkey presents substantial opportunities for Massachusetts companies," Tobin said. "Massachusetts exports to Turkey soared 60 percent in 1995 compared to 1994, and early indications are that growth will also be strong this year."

Tobin said the mission, which will take place from Dec. 1 to 8 is open to companies of all sizes. It is being organized by the Massachusetts Office of International Trade and Investment (MOITI).

Each company participating in the mission is provided with a background briefing book on Turkey, a pre-departure briefing on the Turkish business climate and a personalized schedule of appointments with prospective business partners during the trip. The delegation also is invited to receptions and luncheons hosted by political or business leaders.

"Every $50,000 in additional exports from Massachusetts creates or retains a job right here at home," said Tobin. "I encourage area companies with any potential interest in Turkey to check out this opportunity."

According to MOITI Trade Director Kathleen Molony, the Massachusetts sectors with the most promise in Turkey include telecommunications, infrastructure/construction, environmental technology, health care and financial services. Companies interested in more information about this trade mission should contact MOITI trade directors Kathleen Molony or Brent Krueger at 367-1830 by Oct. 11.

Tobin said over 300 Massachusetts companies have participated in 19 state trade missions organized by MOITI since 1991, leading to an estimated $500 million in increased export sales and in projected future export revenue.

'Jail And Bail' Raises $23,000 For MDA

Nearly 100 people, including local officials, community leaders and business men and women were "arrested" in Quincy for the benefit of the Greater Boston Muscular Dystrophy Association Chapter last week.

The "Jail and Bail" fundraiser raised $23,000 in cash and pledges for MDA, making it one of the most successful in the state.

The benefit was co-sponsored by ERA Central Real Estate and The Quincy Sun. The event was held at the Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center, the former site of Quincy-South Shore MDA Labor Day Telethon Pledge Center.

"MDA would like to thank the business community in Quincy for their tremendous support via the recent lock-up as well as throughout the year on various fundraising ventures," said Dave Spellman of the Greater Boston MDA Chapter.

"The lock-up is the largest lock-up to date in the Greater Boston market. Pledges will exceed $23,000 when all is said and done," Spellman said.

Spellman offered special thanks to Vin Moscardelli of ERA Central Real Estate and his staff, the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, Quincy Police, Dunkin Donuts, Cathay Pacific and Cellular One.

"Jailbirds" participating in the lock-up included: Tim Mason (Pap Gino's), Dave Dennis (Dennis & Associates), Joanne Wuoris (A.E.

Marie Curry Fund To Offer Mammography Screenings

Quincy Hospital's Marie A. Curry Fund will offer 50 mammography screenings for women without health insurance beginning Friday at the hospital's Radiology Department, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy.

The event, coordinated by the hospital in conjunction with Quincy Radiology Associates and Commonwealth Hematology/Oncology (CHO), is being held in honor of the fourth annual National Mammography Day observed this Friday.

The Quincy Hospital Radiology Department will extend its hours to accommodate the screenings, and CHO will sponsor a series of ongoing workshops on breast self-examination at the hospital.

The Curry Fund was established at the hospital last year in memory of Marie A. Curry by her husband, Robert Curry of Curry Hardware, and their two children, Sean and Julie. Mrs. Curry was a former patient of Quincy Hospital and CHO, and the endowment fund is used to provide access to mammography services for women in need.

Requests for screenings will be taken on a first come, first serve basis. Screenings will be done Friday and on four subsequent dates. Twenty-five mammograms will be provided for uninsured women are who patients of Quincy Hospital medical staff members and 25 for uninsured women in the community.

For an appointment, call 376-4018.

LAST YEAR...we composted over 2,500 tons of leaves, and saved over $200,000 of your tax dollars.

THIS YEAR...we hope to hit 4,000 tons, and save your valuable tax dollars.

1. RAKE YOUR LEAVES

2. BAG THEM

It is mandatory that you use the paper leaf composting bags sold at most stores.
They're easy to fill, recyclable and biodegradable.
Bag only leaves, twigs and grass clippings.
No trash. No large branches.

3. PUT THEM ON THE CURB WITH YOUR TRASH.

Just separate them from your trash and recyclables, so we know which bags are which!

FALL CAR CARE

Help Your Car Through The Cold Months Ahead

One theme common to many TV commercials is care trouble on a cold winter day.

The vehicle is disabled and its owner is stranded. The message, of course, is that such a crisis can be prevented through the use of the sponsor's product, be it a new battery or a cellular phone.

A seldom advertised aspect of preventive maintenance that deserves high marks for helping drivers avoid car trouble costs little or nothing. It's basic knowledge of the systems and components that should be checked and serviced to prevent failure and symptoms that signal pending failure.

Car Care Council says that, while some mechanical failures cannot be anticipated, most are preceded by some visible or audible indicator. One sample: the family that was stranded in snow when the battery went dead because the alternator light remained on due to a slipping drive belt. That predicament easily could have been avoided, first by the periodic inspection of driving belts and, later, by acting on the signal from the instrument panel.

Even if your vehicle is fairly new, use this winter check list. The Council reports four out of five vehicles that go through their inspection lanes need maintenance. And for additional tips on preparing one's vehicle for cold weather, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Dept. W, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, Ohio 43452.

Aluminum Heads More Vulnerable To Overheating

Does your car have aluminum cylinder heads? If you don't know, it would be wise to find out, says the Car Care Council.

Aluminum heads are more vulnerable to damage from overheating than the traditional cast iron type. Excessive heat can warp the temperature-sensitive heads, resulting in a major repair expense. And it can happen so fast you may not have been aware your car was in trouble.

The most common causes of overheating is loss of coolant due to a leak. Another culprit is a sticking thermostat, which prevents coolant from circulating through the engine.

To avoid the expense and inconvenience of trouble on the road, far from home, invest in an annual inspection of the cooling system, because overheating is a leading cause of mechanical breakdown.

The Council offers these additional tips on cooling system maintenance:

•Save gas with an efficient vehicle. Your car's engine, like your body, has an optimum operating temperature. Most engines run in the 210-240 degrees Fahrenheit range, controlled by the cooling system thermostat. But fuel economy drops 10 percent to 20 percent when engine operating temperature falls below 125 degrees.

The small investment to replace a faulty thermostat soon can pay for itself, not only in gas savings but also in terms of reduced engine wear.

•When one hose or drive belt needs replacing you're likely to find more in marginal condition. Rubber components under the hood live in a hostile environment, surviving temperatures ranging from sub-zero to more than 250 degrees. Hoses circulate as much as 7,500 gallons of coolant per hour at up to 18 pounds of pressure. They warrant periodic attention.

•The radiator pressure cap serves as the safety valve in the cooling system. The pressure test, available at most service dealers, not only will disclose existing or potential leaks in the system, but also can detect a faulty pressure cap.

For a free pamphlet on cooling system maintenance, send a business-sized, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Car Care Council, Department Cool, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, Ohio 43452.

ON FIRE

Car fires are not as uncommon as a person might think. In fact, the National Fire Protection Association reports that there are about 331,460 vehicle fires in this country each year. Most are caused by mechanical problems, leaks, and electrical problems, all of which can be prevented with regular maintenance. Thus, car owners can spare themselves the frightful prospect of a car fire by having their cars checked regularly, with particular attention paid to hoses, pipes, and caps. All should be secured, in good condition, and replaced if necessary. Gasoline and other car fluids account for 42% of all car fires. As for electrical causes of car fires, do-it-yourselfers run the greatest risk of creating short circuits and malfunctions that can lead to fires. Lastly, because the exhaust system can become very hot (a catalytic converter can reach 1,100 degrees Fahrenheit), a car should not be parked over combustible material (dry leaves).

HINT: Should you experience a car fire, pull off the road immediately. Car fires will damage the electrical system within seconds (horn, power windows, etc.), but steering and brakes should continue to function.

Tuned Engines Mean Cleaner Air, Says Lung Association

The American Lung Association is teaching motorists responsible behavior during the nationwide observance of National Car Care Month in October, driving home the message that properly maintained cars can decrease air pollution, improve lung health, increase gas mileage and save the car owner money.

"Motor vehicle exhaust is comprised of many dangerous pollutants that contribute to lung disease, including carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides," warns Alfred Munzer, M.D. president of the American Lung Association. These harmful auto exhaust emissions can cause headaches, chest pains and drowsiness. When they interact in the atmosphere, these emissions can also burden healthy lungs, make it difficult to breathe."

According to the Lung Association, motor vehicle emissions are responsible for nearly 40 percent of the air pollution in the United States. Many auto service centers have exhaust analyzers that make emissions testing quick, easy and inexpensive. Emissions testing should be a regular part of all auto repair checks," says Dr. Munzer.

A recent Gallup poll conducted for the American Lung Association found that 90 percent of Americans feel that air pollution is a serious health problem. The poll also found that 96 percent of Americans agree that it is the responsibility of car owners to maintain their vehicles to reduce air pollution. These are encouraging results, especially since air pollution caused by motor vehicle emissions can be reduced by simply keeping cars and trucks in better running condition.

Properly maintained vehicles pollute less, run better, last longer, and get better gas mileage. Regular auto tune-ups can improve fuel efficiency by up to 15 percent. Most cars built since 1975 have catalytic converters which, along with electronic ignition systems, can reduce harmful emissions by up to 90 percent. These emissions controls devices, if properly inspected and maintained, can boost a car's performance and fuel efficiency.

Using leaded gas in a car that requires unleaded gas reduces both spark plug and oil filter life. This practice can also damage both the exhaust system and the catalytic converter. Properly adjusted spark plugs and ignition can also help decrease harmful air pollution and boost fuel efficiency.

Two brochures, "Car Care and Clean Air" and "Get A Check-up for Your Car," are available from local American Lung Association offices by calling 1-800-LUNG USA, or by writing: American Lung Association, GPO Box 586, New York, N.Y. 10116-0596. The Lung Association's environmental health activities and other lung disease prevention and education programs are supported by the annual Christmas Seal campaign that was started in 1907 to fight tuberculosis.

Safety Tips From Nation's Top Truck Drivers

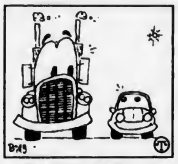
(NAPS)—Some of the nation's top truck drivers with more than 100 million accident-free miles among them are offering useful safety tips to help motorists and truckers share the road.

Staying clear of a truck's "blind spots" and keeping a safe distance between your automobile and a truck are just two of several safe driving tips suggested by a select group of truck drivers to make the nation's highways safer.

The safe driving advice comes from a survey of 45 recent inductees of America's Road Team of the American Trucking Association and 15 life members of the National Private Truck Council's Driver Hall of Fame.

The survey taken in conjunction with a Department of Transportation "Sharing The Road" public service program asked truck drivers what advice they had for motorists. These were the most frequently given suggestions:

- Avoid tailgating.
- Stay out of the blind spots to the sides and the rear of trucks. This is known as the "No-Zone."
- Do not exceed speed limits.
- Use turn signals.
- Maintain speed when passing a truck.
- Do not pull in front of a truck unless it is visible in your rear-view mirror.



Staying clear of a truck's blind spots and keeping a safe distance between your automobile and a truck are two safety tips worth remembering.

"It is important for motorists to realize how dangerous some unintentional driving behavior can be," Federal Highway Administrator Rodney E. Slater said. "This survey clearly identifies areas where all drivers can work together to avoid accidents."

An informative brochure about the No-Zone and sharing the road with trucks safely is available free by calling the No-Zone hotline at 800-644-1744.

Flynn & Co. Sells Two Hingham Properties

Jay Nuss, senior vice president of Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc. recently put together the sale of two church properties in Hingham.

The first property, the 6,000-square-foot former United Methodist Church located at 235 North St., was purchased by the Faith of the Nazarene Church.

The second piece of property, the Faith Nazarene Church located at 258 Rockland St., was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. David Gilbert. The Gilberts plan on converting the church to a residence. Nuss was the sole broker for both of these sales transactions.

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc., located in the Heritage Building at 1495 Hancock St., Quincy Center, is a commercial real estate, auction, and property management firm with offices also in Springfield and Hyannis. For more information, call 479-9000.

Fix Up Your Home Before Putting In On The Market

Q. My spouse and I are at odds about fixing up our house prior to putting it on the market. I think we should spend the money to repaint the exterior and to replace the floor coverings in the kitchen and baths. My husband says we should only make these improvements when we get feedback from the sales associates who show the house. What do you think?

A. Some homeowners do prefer to fix up their house later, if it doesn't sell right away. However, sprucing up your house prior to putting it on the market, instead of after the fact, is important because first impressions count. According to industry studies, the longer a house sits on the market, the less the seller will net on the sale.

Many ways to create the best impressions on potential buyers do not necessarily cost a lot of money, such as removing and storing excess furnishings, clothing, toys, and knick-knacks. Your goal is to make the house look comfortable, but above all, spacious, clean, and well-maintained.

For example, when prospective buyers open a closet door, they don't want to see how much can be stuffed into it. They want to see neat, uncluttered, storage. By packing up a lot of the "extras" in your house, you'll not only make it more saleable but also get a head start on packing to move.

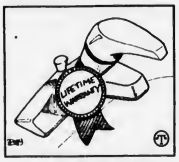
If you do need to consider investing in exterior paint or interior floor coverings, discuss these needs with your real estate professional. The current market competition will best determine whether to sell the home "as is" or to spend the money to increase its buyer appeal.

The key to selling your home for the best price, in the shortest amount of time and with the least amount of inconvenience, is usually to fix it up before you put it on the market.

'No Leak' Faucet Warranty

(NAPS)—Drying the tears of homeowners who hate leaky faucets is a new warranty that guarantees not only that the faucet is leak and drip free, but that all of the faucet's parts and finish are free from defects in material and manufacturing workmanship. The extensive new lifetime limited warranty is on all Moen faucets purchased after January 1, 1996.

Should a faucet ever leak, drip or require parts necessary to put the faucet back in good working condition, Moen will provide those parts free of charge as long as the faucet was properly installed and used under normal circumstances.



A turn for the better in faucet warranties is one that guarantees the faucet will stay leak and drip free and the parts and finish free from defects in material and manufactured workmanship.

The faucets are warranted to the original consumer purchaser for as long as that person owns the home in which the product is installed. In commercial, industrial and business applications where the products will see more rugged service, the warranty period is five years from the original date of purchase.

Full details of the warranty are provided in every Moen faucet package. Replacement parts, should they be required, may be obtained by calling a toll-free number or by writing to the company.

Moen, with headquarters in North Olmsted, Ohio, is one of the world's largest producers of residential and commercial plumbing products. For a free brochure on Moen faucets, including details of their new Lifetime Limited Warranty, call 1-800-553-6636.

North Quincy Outplays Barnstable But Fumbles It Away, 21-16

Raiders Ready For Tough Test Against Weymouth Friday

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Coming off its first loss of the season against Barnstable, North Quincy faces its stiffest test Friday night at 7 when it visits unbeaten Weymouth, which boasts one of the toughest defenses in the state.

In five games, the third-ranked Wildcats' defense has been impenetrable, giving up just 17 points in their five victories. In a 19-0 blanking of Taunton last Friday, Weymouth's defense did not allow Taunton to penetrate its 40-yard line.

"They probably have the best defense in the state," said North Quincy head coach Ken McPhee. "They're very, very aggressive, putting nine people on the line to make you throw the ball, then come after you when you do. They just fly to the football."

Meanwhile, North's first defensive unit has also kept opponents from piling up huge offensive numbers. Despite giving up an average of nearly 14 points a game, McPhee notes that almost half of NQ's opponents' points have been scored when the first unit was watching from the sidelines.

"Our defense has been very stingy," he said. "This week, they gave up eight points. Plymouth South didn't score against our first unit, Falmouth scored 14 and Stoughton only got seven points on us, so out first unit has only given up 29 points this season.

"Our schemes are good, the kids are playing with confidence, and we get people to the ball quick. Our defense can play tough."

Against the Wildcats, the Red Raiders' defense will look to contain powerful running back Steve Anzalone, who carried the ball 24 times for 164 yards and two touchdowns. Anzalone recently moved from fullback to tailback in place of injured senior Jeff Zella, who McPhee said would be out a few more weeks.

Offensively, McPhee said North's No. 1 offensive weapon, tailback Brian Walsh, should present numerous problems for the vaunted Weymouth defense.

"People say we have to contend with their defense, but they have to contend with Walsh," he said. "He's one of the best in the league and no one has stopped him yet. If he breaks one, he's off and running."

McPhee knows the Weymouth game is North's biggest test of the season to this point, and is confident his squad can emerge victorious--as long as it holds onto the ball.

"We'll be prepared and ready to play," he said. "This will be a big one. We have an opportunity to win this thing, but we have to play good defense. Ball control and field position will also be important. We have a strong kicking game, so we'll try to pin them deep and maybe get them to make a mistake. Whoever makes the least mistakes will win the game."

Entering Friday's game, Weymouth is 5-0 overall, 3-0 in the Old Colony League. North Quincy is 3-1, 2-1.

In last Friday night's 21-16 loss to Barnstable at Veterans Memorial Stadium, North Quincy fumbled twice in its own end zone, resulting in two touchdowns for the visitors.

"We outplayed them in every aspect of the game, but we made some bad mistakes in our end zone," said McPhee. "They mounted one drive the entire game, which was the extent of their offense. If we didn't turn the ball over, we had the game won."

The defeat tainted a tremendous performance by Walsh, who gained a career-high 267 yards on 19 carries, including touchdown runs of 83 and 70 yards. Through four games this season, Walsh has compiled a whopping 765 yards rushing (191.2 yards per game) and six touchdowns. Against Barnstable, Walsh also stood out defensively, collecting 12 tackles, including seven

Race Raises $4,400 For Charities

Men's, Women's Course Records Fall At Fowler '5'

By LIAM FITZGERALD

At Monday's ninth annual Fowler House "5" Road Race in Quincy, not only was $4,400 raised to benefit handicapped children, but both the women's and men's course records were broken in the same year for the first time in the race's history.

Race organizer Bill Rizzotti said the proceeds of the race will be evenly distributed between the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens and Parkview Homes in Framingham.

Quincy's Tracey Carrigan-Timmins finished the five-mile race in 29:47, eclipsing the women's course record of 30:42 set by Karen Djerf.

Breaking the record was special for Carrigan-Timmins, 30, who said she broke the record last year by about 20 seconds, but was not recognized for her achievement.

"It felt great to break it this year, especially since they didn't know I broke it before," she said. "Even though the wind was against us, I felt strong, because I know the hills. Going into it, I wanted to break the record.

"I want get faster every year. This was my fastest five-mile race. I ran my fastest 10K race last week, which gave me confidence to do it this week."

Rounding out the women's top three were Menica Smith, 32, of Norwood (second at 31:38) and Marilou Moore, 37, of South Weymouth (third at 32:33).

On the men's side, Tesfaye Bekele of Cambridge via Kenya finished in 24:23 to break the men's course record of 25:08 set by Bobby Bligh. This year, Bligh, 32, finished second in 26:12.

Bekele, 24, and fellow countryman Mohammed Nasser, 25, were the first Kenyan runners to compete in the Fowler Race, according to Rizzotti. Nasser crossed the finish line third in 26:54.

Both Carrigan-Timmins and Bekele received $50 certificates from the Fowler House for breaking the course records.

In the men's under 21 age group, Quincy's Bryan Gallahue, 19, finished second in 36:07.

Quincy's Joseph Lencki, 22, crossed the finish line second in the men's 21-29 age group in 32:27.

Mike Callaghan, 40, of Quincy, came in third in the men's 40-49 age group with a time of 29:14. Callaghan was also a member of the Braintree P.O. team which came in first at 2:23:43 to claim the Team Cup.

In the women's 40-49 age group, Quincy's B.Q. Quinn, 40, placed second in 39:09.

Chris Ahern of Abington, the only wheelchair participant, completed the race in 37:26.

Other Quincy finishers in the top 50 included Bill Azar (19th overall-30:36), Barry Piecewicz (23rd-31:06), John Timmins (28th-31:47), J.J. Lamer (32nd-32:41), Jim Maver (40th-34:06), Bill Timmins (46th-35:02), Dana Ahern (49th-35:31) and Bob Griffin (50th-35:33).

Rizzotti estimated about 250 runners and walkers participated in the event, including Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers. Also competing were about 50 runners from the L St. Club in South Boston, according to Mike Linnane, one of the race's timekeepers.

Race sponsors included South Shore Children's Fund, Reggie's Oil, Century 21-Personal Realty Network, Pat Flanagan's, Roxie's Market, T-Shirt Master, Bud Light, Stephen R. Abramowitz, D.D.S., and Robert J. Tierney Plumbing and Heating.

Helping set up the course and ensuring the safety of participants and spectators were the Auxiliary Police and the volunteers and bike unit of the Incident Command System Emergency Management Team.

Rizzotti was pleased how well this year's race went and is already looking forward to next year's 10th annual Fowler House "5" Road Race.

"People have told me this is the best organized race they've been involved in," he said. "Everything ran pretty smoothly, and it seems to get better every year."

North Quincy Girls' Showing Improvement

North Quincy's girls soccer team continues to improve with every game, though the Red Raiders suffered two one-goal losses last week.

North (3-9-2) dropped a 3-2 decision to Barnstable and a 1-0 heartbreaker to Silver Lake. In the process, the Raiders also lost freshman midfielder Ashley Murphy to a knee injury.

The Raiders hosted Taunton yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. and host Weymouth Friday at 4 p.m. Both games are at Teal Field.

In the loss to Barnstable, the victors got two goals by league scoring leader Vicki Shalian to tip the Raiders. Two bad goals as a result of defensive breakdowns cost North.

Trailing 3-0, North scored 50 seconds into the half as Betsy Stone took a pass from Kristen Bowes to score her third goal of the season. Bowes then connected with Murphy as the freshman notched her third goal of the year. Murphy was injured on the goal after colliding with the goalie. North nearly scored the equalizer as Katie Koch's 35-yard direct kick hit the crossbar. Playing well for North were Koch, Jill Picardi, Bowes and Laura Shea.

Playing a near perfect defensive game, North played its best game of the year, said head coach Paul Bregoli, but dropped a 1-0 contest at Silver Lake. The Lakers were unable to generate any offense as Dorothy Cronnin shut down Candy Reich, the Lakers' leading scorer. Backs Kristen Keohane, Rachael Powers and Koch also excelled defensively.

It was a 0-0 game when Sliver Lake connected on a header off a corner kick with 11 minutes left.

North got Hillary O'Donoghue back for this game after she missed two weeks with a hamstring injury. Goalie Lisa Bragg played well for North in goal.

"We only gave up four goals to two of the better teams in the league," said Bregoli. "The defense, led by Keohane and Powers, was tremendous. They played some unbelievable soccer. The whole team is playing great soccer."

The previous week, North dropped two games.

The Red Raiders continued to follow a pattern of falling behind early in both games before playing a strong second half.

North outplayed the visiting Plymouth South Panthers for most of the game before falling, 3-2. North's defense was solid in the first half as Rachael Powers, Katie Koch and Kristen Keohane turned back each Plymouth attack. However, a breakdown late in the half saw Jenn Consalvi uncovered at the far post for a 1-0 Panther lead at halftime.

Two bad goals at the start of the second half had the Raiders down 3-0 before the home team came to life. Sophomore Besty Stone netted her fifth goal of the season, buryin a penalty kick midway through the half. North pressed the attack with Ashley Murphy, Laura Shea and Kristen Bowes controlling play at midfield.

Laurie Flynn drew North to within a goal when her direct kick from 20 yards out found the top corner for her second goal of the season. North continuyed to press the attack but could not add the equalizer.

Traveling to Falmouth for a game under the lights, the Clippers jumped out to a 3-0 first half lead en route to a 4-1 victory.

With the game still scoreless, North's Murphy hit a long ball which the Falmouth keeper misplayed, but Caitlyn O'Donnell was unable to convert the rebound.

North's momentum was taken away on a controversial penalty call in the area, resulting in a penalty kick goal by Kathleen Lanphear. North then gave up two other scores quickly and trailed 3-0 at halftime.

The Raiders gave up one more goal early in the second half before igniting behind the inspired play of junior Laurie Flynn. Jill Picardi and Dorothy Cronin also played courageously in the middle as the Raiders bottled up Falmouth for the last 20 minutes.

Finally, with seven minutes left, Keohane connected with Picardi on a corner kick with Murphy taking the field and drilling a shot top corner for the 4-1 final score.

"Our last 20 minutes against Falmouth were outstanding," said NQ head coach Paul Bregoli. "It was as if someone threw a switch on. Flynn was awesome and played the best soccer in her two years. Laura Shea also played her best game of the year, playing her heart out."

solo tackles.

"Walsh had another monster day," said McPhee. "He's a fun kid to watch. He just has this ability to find holes, cracks and seams and makes people miss all over the place. Once he finds that hole, forget about it: he's off to the races."

In a scoreless game early in the second quarter, NQ quarterback Tom Coughlin dropped back to pass from his own six-yard line, but was sacked by linebacker Adam Burnett and fumbled. A teammate of Burnett's recovered the ball in the end zone and Mickey Huse nailed the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

After a 10-play, 69-yard drive by North came up empty, the hosts drove into Barnstable territory and got on the board on a 32-yard field goal by Jim Finn as the half drew to a close.

"Jimmy Finn played a nice two-way game and also punted very well," said McPhee. "A couple of times, he kicked it near their goal line to pin them in deep."

The majority of the game's scoring occurred in the third quarter, when the teams combined to score 27 points. Barnstable (1-4, 1-1) took the opening series down to North's 31 before a Finn interception set up Walsh's first TD scamper.

Two plays after the pick, Walsh appeared to be stopped for a loss, but emerged from the pack and took off 83 yards to give NQ a temporary 9-7 lead.

Following a Barnstable fumble, Coughlin and Walsh did not hook up on a handoff from their own seven, and Steve Rose pounced on the fumble for a Barnstable score. Quarterback Mike Griffin tossed to Ryan Johnson for the two-point conversion and a short-lived 15-9 lead.

On North's first play after that score, Walsh started left, cut to the inside and bolted for a 70-yard touchdown. Finn's extra point gave NQ a 16-15 lead with 4:20 left in the third.

The score changed hands for the final time when Barnstable's Kojo Ries crossed the goal line on a 26-yard run up the middle. After the two-point conversion pass failed, Barnstable clung to a 21-16 lead heading into the final quarter.

North had its chances to retake the lead and possibly win the game, but an interception by Ries and a turnover on downs with 51 seconds left sealed the victory for Barnstable.

Manets Win Battle Of The Unbeatens

In the much anticipated showdown between the top two teams in the Quincy Youth Football League, the Houghs Neck Manets remained unbeaten with a 14-6 defeat of the West Quincy Elks last weekend.

The Manets (4-0) were led by running backs Jason Analowski and Dan Dorsey and quarterback Jordan Virtue, who connected on a long passes to Peter Turowski and Jon Santos. Also playing well were Dustin Schepici, Greg Walsh, Dan Galligan and Jim Cashin who intercepted an Elks pass.

Defensively, the Manets played a solid game and remained unscored upon as the Elks (3-1) scored their only points on a punt return.

In other action, the Quincy Point Panthers evened their record at 2-2 with a 6-0 victory over the North Quincy Apaches.

The Panthers were led by the strong two-way play of Mark Robertson, Mike Lorenzano and David Imrie.

Combining a solid passing game and running attack, the Panthers tok a 6-0 lead into intermission. Jonathan Page and Joe Thorley turned in fine first-half performances for the winners.

The Panthers defense held off the Apaches (2-2) in the second half, paced by Georgie Bush, Michael Dunlea, Billy Doran, Mike Doucette and John Lupo.

In the third game, the Milton Mustangs battled the Squantum Storm to a 14-14 tie. Both teams are 0-3-1.

Sunday's schedule at Veterans Memorial Stadium has the Apaches battling the Manets at 1 p.m., the Panthers taking on the Storm at 2:30 p.m and the Mustangs going up against the Elks at 4 p.m.

Presidents Rebound With 12-7 Win Over Plymouth South

THE PRESIDENTS' SECONDARY snuffed out two Plymouth South drives in the third quarter with interceptions by Bryan Dunn and Shaun Faherty. After a couple of two-point losses earlier in the season when the breaks went against them, the Quincy Presidents finally got a break to go their way.

Late in Saturday's Old Colony League game at Plymouth South, linebacker Mike Russo recovered a Panther fumble deep in Quincy territory to preserve a 12-7 victory.

"We needed something to get us going in the right direction, and this did it," said Quincy head coach Peter Chella. "I was very gratified to see the kids cheering on the sidelines; it really brought us together as a team."

The Presidents are off this week and will use the time off to heal and begin preparations for league powerhouse Weymouth, which visits Quincy next Friday, Oct. 25 at 7 p.m.

Chella expects to have wide receiver-linebacker Bob Walsh, center-nose guard Jay Little, offensive tackle Paul Daley, half back Tim Lewis, among others, back from various ailments for the Weymouth game.

"We're missing three starters on both sides of the ball, so this break is perfect for us," said Chella. "It gives us time to heal and get ready for the rest of the season."

Against Plymouth South (1-4 overall, 1-3 OCL), Quincy (2-3, 1-2) scored the game's first points with 46 seconds left in the first half when quarterback Mark Glynn ran untouched down the right sideline for a 25-yard score. Catches of 15 and 23 yards by Belanger and a six-yard run by Tim Santos preceded Glynn's scoring run.

Interceptions by Bryan Dunn and Shaun Faherty kept Quincy ahead, 6-0, until late in the third quarter. On a Quincy punt from its own 20, the Panthers' Shawn Williams blocked the kick and teammate Jay Macomber recovered it at the Presidents' 15.

On the third play of the drive, quarterback Steve Moyer (4-12 passing, 30 yards) ran right for three yards before tossing back to Justin Close (eight carries, 53 yards), who scored on the option play with 2:39 left in the third. Dave Buchanan's extra point pushed the Panthers (1-4, 1-3), ahead, 7-6.

Quincy took a 12-7 lead in the fourth quarter as Kevin Connolly (102 yards rushing) collected 32 yards on four carries, including a 16-yard touchdown, his fifth this season.

"Kevin is a good, solid back who is good for 100 yards and a touchdown or two a game, which is very good," said Chella. "He has just under 500 yards for the season, so he's just about on target."

On the drive, Glynn (5 of 14 passing, 81 yards) moved the ball downfield through the air, connecting with John Katsarikas for 23 yards, with Santos for a nine-yard catch and with Jon Ryan for 12 more yards.

"When it counted, he (Glynn) came through big time," said Chella. "J.R. (Ryan) also played well on both sides of the ball. John (Katsarikas) played real well, and that catch for over 20 yards really helped keep that drive going."

The drive knocked 7:03 off the clock and left the Presidents seemingly in control of the game.

On the ensuing kickoff, however, Quincy opted for an onsides kick, which PS covered at its 35. On the play, Quincy was flagged for a 15-yard personal foul, moving the ball to the 50. Moyer then bolted 27 yards with 2:34 left, but the comeback ended on the next play, when Russo recovered the fumble and put the game away for the visitors.

Chella was pleased with the overall performance by the defense, citing the play of Chuck Feeley, who had a major role in controlling the Plymouth South running attack.

"Chuck Feeley played his best game for us," said Chella. "He made six unassisted tackles, and probably had about the same number of assists."

Soccer

North Quincy Boys Down Quincy, 5-1

The North Quincy boys soccer team played its best match of the season, defeating Quincy, 5-1, in Veterans Stadium.

The win was NQ's first of the season and improved their record to 1-7-1 overall, 1-6-1 in the Old Colony League.

Senior co-captain Neil Costa headed in a good throw-in by senior midfielder Mike Johnston to open the scoring for North. Chris Erler scored North's next two goals. The first came on a well-placed through-pass from Costa, and the second on a direct kick to the upper left corner of the goal. NQ's fourth tally of the half was scored by Bill Walker off an acrobatic "flip" throw-in by junior Joe Miller.

Quincy's scored its only goal when co-captain Jason Lumaghini sent the ball into senior co-captain Jared Downey, who scored on the near side, beating NQ goalkeeper Matt Norton. The final tally came on a shot by senior co-captain Bill Barron, who converted a short centering pass from Walker.

Norton had a strong game in net for North, as did defenders Colin Shea, Steve Wilson, Mike Mastrocola and Rick Loughmiller, limiting Quincy to just six shots.

OBITUARIES

Phillip A. Allicon, 79

Brigadier General; Decorated Veteran

A funeral service was held in Vermont for Brig. Gen. Phillip A. Allicon, 79, of Essex Junction, Vt., formerly of Quincy.

A graveside service was held Oct. 11 in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Gen. Allicon died Sept. 15 in a Burlington, Vt., health care facility.

A decorated World War II veteran, he entered military service as a private with the Yankee Division, Massachusetts National Guard, in 1940. He remained on active duty until 18961, when he retired.

During World War II, he participated in the initial assault waves on Leyte in the Philippines and in the invasion of Okinawa.

Adjutant for the Vermont National Guard while it was on active duty in Germany, he returned to Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., in 1956 as adviser to the Army Reserve.

An infantry officer most of his career, he was wounded twice. Among his decorations are the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Silver Star, two Bronze Stars with Valor Device, the Purple Heart with cluster and several campaign and service ribbons.

He also saw duty in Korea and at several posts in the U.S.

In January 1962, he became an employee of the State of Vermont and became deputy adjutant general in 1967.

A Quincy native, he attended Quincy schools, graduating from Quincy High in 1935. He also attended Thayer Academy in Braintree and Northeastern University in Boston.

He moved to Essex Junction in 1956.

A member of the Green Mountain Chapter of the Retired Officers Association, he was also a life member of the Disabled American Veterans.

He was a member of the Elks.

Husband of the late Glennys K. (Preston) Allicon, he is survived by a daughter, Elisabeth Clement of Manchester, N.H.; a granddaughter; and his friend and companion, Esther N. Irick of Essex Junction.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

Donations may be made to the Elks Silver Tower Fund, 925 North Ave., Burlington, VT 05401.

Paul A. Coletti, 98

Architect; Company President; Designed Crane Library Addition

A funeral Mass for Paul A. Coletti, 98, of Quincy, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church.

Mr. Coletti died Monday.

An architect and president of Coletti Brothers Inc. of Hingham, he began the architectural company in Boston in 1932. In 1933, his late brother, Carroll Coletti, joined the firm, which moved to Hingham in 1969.

The firm had a national reputation for excellence, gained from several award-winning building designs. Among them were the 1938 addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center, Norfolk County Superior and Probate Courthouse, Herter Hall at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst and Boston University School of Nursing.

He was a lecturer on architecture with the Massachusetts University extension program and architect-in-chief for all Casco Bay contracts during World War II for the Navy public works in Portland, Maine.

Born in San Donato, Italy, he came to the United States at age 3. He attended Quincy schools and was a graduate of Northeastern Preparatory School, the Boston Architectural Center and Harvard School of Architecture.

Mr. Coletti was a member of the Boston Society of Architects, the American Institute of Architects, the Harvard Club of Boston and the Harvard Club of Quincy of which he was a charter member.

In 1962, he was appointed by Gov. John Volpe to become a member of the

PAUL COLETTI

Massachusetts Commission to study historical and cultural assets of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He was chairman of the Quincy Historical Commission and also on the board of New England Regional Council of American Institute of Architects, the Massachusetts Board of Registration of Architects and Massachusetts Association of Architects.

He is survived by his wife, Mary (Barry) Coletti; two sons, David Coletti of Quincy and Barry Coletti of Duxbury; a daughter, Silvia Morgan of Coral Gables, Fla.; 11 grandchildren, and a great-granddaughter.

Burial will be in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Visiting hours were scheduled for yesterday (Wednesday) from 4 to 8 p.m. in the Lydon Funeral Home, 644 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Donations may be made to Quincy Visiting Nurse Association, 10 Granite St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Barbara Fluhr-Chapman, 60

Longtime Elementary School Teacher

A memorial service for Barbara (Nicholls) Fluhr-Chapman, 60, of Quincy, was held Oct. 12 at the First Church of Weymouth.

Mrs. Chapman died Oct. 10 at home of cancer.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

From childhood on, every human being likes to be praised for effort and accomplishment. It is a human characteristic that creates confidence and tends to improve personalities. When a job is well done, recognition is appreciated. In the business world, financial benefits, better privileges and promotions speak well understood language of praise.

Unfortunately, however, in personal relationships, praise can and does spill over into compromise at times. It occurs when one praises with the expectation to be praised in turn. Such a compromise violates the principle of giving credit where and when credit is due.

An anonymous writer expresses the thought beautifully in these words: "It isn't enough to say in our hearts - that we like a man for his ways . . . It isn't enough that we fill our minds - with reams of silent praise . . . Nor is it enough that we honor a man - as our confidence upward mounts . . . It's going right up to the man himself and telling him so that counts."

Ads On Death Benefits Misleading

By CAROL BOYLE

Life insurance ads that criticize Social Security survivors benefits as inadequate are misleading.

To the extent that these ads indicate that people who pay Social Security taxes get little protection for their survivors, they are really way off.

In seeking to sell life insurance, the ads cite Social Security's lump sum payment of $255 paid to the widow or children of the deceased worker. One TV ad notes "that's not even enough to bury you."

Social Security does not provide burial insurance. It provides a monthly benefit to your survivors that replaces a substantial proportion of your monthly earnings.

The value of Social Security survivors benefits for an average wage earner who leaves a spouse and two children is equivalent to a $295,000 life insurance policy. The average monthly payment for a family consisting of a widow(er) with two children is about $1,350 per month. And Social Security payments increase based on the annual cost-of-living index—something few private insurance plans offer.

Because most people don't like to think of death, they don't always have a plan to cover their family in case of their death. When you're working and paying Social Security tax, it can be comforting to know that you can count on Social Security survivors benefits for your family.

Memorial Congregational To Participate In Children's Sabbaths Event

Memorial Congregational Church of Atlantic, 136 Sagamore St., North Quincy, will join thousands of congregations in celebrating the fifth annual National Observance of Children's Sabbaths Friday through Sunday, Oct. 18-20.

The event is sponsored by the Children's Defense Fund (CDF) in cooperation with more than 175 demoninations and religious organizations.

The church plans to celebrate the Children's Sabbath by having a special service Sunday at 9:30 a.m. led by children. A guest speaker from the Mary Martha Learning Center in Hingham will talk about programs for children and a special ingathering of food for the center will take place.

Other special activities will take place Friday and Saturday.

The event seeks to lift up the needs of children so people of faith might respond. This year's observance is entitled "Stand For Children: Pray, Speak Out, and Act," and it focuses on the civic responsibility of the religious community.

For more information, contact Theresa Hooper, 136 Sagamore St., North Quincy, MA 02171 or call 773-9558.

VNA Conducting Flu Shot Clinics

Quincy Visiting Nurse Association, Inc. is conducting Flu Shot Clinics at several local CVS Pharmacies and Stop & Shop during the months of October and November.

Annual flu vaccinations are recommended by the doctors of the American Thoracic Society for persons over the age of 65, people who come into contact with the public, and people who are at higher risk for getting the flu. Vaccinations are not recommended for people who are allergic to eggs, other components of the vaccine, are pregnant, or currently have a fever. It is estimated that the flu affects one out of every five people in the United States each year.

Quincy VNA is conducting the flu shot clinics as a member of the Visiting Nurse Associations of New England (VNANE), a network of 82 non-profit Visiting Nurse Associations throughout Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. It is expected that clinics conducted by the VNAs will deliver flu vaccinations to over 21,000 consumers this year.

There is a $10 charge for the vaccination. Persons covered by Medicare B should bring proof of eligibility to the clinic. Medicare will be billed directly. For more information on clinic locations, call 1-800-FLU-4428.

BUSINESS

John McKay Elected To Business Bureau Board

Quincy native John E. McKay, chairman and CEO of McKay Fried & Partners, Inc., a Boston-based advertising and public relations firm, has been elected to the Board of Directors of the Better Business Bureau Inc., of Eastern Massachusetts, Maine and Vermont.

Elections took place at the annual meeting held recently at The 57 Park Plaza Hotel, Boston.

JOHN McKAY

McKay said, "I am honored to have been elected to serve on the board of the Better Business Bureau. As an advertising and public relations firm, we are keenly aware of consumer perceptions in today's market and I am eager to assist this organization in its pursuit to sustain high standards of truth and accuracy in advertising. I look forward to working closely with the organization in the coming year and being an active contributor to the board."

McKay Fried & Partners Inc., an 18-month-old advertising and public relations agency, was located in Quincy prior to its growth and subsequent move to Lincoln St. in Boston nine months ago. McKay Fried is looking forward to its future in the city and its affiliation with the Better Business Bureau.

As a director, McKay will be responsible for attending and contributing at monthly board meetings, and in addition, serving on marketing related committees.

The dual mission of the Better Business Bureau is to be an effective self-regulatory force for business and to demonstrate an active concern for the consumer. Some services offered to consumers include national advertising standards, administration of the Bureau's arbitration program, dissemination of information regarding charitable solicitations and consumer education and public information services.

Jerry Shapiro, chairman of the board for the Better Business Bureau, said, "We are very excited at the prospect of having a young, aggressive agency, like McKay Fried as a part of our team as the Better Business Bureau approaches the challenges of the millennium."

McKay Fried & Partners Inc. is actively pursuing new business to bolster its $10 million in agency capitalized billings with accounts such as Bank of Braintree, Bayside Exposition Center, Campanelli Companies, The Cooperative Bank, The Corcoran Jennison Companies, First Trade Union Bank, Good Brothers Ford and Dodge, Lantana, and Syratech.

LEGAL NOTICE

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 96PE0106-PP1

To Harriet Goldman of Quincy, Vincent A. DiRusso of Quincy and the City of Quincy all within the County of Norfolk and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Joan Wechsler of 148 Puritan Drive, Quincy, in the County of Norfolk representing that she holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County and briefly described as follows: A certain parcel of land, in Quincy, Norfolk County, Massachusetts said to contain 1.33 acres of land, more or less, as outlined on a Map made by E.W. Branch in 1907, as published by the said Branch in a Map showing the area of the property in Quincy which may more particularly be described as follows:

Beginning at the Northeast corner of the land, now or formerly of one McGrath, on Douglas Street (the portion of which is now known as Springfield Street) in West Quincy, and running Westerly 190 feet on the land, now or formerly of said McGrath, then Northerly by the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, to the Quincy Quarries Company Railroad, thence from that point northwesterly on the land, nor or formerly J.S. Swingle, then Northeasterly on the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, then Southeasterly on the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, to the Quincy Quarries Railroad, then Easterly to Douglas Street, then via Douglas Street (the portion of which is now known as Springfield Street) to the point of beginning, the same lot being Lot No. 5 on a map of October 1904, as made by H.T. Whitman, C.E., together with the building or buildings thereon, with an exclusive right to all the privileges connected with the well that attaches to the land sold at the present time setting forth that she desire that all of said land my be sold at private sale for not less than $350,000 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham, 649 High St., P.O. Box 269, Dedham, MA 02027-0269 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the thirtieth day of October 1996, the return day of this citation.

Witness, DAVID H. KOPELMAN, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this sixteenth day of September, 1996.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known to Fail)

Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x) Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x) Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted.

Decision On Stop & Shop License Expected This Week

for another liquor establishment in the area.

Lawyers for Stop & Shop and other proponents, however, have cited the convenience of "one-stop shopping," particularly for women who are sometimes intimidated by package stores.

Louis Cassis, the lawyer representing the residents, also has argued that the License Board's decision is invalid because state liquor law requires all members of such a board to be from the community it represents. While City Clerk Joseph Shea and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman are Quincy residents, the other three board members--Police Chief Francis Mullen, Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue and Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey--are not.

However, Thomas Kiley, a Quincy lawyer who represented the supermarket, said a residency challenge must be made by the state attorney general, not by parties in an appeal.

Shea said state liquor law states that local officials shall appoint License Board members who live in the community, but the Quincy Licensed Board was created by a special act of the Legislature in 1920, long before the liquor laws were written. The matter must be decided by the attorney general, he said.

Among those testifying against the license at last week's hearing were School Committee members JoAnn Bragg and Linda Stice and Bill Spinks, head of Bay State Community Services. In addition, Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott said 1,200 Montclair residents oppose the license.

Laracy, meanwhile, praised the store's security plans but said patrolling for underage drinkers in its large parking lot would be a challenge.

The Rains Came . . . And Came!!

BIGELOW STREET AREA looks like a river during the height of the storm that poured and poured 8 1/4 inches of rain on the city. This view is looking from Washington St.

(Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

Over 400 Homes Affected

City Aiding Flood Victims

The city is continuing its efforts to aid victims of flooding resulting from Sunday's nor'easter that poured a record 8 1/4 inches of rain in Quincy.

Mayor James Sheets said at press time informational packets were hand-delivered Monday night in all areas most affected by the storm. The packets contain data on how residents can respond to a number of storm-related problems.

Sheets also noted the Department of Public Works will continue to work to help the owners of more than 400 Quincy homes who have experienced flooding problems. Homes throughout most of the city were impacted by the weather, with Wards 2 and 4 being the most severely affected of the city's six wards, he said.

"The city is there to assist, to provide information, to pump basements, and to do whatever it can to help," said Sheets.

A 24-hour hotline has been set up for those in need of assistance. The numbers to call are 376-1910 or 376-1923.

Sheets said anyone needing further information can call his office at 376-1990.

Meteorologist Rob Gilman of Quincy said the storm produced a record 8 1/4 inches of rain in the city between Sunday at midnight and Monday at 3 p.m.

"It's unprecedented," he said.

Assistance Hotline
376-1910 or 376-1923

The storm left city workers and volunteers scrambling to help those who experienced flooding problems. A local state of emergency was declared during the nor'easter in Quincy, and Gov. William Weld declared a state of emergency in several counties, including Norfolk County.

George Clark, the city's sewer-water-drain superintendent, said at press time he had 20 two-person crews consisting of DPW, Park Department and other employees working around the clock. He said he hoped to have all affected homes pumped out by Wednesday morning.

Clark agreed with the mayor that Wards 2 and 4 suffered the most, singling out a number of severely affected streets including Bigelow Street, Miller Stile Road, Alrick Road and others.

"This is the worst rainstorm I've ever seen, and I've worked for the city 36 years," said Clark. "If it had been snow, we would have had more snow than the Blizzard of '78."

Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano said about 50 Emergency Management personnel and volunteers worked throughout the storm to do whatever they could to help.

Siciliano said a number of flooded streets were temporarily blocked off for public safety reasons. In addition, he noted, between 25 and 30 people utilized an emergency shelter at the Quincy Center for Technical Education because their homes were so severely affected.

Siciliano praised employees and volunteers from all departments and agencies involved in the effort, including Emergency Management, the DPW, and the Park, Traffic, Fire and Police Departments.

Asked for his impressions of the storm, Siciliano answered with a response that echoed Clark's.

"I've been in the city 32 years, and this is the worst rainstorm I have ever seen," he said.

Sheets said a number of outside crews also were hired to assist in the endeavor. Although the exact cost of the storm will not be known for some time, the mayor

City Council Votes $357,500

Police Dept. To Get 13 New Cruisers

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Police Department will soon increase the strength of its cruiser fleet with the addition of 13 new cars that will replace older cruisers.

The City Council appropriated $357,500 from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account Monday night for the purchase of the vehicles.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said he is pleased the council recognized the department's needs.

"I'm happy we got the appropriation," said Mullen, who added that he hopes to have the cars on the streets within the next month. The chief also noted the department generally utilizes about 30 marked cars, as well as a number of other vehicles, in its fleet.

Mayor James Sheets also said he is glad the cruisers will be added.

"It's important we keep the fleet updated," he said. "If we don't, our officers won't be able to perform their duties as well as they should. The cruisers are gravely needed.

"You've got to have good cars, they've got to be in good shape, and you've got to maintain them."

Mullen agreed, saying the vehicles are an essential crime-fighting tool.

"They're really like the police officer's office," he said. "They have the radios and other things that help him do his job."

Mullen said the cruisers are used in a "peck system" where the older, worn-out cars are replaced by the newer vehicles.

"Whatever's good, we keep, and whatever's not, we don't," he said.

The chief said the older vehicles generally are auctioned off by the city. Sheets said a few are used by auxiliary police.

Mullen, noting that the cars often are used 24 hours a day in all types of weather, said they probably should be replaced on an annual basis. Sheets said he would like to do so, but he knows of no other community in Massachusetts that could afford such an expense.

Both men said the cruisers were requested nearly a year ago, but the money was not available since $2 million in free cash had to be used for last winter's snow and ice removal expenditures.

Seaside Group Seeks Compromise On Dance

The non-profit organization that has held a monthly dance for students in Grades 4-8 since March is hoping to reach a compromise with a group seeking to limit the event to students in Grades 6-8.

Concerns have been raised by a local school principal, parish priest and some parents about the age gap between the youngest and oldest students in attendance, students constantly asking their parents to buy them new clothes for the dance, and some of the children teasing their peers about not having dates for the event.

Peter Seppala, president of the Seaside Advocacy Group in Germantown, organizers of the dance at St. Boniface Church, said he hopes the monthly event can instead be held for students in Grades 4-6. He said the overwhelming majority of those who attend are from the lower grades.

Seppala said he plans to meet with those who have voiced concerns about the dance following a scheduled Halloween Dance this Friday.

Richard O'Brien, principal of the Snug Harbor School who initially voiced the concerns, had little comment but said he will be happy to meet with Seppala following Friday's dance. O'Brien did say he would prefer the dance to be held for students in Grades 6-8.

Proposed Piercing Law To Undergo Review

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A proposed ordinance that would regulate the practice of body piercing in Quincy has been sent to the city solicitor's office for further review.

The City Council Ordinance Committee discussed the law, which was drafted by Quincy Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue at the request of Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, Monday night. Gallahue said she has made several revisions since first introducing the ordinance in June.

Ayers was prompted to request the new ordinance following the opening of the Body Xtremes piercing shop in North Quincy earlier this year. He has said neighbors have expressed health concerns regarding the process of body piercing.

Although Monday night's meeting was not a public hearing, 10 audience members were allowed to speak, primarily because a scheduled hearing had to be postponed at the last minute because the council inadvertently failed to formally advertise it as required by state law. A new hearing is to be scheduled in the near future.

Most of those who spoke were local residents. Brian McNamee of 90 Billings Rd. voiced strong opposition to the piercing shop, which is not far from his home.

"We don't want it in our neighborhoods," he said.

Another resident, Kathleen Roland, a registered nurse, said the piercing industry should be regulated as strictly as possible.

"I think it's important we protect our children," she said.

Piercing supporter Steve Hunter of 293 Fayette St., however, said he favors proper regulation of the industry but noted that it is allowed by law as a form of freedom of expression.

Others who spoke in favor of regulating the industry included Susan Colby of the Parker Elementary School Advisory Council and Juliette Houlne of the Rites of Passage piercing shop in Allston. Houlne said anyone who thinks the city's planned regulations are too strict should not be allowed to pierce.

Mik Miller, owner of Body Xtremes, earlier had left the building when it was announced a formal public hearing would not be held, but has said the proposed ordinance goes too far.

The proposed ordinance would require parental consent in person for anyone younger than 18 to be pierced, and also would make all piercers take anatomy and physiology courses. The law would be the first of its kind in Massachusetts and one of only a handful in the nation.

Gallahue has said she based the law on a similar ordinance in Oklahoma, one of the few states that has regulated body piercing.

The council will take up the matter following further review by City Solicitor Stephen McGrath.

Tickets, which include a catered buffet, are $25. For more information, call 479-7443.

After The Flood: Red Cross Safety Tips

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts is urging people to stay away from their home if it is located in a flooded area, until local authorities say it is safe to return.

Emergency response and cleanup efforts may be impeded. If you have been told that it is safe to return to your home, the Red Cross would like you to heed the following safety tips.

• Have someone with you as you check your home and do repairs.

• Check your home before you go in. Walk carefully around the outside of your house and check for loose power lines and gas leaks. If you find downed power lines or gas leaks, call your local utility company. Check the foundation for cracks or other damage. If you see obvious damage, ask your community's building inspector or a contractor to check the house before you go in.

• Turn off the electricity at the main fuse or circuit breaker box, even if power is off in your area. That way, you can control when power is restored to your home and avoid potential electrical shock and fire.

• Check the ceiling for signs of sagging, or any other structural damage, that may present a danger as you clean up.

• Avoid the urge to use portable space heaters. This can actually cause more damage, or possibly start a fire.

• Use flashlights. Do not use candles, gas lanterns or any other open flame.

• Protect your home from further damage. You will be tempted to start cleaning up inside right away. First, however, try to prevent further damage from rain and wind by covering damaged sections of the roof and broken windows. Check for broken or leaking water pipes. If you find any, cut off the water supply by turning off the valve at your water meter.

• Drain your basement carefully. If your basement is flooded, don't be in too big a hurry to pump it out. Water in the ground outside your house is pushing hard against the outside of your basement walls. But the water inside your basement is pushing right back. If you drain your basement too quickly, the pressure outside the walls will be greater than the pressure inside the walls--and that may make the walls crack and collapse, causing serious damage.

This 60-page booklet contains information on how to repair and restore your home, and its contents, that have been damaged by flood waters.

Residents Express Anger, Frustration Over Town Brook Project Pace

About 40 residents voiced anger and frustration Monday night at a City Council meeting on the Town Brook flood relief project.

The meeting, called by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, was designed to have representatives of the Army Corps of Engineers and Metropolitan District Commission give the council an update on the project. Raymondi called the meeting "timely" following Sunday's record storm that poured 8 1/4 inches of rain on the city.

Councillors decided to let members of the public speak because more than 400 homes experienced flooding as a result of the storm. Residents and councillors alike fired questions at the MDC's Paul DiPietro and the Army Corps' Joseph Bocchino and asked them to explain when the long-planned Town Brook tunnel and related culvert projects on Bigelow Street and Brook Road will be completed.

However, although Gov. William Weld has issued an order that the work be fast-tracked, the two men could not give a definitive answer on how much longer the work will take, something that frustrated both residents and councillors.

The most emotional statement came from Theresa Kelly of Miller Stile Road, one of the most severely affected areas Sunday. Kelly, who along with her 3-year-old daughter was flooded out by an earlier storm Sept. 18, almost broke down in tears when she said she has been temporarily living with her brother ever since.

"I lost everything," said Kelly. "I have nothing."

Councillors, particularly Raymondi, expressed anger that residents have experienced such devastation.

"What happened Sunday should not have happened," said Raymondi.

The officials in attendance, however, said the culverts may not be finished before 1998 or 1999, despite Weld's order to the MDC to move "immediately" ahead with planning and construction of the two culvert projects. The governor also has told the state highway department to finish planning a Furnace Brook drainage project as soon as possible.

Bocchino said the agencies have to follow state regulations by getting environmental permits and construction contracts, and DiPietro said both agencies had to fit the projects, which will each cost about $4 million, into a limited amount of federal and state funding.

The three projects, designed to handle storm water in their neighborhoods, are part of a detailed flood-relief system that includes eight separate locations and ties into a 4,000-foot underground tunnel built by the Army Corps.

The tunnel will carry water from Town Brook, under Quincy Center and out to Town River Bay. Originally planned in the 1970s, it was begun in 1994 and currently is 10 months behind schedule, and DiPietro noted that repairs to the Quincy Reservoir dam in Braintree must be completed in order for the Town Brook project to efficiently work.

Bocchino said the tunnel has been inspected and should be cleared for operation in January. He also told Raymondi, however, the tunnel was opened Monday at 3 a.m.--to reduce flooding near Bigelow Street and in other neighborhoods--and that it would be put to emergency use again if another serious storm threatens.

State Sen. Michael Morrissey, who attended Monday night's meeting, said Weld probably will release the $4 million for the project on his own, but the Legislature might have to ask for a specific appropriation next year in the 1997-98 state budget if that does not happen.

Presidential Wreath Ceremony To Honor John Adams Oct. 30

A wreath from the White House will be placed on the tomb of President John Adams in a ceremony at United First Parish Church (Unitarian Universalist), 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center, on Wednesday, Oct. 30 at 12:15 p.m.

The wreath-laying ceremony at the "Church of Presidents" will mark the 261st birthday of the second President of the United States who was born Oct. 30, 1735.

Capt. Craig H. Fausner, USNR, C.O., Naval Reserve Center South Weymouth, will present the wreath on behalf of President Clinton. A Color Guard from the South Weymouth Naval Air Station will present colors.

City Council President Peter Kolson, Adams Temple and School administrator and Councillor Paul Harold, and Bill Westland, a member of the Board of Governors of the church, will give remarks. Also, Caroline Keinath of the Adams National Historic Site, and Hank Dever, a volunteer tour guide for the church, will speak.

A tour of the church and crypt will be offered following the ceremony. The public is invited and admission is free.

THE SEASON FOR SICK BUILDING SYNDROME

At this time of year, when more of us spend more time playing and working indoors, a problem known as Sick Building Syndrome (SBS) often surfaces. SBS was first recognized in the late 1970s, when employees working, in tightly sealed office buildings began complaining of such symptoms as difficulty breathing, eye irritation and dryness, headaches, itching, fatigue and inability to concentrate. As work environments became more controlled, such complaints became more numerous. First dismissed as strictly psychological problems of unhappy office workers, the sometimes-crippling set of symptoms was finally found by researchers to have its cause in a building's air contaminants. Anyone experiencing the symptoms of SBS should seek help for the physical problems and explore possibilities for improving the air quality that may be causing them.

P.S. If health problems appear shortly after starting your work week and disappear again over the weekend, you may suspect SBS as the cause.

If you are wondering if this might apply to you, check out the symptoms of your fellow workers. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, at 700 Congress St., in Quincy or call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Making sure you have the medical treatment to allow your life to be free from worry is what we are dedicated to offering.

Gilmartin's Crystal Ball

Tom Gilmartin has dusted off his crystal ball once again and stepping to the firing line with his predictions for the Nov. 5 Presidential-state election.

Gilmartin, former Ward 5 City Councillor (1946-48) has been calling them for something like 27 years based on his own polls and surveys.

GILMARTIN

He notes he picked 11 winners out of 13 in the state election two years ago and nine out of nine in last year's city election. Good, he says, for a 97.3 percent batting average.

Here are some of the winners for Nov. 5 as he sees them:

Senator John Kerry in "a very close" win with an "if": If Susan Gallagher, running as a Conservative Party candidate, takes votes away from Gov. William Weld. "And I think she will," he says. (He's voting for Gallagher.)

Ed Teague over Bill Delahunt in another close one for the 10th Congressional District seat. He says Delahunt's loss of three crucial campaign and fundraising weeks due to the recount and court challenges will take its toll on him.

President Bill Clinton will defeat Bob Dole by a 3 to 5 percent popular vote margin and with over 300 Electoral votes. ("It will result in four more years of the same or worse," he says.)

Ross Perot, who got 19 percent of the vote four years ago, won't get over 9 percent this year.

The U.S. Senate will remain in the Republican column.

If the House of Representatives remains Republican, Joseph Kennedy will announce his candidacy for governor before December.

But if the House is won by the Democrats, he will stay in Washington and will be the next chairman of the powerful Banking Committee.

In the Norfolk-Plymouth Senate District, he gives the nod to incumbent Bob Hedlund over Bob Delahunt.

And he sees a "very close" race for Norfolk County treasurer. A flip of the coin, he says, comes downs heads for incumbent Robert Hall over Tim Cahill.

That's the way Gilmartin sees them. But not necessarily the way this column sees them.

By the way, Tom, we made an on-the-nose prediction two years ago when you said that one was your last hurrah as an election forecaster. We predicted you would be back. Old fire horses find it hard to go out to pasture.

THE RECENT DEATH of Louis DiMatteo, past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, brought back a fond memory of him for Don MacDonald, retired popular Quincy High School teacher.

His letter should also bring back memories of that great football rivalry between Quincy Point and South Junior High Schools in the 1930's and 1940's. MacDonald writes:

"I thought that some of your Quincy Sun readers might be interested in hearing about his contribution in winning the 1937 Quincy Junior High School football championship for South Junior High School (now Sterling).

"Horry Call was South's head coach and I was his assistant. We used the 'single wing' formation, popular at that time. We entered the final game with Point Junior with both teams undefeated.

"Louis was our blocking back and hadn't handled the ball all season long. In this final game he caught a scoring forward pass for the winning touchdown that gave us the championship.

"I'll always remember Louis as a young man who worked hard to be ready when opportunity knocked."

There were two outstanding running backs in that game that day: Mike Barba for Point and Lanny Lombardi for South. And it was Lombardi who three the pass that DiMatteo caught.

You can't think of Point and South without those two names coming to mind. Who was better, Barba or Lombardi? You can still get an argument on that even today. They were both good and went on to be outstanding teammates at Quincy High.

THE OLD PATRIOT Ledger building on Temple St., vacant since 1988, has temporary occupants. The Democratic City Committee has set up campaign headquarters there for Clinton-Gore, John Kerry, Bill Delahunt, Tim Cahill, etc.

That building (and the one on Maple St.) have been sold to United Real Estate Investors through Key Realty. Word is that it will be renovated for office and retail space. But there is speculation it may become a juvenile court.

OBSERVATION: Those handsome Fall season motif "Welcome To Quincy" and matching banners on the Colonial style lamp posts add a nice touch to the Quincy Center scene. Similar banners are up in Wollaston and will soon go up in North Quincy. There will be five different motifs throughout the year. Next one will be for Christmas-Hanukkah.

SHEETS

The banners were selected by a committee comprising Bernice Mader, the mayor's administrative assistant; Tom Koch, head of the city's Park-Forestry-Cemetery departments and Purchasing Agent Al Grazioso.

His Honor Jim Sheets deserves a "well done" for this and all he does to give Quincy that something special look.

A RECEPTION FOR County Commissioner John Gillis, former city clerk, is set for Tuesday, Oct. 29, 6 to 8:30 p.m., at G.J. Coddington's, Quincy Sq. Tickets are $50 per person. Gillis is a candidate for re-election in November.

Germantown Center Seeks Donations For Holiday Baskets

[The following is an open letter to the residents of Quincy.]

As the holidays are quickly approaching, the Germantown Neighborhood Center, 333 Palmer St. (a non-profit organization supported through Black Grant Funds) is beginning to organize our community holiday basket distribution.

The center services approximately 200 low-income families in the Germantown community during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Donations are being requested so the center can make up food baskets to assist our families. I do appreciate your considering this request and look forward to hearing from you as soon as possible.

Wishing you the happiest holiday season!

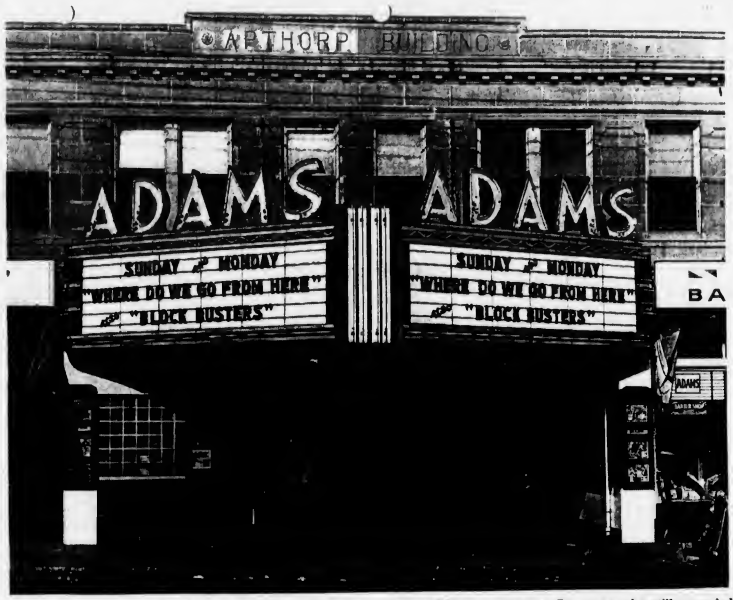
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A LATE 1940's view of the Adams Theater that was located at 15 School Street in the Apthorp building across from today's Firestone store. Originally built as the Plymouth Building, you can see that the name was changed just before this photo was taken. The Adams theater opened early in World War II and closed less than 20 years later in the late fifties. On the top floor were the still occupied Apthorp apartments, below on the right was the Adams barber shop and on the left was Art Studios. The theater entrance is now the site of the Low Overhead Carpet Shop next to Goodhues Religious Goods store.

Animal League Urges 'Yes' Vote On Question One

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of the Quincy Animal League, I would like to urge a "yes" vote on Question One on election day.

Question One bans the use of cruel, barbaric leghold traps which indiscriminately maim and torture not only wildlife but household pets as well. Current law allows the setting of these traps even on your private property without your consent, posing a risk to your pets and children. This must be stopped.

Question One will also end the inhumane practice of pursuing bears and bobcats with hounds, often causing serious injury to both the dogs and their prey. When the bear or bobcat is finally treed, the "brave" hunter comes along and shoots the helpless, frightened animal.

We are no longer living in the Daniel Boone era and there is no excuse for this sort of cruelty.

The Quincy Animal League has consistently spoken out on behalf of the humane treatment of animals since its founding in 1982, and we fully support Question One.

Urges No Vote On Question 1

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As chairman of the Massachusetts/Rhode Island Council of Trout Unlimited, I am urging all citizens concerned with the preservation of our natural resources to vote No on Question 1 on the November ballot.

In my job as an environmental compliance officer with a major corporation, it is my duty to comply with regulation that protect our environment. As a fisherman and an outdoorsman I have a deep interest in protecting the environment and giving our streams, rivers and forests the opportunity to produce healthy, abundant fish on wildlife populations.

Under the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, many species are more plentiful and healthier now than they have been for several years. Fish and Wildlife Board members are knowledgeable and experienced in the matters they oversee and base their management decisions on scientific research performed by Division biologists. This scientific approach has worked. Restoration of the bald eagle and thriving deer populations illustrate the Division's success.

Question 1 would remove all membership requirements for serving on the state Fish and Wildlife board, opening the board to political appointees who know nothing about wildlife management. The 3,500 members of Trout Unlimited that I represent fear that this proposed low would devastate our current wildlife management programs. Don't allow emotion to take the place of service--vote No on Question 1.

A 'Thank You' From Lung Assn.

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of the American Lung Association, I would like to publicly thank a group of local people who participated in our 12th annual Autumn Escape Bike Trek.

The group, co-captained by Doug Haskins of Quincy and Ed Lapanus of Holbrook, included Laura Mirabella, Lynn Haskins, Jose Costa Jr., Joe Lopes, Vincent Murphy, Michelle and Amy Colombus, Rob and Elaine Curtis, Ian Dowell, Dan Easa, Teresa Lyons, Touraj Nagieh, Tim Cooney, Kevin Murphy, and Peter Walsh.

The team, many of whom are employees of Quincy Hospital, is called Team Mohawk after the cabin they resided in on their first trek three years ago. This year they raised nearly $12,000 to continue education and research programs to aid in the fight against lung disease--#3 killer.

The American Lung Association is a non-profit, volunteer-driven health agency which depends on the generosity of our public, especially on people like those on Team Mohawk, to continue local education and research programs.

Thanks again to Team Mohawk, who knows, "When you can't breathe, nothing else matters."

Saltonstall Urges Students To Support Vietnam War

By PAUL HAROLD

Former U.S. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall denounced draft card burning and protest rioting in an address before seniors at North Quincy High School.

October 24 - 30
1967
29 Years Ago

He urged support for the war in Vietnam and said the United Nations was the best means for achieving peace.

"Unlawful criticism of the Johnson Administration gives comfort to the enemy, and such comfort could mean one or more Navy or Army men could die in Vietnam," he said.

The senator was in the city to also speak at the United Nations Day ceremonies in front of city hall, where Councillor Vincent Smyth served as chairman.

PRIVATE HOSPITAL OWNERSHIP PROPOSED

The board of directors of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce voted to support the transfer of the city hospital ownership to a non-profit organization.

William O'Connell, executive vice president for the chamber, said that municipal hospitals were in the minority in the U.S. and that a private operation would place the hospital in a stronger position to fill future needs. It would also result in considerable savings for the taxpayers, he said.

WILSON NAME FOR NEW SCHOOL URGED

The Alumni Association of the John Hancock School began a campaign to name the new $1.7 million school in South Quincy after H. Forrest Wilson.

Wilson served as principal of the Hancock School from 1909-1929. Rev. Irving Fletcher, who served as president of the alumni, said he had the support of his membership and current principal John Osterman.

The new school would replace both the 81-year-old Hancock School as well as the 71-year-old Lincoln School.

Two Halloween Programs At Crane Library

Two Halloween programs will be held in the Children's Room at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

On Saturday, librarian Paul Jowanna will present a program of funny and scary stories entitled "Shades and Shadows of Fun and Fright." It is designed for children age 3 and older.

Storyteller Davis Bates will present "Halloween Harvest: Stories and Songs to Celebrate the Season" Tuesday, Oct. 29 at 7 p.m. The performance, designed for a family audience with children age 5 and older, will involve the audience through story and song in a variety of cultural traditions.

Due to the nature of the Halloween stories, some parts of the Oct. 29 performance may be too scary for preschoolers. For more information, call 376-1304.

Ruth Gordon Centennial Begins Tonight At Historical Society

Former Mayor Francis McCauley, former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth, and Patriot Ledger critic Constance Gorfinkle will be among those sharing recollections of Quincy-born actress and author Ruth Gordon at a special Quincy Historical Society program at the Adams Academy tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m.

The program officially begins the Society's celebration of the 100th anniversary of Ruth Gordon's birth. The program will also include a biographical sketch of Gordon and some brief illustrations of her talent and diversity. Admission is free.

Opening at the same time at the Academy is a museum of photos and memorabilia outlining Ruth Gordon's career. The exhibit will remain on view through Jan. 17. Museum hours are Monday-Friday, 9-5; and Saturday, 1-4 p.m.

The first part of an educational series on her films is scheduled to run Friday, Oct. 25 through Wednesday, Oct. 30. Tentative schedule: Abe Lincoln in Illinois; Dr. Erlich's Magic Bullet, Monday; Edge of Darkness, Tuesday; Harold and Maude, Wednesday. Each will show at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Harold and Maude will also be shown at 7 p.m.

Call the Society at 773-1144 for updates on possible additional, including evening, showings of the other films and updates on weekend activities.

The series will resume Wednesday, Nov. 6.

THIS QUINCY SUN photo of Ruth Gordon and her husband, author-playwright Garson Kanin, was taken by photographer Charles Flagg at their Martha's Vineyard home Aug. 22, 1985 just six days before her death. Flagg took several other photos that day and they are the last known of the famed Quincy-born actress. Two of the photos will be part of the Ruth Gordon exhibit at the Quincy Historical Society.

Pumpkin Fair Saturday At Wollaston School

Dancing Topic Oct. 28 For Evening Auxiliary

The Eventide Auxiliary will meet Monday, Oct. 28 at 2 p.m. at the William B. Rice Eventide Home, 215 Adams St., Quincy.

There will be a program on dancing presented by Don Gohl as well as a business meeting. A social hour with refreshments will follow.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

As it as in the past, there is no charge.

South Shore Mental Health Celebrates 70th Anniversary

South Shore Mental Health recently celebrated its 70th anniversary of serving people in Quincy, other South Shore communities and Cape Cod during a recent celebration at the Blue Hill Country Club in Canton.

"We are providing the highest quality of care to hundreds," said Harry Shulman, president and CEO of the organization who served as emcee for the event. Some 280 men and women were in attendance.

Five individuals who have contributed to the organization's success over the years were recognized by Shulman.

Honored were William Ketter, editor of The Patriot Ledger; Judge Warren Powers of Quincy District Court, Fannie Zambuto, Edward Farrell and James Michener as well as the staff of South Shore Mental Health including nine South Shore residents with more than 20 years of service.

Sen. Michael Morrissey also presented a proclamation from the Massachusetts Senate to Shulman.

Shulman noted the organization has an annual budget of $22 million.

Two New Appointments At Chamber Of Commerce

South Shore Chamber of Commerce announces two new appointments.

Stephen F. Power of Milton has been named government affairs manager while Dean A. Rizzo of Cohasset was named community development manager.

Power most recently was assistant director of government affairs for Printing Industries of New England, where he helped develop a grassroots government affairs program for the regional trade association.

Power served as a legislative assistant for former Cong. Brian Donnelly and has volunteered for several political campaigns.

He graduated from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst with a BA in political science.

"Steve's congressional experience as aide to Brian Donnelly, his association work, and his contacts on Beacon Hill will be valuable in this position. We expect that Steve will serve the membership well in bringing the message of the South Shore business community to the Legislature," said Chamber President and CEO Ron Zooleck.

In his new position, Rizzo will be responsible for coordinating seven business councils and other related committees.

The owner of Aquarius Sunrooms, Inc. in Cohasset, Rizzo has been active in several local organizations. He serves as vice president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, chairs Cohasset's Greenbush Mitigation Committee, and serves on the board of directors of the Cohasset Rotary Club.

Rizzo earned two bachelor of science degrees from the University of Massa-chusetts, one in economics and the other in sociology.

"Dean's qualifications include experience as a business person and an active volunteer in the business community," Zooleck said. "His background should prove invaluable in achieving the Chamber's goals in community development."

Prefer Gore Over Kemp, Hillary Over Elizabeth

Local Kids Vote Survey Shows Jobs, Economy Top Issue

Jobs and the economy, Al Gore and Hillary Clinton were among the preferences in a survey of local high school students and their parents conducted by Kids Voting Massachusetts, Inc.

The Quincy polling sample included 68 Quincy High School students under the direction of Social Studies Department Head John Harrington and 56 of the students' parents. The local sampling was part of a poll conducted by Kids Voting USA which surveyed 1738 students and 1300 adults in 29 states.

The results in Quincy were similar to those throughout the nation with some notable exceptions.

• Although violence and crime was chosen by students and adults throughout the nation as the leading reason to vote this year, Quincy students and adults continued to choose jobs and the economy as the top reason to vote.

• Balancing the budget was considered of much less importance to Quincy respondents than those in other states.

• While initiatives against drug abuse were chosen by Quincy students and adults as of great importance, Quincy students and adults regarded the campaign against smoking to be of great importance as well.

• Students and adults in Quincy chose the anti-smoking campaign as importance in twice the percentage by their counterparts in other states.

• Vice President Al Gore was several percentage points more popular than GOP counterpart Jack Keep in Quincy than he was in national results.

• Students and adults in Quincy chose Hillary Clinton over Elizabeth Dole by a 3 to 1 margin as their choice if the two were running for president.

• While over 71 percent of Quincy adults had already chosen the person they would vote for Nov. 5, nearly 62 percent of Quincy student had not made a choice.

Kids Vote USA, a non-profit, nonpartisan, grass-roots organization, conducted the random nationwide survey of students and adults as both a measurement of voters' leanings on issues this election year and to provide an educational activity for participating students, said Harold Crowley Jr., Executive Director of Kids Voting Massachusetts.

The national survey indicated that more than 50 percent of students and a full 30 percent of adults remained undecided on their presidential choice.

"That leads us to speculate that voters are still gathering and assimilating information on the candidates and the issues that are important to them," said Marilyn Evans, president and CEO of Kids Voting USA.

"This suits the Kids Voting USA model since our goal is to develop information-gathering skills in students so that they learn about the candidates and the issues before casting a ballot. Then as adults, we hope they carry on this interest as registered voters for the rest of their lives.

"And, of course," Evans continued, "because of students' interest in the election, we know more parents and adults overall will be interested too, and vote as they accompany the kids to voter precincts on election day."

Other national highlights included:

• More than 31 percent of students/24 percent of adults ranked "violence and crime" as this year's number one reason to vote on election day. Nationally, jobs and the economy was second while "balancing the budget" was third among both groups.

• Over 62 percent students/54 percent adults said they would cast their vote for Hillary Clinton if she were running for president against Elizabeth Dole. Mrs. Dole received 34.4 percent from students and 44.4 percent from adults.

• Al Gore outscored Jack Kemp almost two-to-one in both the student and adult categories if both men were running for president. (Students: 61.9 percent for Gore; 33.4 percent for Kemp. Adults: 60.8 percent for Gore; 36.8 percent for Kemp.)

• Nearly 81 percent of students and 86 percent of adults ranked the initiatives against drug abuse as more important than the campaign against smoking. (17.6 percent of students and 12.6 percent of adults said smoking issue was more important.)

• One-third of students and one-fifth of adults ranked David Letterman as the TV personality who most influences their vote, according to the nationwide survey.

Jay Leno ranked second among adults, while Rosie O'Donnell scored second among students.

Kids Voting USA this year will reach 4.5 million students in 40 states plus the District of Columbia. Kids Voting is dedicated to educating youth about the importance of an informed electorate and about voting to sustain democracy, and to increase voter turnout now and in the future.

Quincy was the first Massachusetts municipality to participate in Kids Vote last year. The city will again take part this year.

Kids Voting is the only program which virtually replicates the official voting process for youth. Students are invited into the official polling site on election day, accompanied by a parent or guardian, to cast their own ballot in their own voting booth alongside the adults. the news media reports results just as they do official results.

New State Program To Offer Pharmacy Assistance For Seniors

Seniors over the age of 65 will soon be eligible to receive assistance from the state to help defray the cost attributed to outpatient drug prescriptions, announces state Rep. Stephen Tobin.

The program, which will be administered by the Department of Medical Assistance, is a result of legislation which included the new Pharmacy Assistance Program.

"This is great news to all seniors," said Tobin. "Up to now, seniors have been forced to pay for their prescriptions out of their own pockets, because Medicare does not cover the costs. Seniors should not be forced to live their golden years in poverty. This new program will bring some relief to their budgets."

Tobin said to be eligible for the program, individuals must be a resident of the state for at least 16 months; be age 65 or over; cannot be enrolled in the Medicaid program; cannot have drug coverage from supplemental policy (Medigap or HMO plan) or any other third party payer; and must have an income no greater than $884 a month for an individual. The program may be available to individuals with higher incomes during the second year.

Individuals who are eligible for the program may receive help purchasing drugs up to a cost of $500 per year. A schedule of covered drugs will be developed by the Department of Medical Assistance in conjunction with the Department of Public Health.

An open enrollment period will be held each year during February and March, at which time individuals can apply for the program. Coverage will begin July 1 of each year.

For more information, call Tobin's State House office at 722-2396.

Service Academies Applications Due Nov. 1

Congressman Gerry Studds reminds high school students on the South Shore, Cape Cod and the Islands that the deadline for applying for nomination to the four U.S. Service Academies is Nov. 1.

"I encourage all students interested in attending one of the Service Academies next year--whether it's Navy, Air Force, Military, or Merchant Marine--to contact me as soon as possible," Studds said.

Studds also urged students who have already indicated interest in nominations to make certain their application files are completed by Nov. 1.

"All applications completed by the deadline will be carefully considered and evaluated by my Nominee Selecting Committee," he said. "I will then forward the names of those students recommended by the committee to the academies as my nominees."

For more information, call the Congresssman's office toll free at 1-800-794-9911.

American Medical Response of Massachusetts

Wants you to know how to have a safe Halloween

In keeping with American Medical Response's (AMR) community outreach partnership and our commitment to training and education, we present the following information for parents and their trick or treaters.

(Halloween is a time for children, but it can also be a time of concern among parents. There's plenty to worry about, from the sad lack of nutrition in the treats kids bring home to the safety of little ones trick-or-treating in the evening hours. But the Halloween season doesn't need to be cause for concern, if parents keep this advice in mind.)

• Kids should always be accompanied by an adult when they go trick-or-treating. Furthermore, kids should go only to the houses of neighbors they know. Parents shouldn't be lured by their kids' desire for more loot. Keep them from venturing into unknown, potentially dangerous neighborhoods.

• Dress yourself and your kids in light-colored clothing, if you plan to go out after dusk. Reflective tape will also help make kids more visible.

• Kids' masks and costumes should in no way impair vision. This could be especially hazardous if kids are in high-traffic areas.

• Never allow your children to eat candy that you haven't carefully inspected. If the packages aren't completely sealed, throw the candy away.

• Some pets may have an adverse reaction to some costumes. Have your child use caution when approaching your own family pets as well as your neighbors' and friends' pets.

• If your child's costume requires props, make certain they are made from soft foam rubber, instead of hard plastic or wood.

This is provided as a public service by AMR. For additional information, contact American Medical Response at (508) 650-5555. American Medical Response of Massachusetts is a trusted community partner. AMR serves hospitals, nursing facilities and health care organizations in four states while covering 45 New England communities with 911 emergency ambulance service.

added, overtime pay and the cost of hiring independent contractors will put the figure "in the tens of thousands of dollars."

Sheets also noted he is pleased Weld has agreed to "fast-track" work on the Town Brook flood-relief tunnel and the Furnace Brook drainage project, something that was announced at Monday night's City Council meeting. The mayor said completion of the projects will alleviate considerably problems such as those resulting from Sunday's storm.

Continental Receives Cable Operator Of The Year Award

Continental Cablevision Inc., the nation's third largest cable television company, was named Cablevision Magazine/Bill Daniels 1996 Cable Operator of the Year during a recent ceremony at a cable industry conference in Baltimore.

The event marks the fourth time in nine years that Continental has received the accolade. Continental is the only company that has been recognized with the award more than once.

"I'm deeply honored to accept this award on behalf of Continental's management and, most important, our 10,000 employees, who are the real winners of Operator of the Year," said Continental President and Chief Operating Officer William T. Schleyer. Continental employs 2,000 in its Northeast region.

In its Operator of the Year cover story in the Oct. 7 issue of Cablevision, the magazine cites Continental's overall leadership in business and industry affairs. Continental, Cablevision reports, is being recognized in part for its leadership in connecting classrooms with both cable television and high-speed data capabilities; its preparations to launch new products and services for its customers; including high-speed Internet access and telephone service; and its responsible approach to cable rates and regulatory issues.

The Operator of the Year is selected by the publishers and editors of Cablevision, a leading cable industry publication. The award was established in 1988 "to recognize on cable company's quality of management, its commitment to customer relations and community service, and its financial and operational acumen," according to Cablevision.

Continental Cablevision Inc. serves more than 4.2 million subscribers in 20 states and is part owner of companies providing cable television service in Argentina and Singapore, and broadband telecommunications in Australia.

Educational Opportunities Publication Available

State Sen. Michael Morrissey announces the 1996-1997 edition of "Education Opportunities of Greater Boston for Adults" is available.

The 1996-1997 edition contains nearly 8,000 adult education courses offered at 250 schools in the Commonwealth. The Educational Resource Institute publishes the resource annually.

Publication has a myriad of information for adults seeking higher education opportunities.

"Some information found in the directory include financial aid for adult learners, special opportunities for college credit, and a list of weekend higher education classes," said Morrissey.

The directory can be ordered from TERI, 330 Stuart St., Suite 500, Boston, MA 02116 or by calling 617-426-0681 ext. 4244.

Also, people interested in information on a particular course or school can call the Higher Education Information Center toll-free hotline, 1-800-442-1171. People can also visit the center at the Boston Public Library for free information and advice on higher education opportunities.

FALL CAR CARE

Don't Take Your Brakes For Granted

If your reaction time is typical, you'll travel about 70 feet in an emergency stop from 65 m.p.h. before your foot reaches the brake pedal.

With visual problems, such as poor eyesight, bad lights or windshield wipers, or if you're experiencing the effects of medicine or alcohol, reaction time will be slower.

Further, if you've neglected mechanical maintenance, hitting the brake pedal may be only the beginning of your crisis. Erratic braking action can cause a bad emergency situation to become worse, as it can pull your car right into the accident--or it may not stop at all. That's the number one fear among drivers, according to one national survey.

Despite recent advancements in braking system design, including anti-lock brakes, this vital safety system is among the most neglected on our motor vehicles and a leading mechanical cause of accidents.

The chain of events that occur in your car's braking system is, as the expression goes, as strong as its weakest link. A malfunction of any part of the system can cause brakes to be erratic or to fail completely.

Here's what happens when you apply the brake pedal:

The pressure of your foot against the pedal is transferred to the hydraulic master cylinder, where pressurized fluid is fed to hydraulic cylinders at the four wheels.

On disc brakes, the caliper causes friction pads to squeeze the spinning rotor (like brake calipers squeezing the rim of a bike wheel), slowing or stopping the wheel.

On rear wheel drum brakes, a wheel cylinder receives the pressure and forces the brake shoes against the rotating drums.

Some vehicles have disc brakes on drum brakes on all four wheels; most have a combination of disc on front, drum on rear. In every case, it is friction that stops the vehicle. Motion energy is converted to heat, which is dissipated by air cooling the rotors and drums.

Simple as the process may sound, it involves a complex system of parts that must function in concert. Friction and heat, combined with exposure to the elements and road contamination, lead to wear and deterioration of the braking system. Periodic inspection and service is essential.

Car Care Council offers an illustrated pamphlet on the braking system. For your free copy, send a business-sized, self-addressed stamped envelope to Car Care Council, Department B, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

News USA

Spring is a good time to check and change wiper blades, as winter weather is tough on rubber blades.

Driving in the Rain? Wipers On, Lights On

(NU) -April showers may bring May flowers, but driving in the rain can bring a rash of accidents.

That's why legislators in almost 20 states have enacted regulations requiring motorists to turn on their headlights any time it rains. The aim is to make it easier for others to see you when visibility is poor.

Similar wipers-on, lights-on regulations are pending in a number of other states.

"It's a great law, because visibility is always reduced in the rain. Drivers with worn wiper blades have an even harder time seeing in wet conditions," said Lee Reighart, director of marketing for Cooper Automotive's ANCO wiper blade division. "Activating headlights in the rain makes for safer driving because other motorists can see you better. Obviously, the safest way to drive is with headlights on and wiper blades in good condition."

Studies have shown that as many as 25 percent of vehicles on the road have bad wipers.

Spring is the best time to check the blades, since winter weather is the worst on them. Continual freezing and thawing can damage the rubber blade, not to mention abrasive road salt and the regular beatings by car owners using ice scrapers. Wipers should be inspected every six months and replaced as needed.

The safety consideration of driving with headlights is nothing new. Motorcycles are required to have a headlight on, even in clear daylight. And a number of new cars and trucks are factory equipped with daytime running lights — lowbeam headlights that automatically come on when the vehicle is started, day or night.

States that have enacted the wipers on, lights on regulation range from Oregon to Connecticut, Florida to Minnesota. Soon this safety law will be in effect nationwide.

"People need to be aware of the regulations and get in the habit of turning on their headlights when it rains," Reighart said.

Quincy Health Department Flooding Advice

What To Do If The Flood Water Contains Sewerage

•If you have been in contact with any water contaminated with sewerage, wash all body parts carefully with anti-bacterial soap and water. Also, if you have any open cuts or sores and must be wading through or touch the water, cover with rubber gloves or rubber boots. If any open cut or wound came into contact with the contaminated water, call you doctor and ask when you last had a tetanus shot or tetanus/diphtheria booster. If any rash or skin eruption occurs, also see your doctor.

•If there are any gastrointestinal symptoms (vomiting, cramping, diarrhea) contact the Quincy Health Department at 376-1284 or 376-1286 for information and stool sample containers.

•There are 6 major areas of concern:

(1) the contamination of cellars, buildings and yards by flooded sewage systems

(2) children playing in muddy yards or areas or areas which were potentially contaminated with sewage

(3) the spoilage of food by immersion

(4) the deterioration of asbestos pipe coverings in flooded basements

(5) possible rodent and insect infestation

Cellars And Basements

•Pump out and disinfect the basement. To disinfect, wash floors and wails with solution of two (2) capfuls of household bleach to one (1) gallon of water. Easier to remove mud when moist than when dry.

•Fumiture or other items to be put into plastic trash bags for disposal. If objects are kept, should be cleaned or disinfected by professional cleaner.

•A humidifier or fan should be used to begin to dry out cellar to prevent mold and mildew growth.

•NEVER remove a sewer cap in the basement to aid in water disposal. Contamination from invading bacteria could come into body contact.

Yards And Children

•If evidence of sewage contamination exists, disinfect by liberally applying lime over the ground keeping children and pets away until the lime is no longer visible and has been absorbed.

Food Spoilage Due To Immersion

•Any food that was not in a can should be disposed of. Cans, which are not bulging or warped, may be used if they are wasted in the bleach disinfection solution and dried thoroughly.

Food Spoilage Due To Loss Of Electricity

•Perishable items must be cooked immediately or should be thrown away. Foods stored in freezers, provided the freezer door stays closed, ought to be safe for about two days. Food in the refrigerator will last as long as the inside temperature stays below 45 degrees. Do not open the refrigerator door except sparingly. Put a room thermometer in the refrigerator to gauge its coldness.

Rodent And Insect Infestation

To prevent their influx, try to get the debris out of cellars as soon as possible, especially garbage, lumber, tree limbs, broken furniture and trash. If debris is left to rot, it will probably be necessary to call a certified pest control company.

Deterioration Of Asbestos Pipe Coverings

If the insulation on the pipes or boiler has gotten wet and fallen off, it must be repaired by licensed individuals. If the old insulation requires removal, the asbestos may only be moved by a certified asbestos removal contractor and approved by the Quincy Health Department.

Sanitizing Laundry Equipment

•Pour disinfectant into washing machine. Complete 15 minute cycle on hot water.

•Unplug dryer and wipe drum with cloth dipped in disinfectant. Rinse with cloth dipped in clear water.

•Leave wash and dryer doors open over night to dry out. Plug in machines again.

Getting Rid Of Flood Odor

•Wash all areas down with hot sudsy water and then with bleach solution such as Clorox or Lysol.

Pumping, Cleaning, Repairing Flood Basements

•Before entering flooded area:

(1) turn off electricity, at the meter if possible

(2) check outside cellar walls for cave-ins or evidence of structural damage

(3) tum off gas or other fuel service valves

(4) open doors and windows to bring in fresh air

Pumping

•Do not use electric pump but gas powered or one connected to outside electric line. Do not pump out the water too fast, you may do more harm than good. Water in the cellar may be holding up the walls from the inside, if it exits too fast then unstable wall could collapse or floors could heave. Pump in stages watching the wall to see if any damage begins to show.

Oil Stains

If oil tank overturned or damaged, commercial products, such as Neutroda, neutralize fuel oil. Can use powder or aerosol.

Repairs

•Buckled walls can be detected by horizontal cracks and walls out of plumb. If very noticeable, repair immediately and install pilasters in walls more than 15 feet long.

•Settled walls and footings have vertical cracks. Repairs are difficult without special equipment. Call a contractor.

•If heaved floors have not returned to usual level or have cracked badly. New floor will have to be built by removing, old concrete, placing 6 inches of gravel fill, covering with polyethylene vapor barrier, laying 4 inch concrete floor with mastic joints between floor and walls.

Halloween Safety Pointers For Parents

Make Sure Your Kids Dress Up Safely

Halloween may be a fun holiday for kids, but for parents, trick-or-treat time can be a little tricky.

Concerns about children's safety -- whether they are out in the neighborhood or back home with bags of booty -- can darken the day more quickly than a black cat. But not to worry! To make Halloween a treat for all, follow these safety tips:

•Check that the costumes are flame retardant so the little ones aren't in danger near burning jack-o-lanterns and other fire hazards.

•Keep costumes short to prevent trips, falls, and other bumps in the night.

•Try make-up instead of masks. Masks can be hot and uncomfortable and, more importantly, they can obstruct a child's vision--a dangerous thing when kids are crossing streets and going up and down steps.

•Make sure kids wear light colors or put reflective tape on their costumes.

•Trick-or-Treaters whould always be in groups so they aren't a tempting target for real-life goblins. Parents should accompany young children.

Make Trick-Or-Treat Trouble Free

•Make sure older kids trick-or-treat with friends. Together, map out a safe route so parents know where they'll be. Tell them to stop at familiar homes where the outside lights are on.

• Try to get your kids to trick-or-treat while it's still light out. If it's dark, make sure someone has a flashlight and pick well-lighted streets.

•Make sure kids know not to enter strange houses or stranger's cars.

Treats

•Kids need to know not to eat their treats until they get home. One way to keep trick-or-treaters from digging in while they're still out is to feed them a meal or a snack beforehand.

•Check out all treats at home in a well-lighted place.

•What to eat? Only unopened candies and other treats that in in original wrappers. Don't forget to inspect fruit and homemade goodies for anything suspicious. By all mens remind kids not to eat everything at once or they'll be feeling pretty ghoulish for awhile!

Halloween can be a lot of fun for parents and kids alike--if everybody remembers the tricks and the treat of playing it safe.

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

NO SURPRISES HERE

While an attorney may produce a surprise witness in a television drama or movie, there is little room for surprises after a complaint is filed and the grounds of a civil lawsuit are set forth by the plaintiff. Once the defendant answers the summons and a trial date is set, "discovery" begins. This procedure is undertaken to obtain evidence that will strengthen each party's case, as well as prevent either side from being surprised by undisclosed facts or unknown witnesses. Discovery techniques include depositions, which are the oral questioning of parties to the lawsuit and of witnesses. In addition, there are interrogatories, which are written questions that must be answered in writing. Both depositions and interrogatories are given under oath, and those who give answers that are untruthful could be charged with (and convicted of) perjury.

HINT: The process of discovery ensures that both sides in a legal contest involving civil matters are playing on a level ballfield, with each side having access to the same facts and information.

If you've been injured by someone whether intentionally or not, it is important for you to seek the advice of an experienced attorney. I can evaluate your case and determine if the other party exercised "ordinary and reasonable care." To schedule a free consultation, call 773-2880. My office is conveniently located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street. Your referral of a friend to our office is one of the finest compliments you can give us. We're accepting new clients at this time and welcome you and your friends.

Accent On Quincy Center

By BRUCE ARONS
Quincy Center Development Coordinator

There's A Lot Doing

Welcome to Quincy! That is what the city's new Fall banners are saying to both visitors and residents alike. The banners are of high quality and reflect a festive and friendly image of Quincy Center.

It's official. The Patriot Ledger property on Temple and Maple Streets has new owners. United Real Estate Investors passed papers the 10th of this month. I spoke to one of the investors a few days ago and he told me they are very confident and excited about their current investment in Quincy Center. The plan is for remodeling the building to house both commercial office and retail space. Key Realty was the broker for this sale.

In addition to the purchase of the Ledger property, there is a considerable amount of capital reinvestment occurring in Quincy Center due to an aggressive Facade Improvement Program being administered by The Quincy 2000 Corporation.

David Goldman, owner of property on the corner of School and Hancock Sts., through participation in the current Quincy 2000 facade improvement program, has been able to improve four new storefronts with two new interiors rebuilt to accommodate new tenants.

The hard-working Agnitti family is currently renovating its property on the corner of Hancock and Maple Sts. An exterior plywood barrier has been erected while extensive rebuilding of the exterior walls occurs. The first floor portion of the building is being completely remodeled inside and out. Look forward to a new lounge and restaurant opening at this location by the end of this year. Thanks to the incentives provided by the Quincy 200 Facade Improvement Program, the entire exterior of the property is being improved.

Work has started on the front of the Arcade building located on Hancock St. Through the Quincy 2000 Facade Program, I have been able to work with and convince the owner to make major facade improvements to his property. We have developed the plans together and they look great! According to the contractor, this project is scheduled to be completed before Thanksgiving.

All of this new, investment/activity, is taking place due to the on-going involvement and assistance of the Quincy 2000 Corp., and reinforces the strong confidence investors have in Quincy Center's growing economy.

The weather this past weekend did not allow an "official" opening of the Rossway Promenade to occur for the second time in a row. For those of you yet to have visited the recently renovated Rossway/Promenade area, you should stop by at your convenience. The new banners, benches, planters, lighting and special art displays are very creative, interesting and user-friendly. A big thanks to Rodney Spear of the Quincy Department of Public Works, for his time spent in overseeing and coordinating the Rossway/Promenade events and improvements.

This is just the first of what is hoped to be many more on-going improvements to the area, eventually developing a good-size promenade space for private vendor and entertainment activities. Ultimately creating a destination place to be enjoyed by both residents and visitors alike.

Did you know that we have more than 350 various goods and services available in downtown Quincy? More details about this in a future column.

Till next time--be sure to check out what's "happening" in downtown Quincy Center--and feel free to write me with your comments and suggestions. (Mailing address: The Quincy 2000 Corp., 1250 Hancock St., Suite 802N, Quincy, MA 02169.)

Coats may be brought to the office throughout the drive, which ends Nov. 22. For more information, call Kim Eaton at 471-8008.

Business Healthfest Today At Harvard Pilgrim Health Care

The Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Quincy Health Center Business Healthfest will be held today (Thursday) from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Harvard Pilgrim office at President's Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The event will include free health screenings, health and safety information seminars and more. The Business Healthfest is free and open to the employees of companies located in the greater Quincy area.

"We welcome everyone to tour the center, participate in quick, convenient health screenings, learn important health and safety measures, and enjoy healthy refreshments," said John McGillivray, health fair coordinator. "We have something for everyone including personal fitness and stress management."

Free adult screenings offered at the Business Healthfest include blood pressure screening and body fat analysis. YMCA fitness talks, stress management seminars, Heimlich maneuver demonstrations, disability awareness programs, and women's health displays are just a few of the health education activities that will be offered on-site.

"Our thanks go to the staff of the Quincy Health Center, as well as the City of Quincy Council on Aging, South Shore YMCA, the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group and Quincy College for their help in putting this health fair together," said McGillivray.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Buyers Need To Feel At Home In A House

When home buyers walk through a house, they need to be able to envision it as their home.

This is why vacant houses are often less emotionally attractive to buyers. For instance, furnishings help buyers picture themselves watching a movie in front of the hearth room or lounging in front of a cozy fireplace.

As a practical matter, houses appear warmer and more personable with furniture in place. A vacant house just doesn't convey that special sense of home to potential buyers.

Another problem may arise when buyers view a vacant house. Many mistakenly think the house is empty because it's been on the market for months. This may wrongly lead buyers to wonder what's wrong with the house, since it has not sold.

If you must move out while your house is on the market, ERA Central Real Estate, 128 McGrath Highway, can help arrange to take care of the property in your absence. However, responding to offers and making any last-minute improvements specified by a buyer are all better accomplished if at least one of the owners remains with the house.

For more information, call Vincent Moscardelli at ERA Central Real Estate, 328-1312.

Quincy Community Action To Host Homebuying Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., an approved MHFA first-time homebuyer counseling agency, will hold a First Time Homebuyer's Workshop beginning Tuesday, Nov. 12.

Other workshops are scheduled Nov. 14, 19 and 21.

All workshops will be held at the Weymouth Tufts Library, 43 Broad St., Weymouth, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Attendance at all four workshops is mandatory to qualify for the many different mortgage options available through the Mass. Housing Finance Agency, Sot Second programs and other financing options.

Agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. Focus will be on different aspects of the homebuying process, including how to locate a property within budget, making an offer, and determining the best mortgage program according to needs.

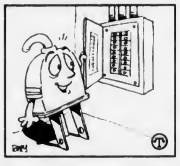
Advance registration is required. Space is limited.

Workshop fee is $35 per household.

For more information and registration forms, call Housing Coordinator Debbie Kidd at 479-8181 ext. 115.

The workshop is sponsored by the City of Quincy and DHCD.

Plug Into Electrical Safety



(NAPS)—If an inexpensive electrical device were installed in every U.S. household, nearly 70 percent of the approximately 330 electrocutions that occur each year in the home could be prevented. According to the National Electrical Safety Foundation, this life-saving device is a ground fault circuit interrupter, known as a GFCI.

• GFCIs are products designed to prevent serious injury or death from electrical shock by detecting ground faults at very low levels.

• A GFCI should be used in any area where water may come in contact with electrical products. GFCIs are now required by code in certain areas of the home including unfinished basements, kitchens, bathrooms, garages, crawl spaces, and around swimming pools.

• If a GFCI senses minimal current leakage to ground in an electrical circuit, it assumes a ground fault has occurred. It then interrupts power fast enough to prevent serious injury from electrical shock.

• Three types of GFCIs are designed for home use—wall receptacle, circuit breaker, and portable plug-in. All three are readily available, inexpensive, and fairly simple to install.

For more information, send a 55¢ stamped, self-addressed No. 10 (business size) envelope to National Electrical Safety Foundation, 1300 North 17th St., #1847, Rosslyn, Va. 22209.

RED RAIDERS HALFBACK Brian Walsh turns the corner as Weymouth defenders Mark Davey (80) and Tony Barnes attempt to bring him down during Friday night's game. Walsh, who gained 104 yards rushing, scored the game's only touchdown on a three-yard run in the fourth to break a scoreless tie.

NORTH QUINCY'S Tom Coughlin hands off as fullback Mike Powers looks for a Weymouth defender to block during the Red Raiders' 7-2 Old Colony League victory. Powers made one of the key plays of the game, breaking up a fourth-down pass in the end zone in the fourth quarter to give North the ball back on downs. (Quincy Sun Photos/Tom Gorman)

North Quincy 'D' Overwhelms Weymouth, 7-2

19th Ranked Raiders Host Don Bosco Saturday

By LIAM FITZGERALD

As it has done all season, the North Quincy defense rose to the occasion and lifted the Red Raiders to a 7-2 road win Friday night over previously unbeaten Weymouth.

After NQ halfback Brian Walsh broke a scoreless tie with a three-yard touchdown run and North Quincy took an intentional safety, Jim Finn punted to the Wildcats' 46 with less than two minutes to play.

In need of a defensive stand, the Red Raiders' defense stuffed Wildcat fullback Steve Anzalone, then sacked quarterback Matt Scott on three consecutive plays to seal the road victory at Legion Field.

"This was a very big win for us, the biggest since our Super Bowl season of 1992," said NQ head coach Ken McPhee. "We came out and played real hard on defense, which has kept us in every game; that is where we're really strong right now."

With the win, their third on the road this season, the Red Raiders improved to 4-1 (3-1 in the Old Colony League) and resurfaced on The Boston Globe Top 20 at No. 19. Weymouth dropped to 5-1 overall, 3-1 in the OCL.

The Red Raiders gave a game ball from the victory to former assistant coach Ted Sadowski, who is very ill, McPhee said.

"The kids won it for him," said McPhee. "He was here 35 years and was my JV coach when I played here. Hopefully he's doing better."

Following last Friday's important road victory, the Red Raiders (4-1 overall, 3-1 OCL) return home for two games, starting with Don Bosco Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Bears (2-4), which play as an independent, visit NQ after a 35-8 win over Moses Brown last weekend.

In six games, the Bears have struggled offensively and defensively, scoring just 60 points (10.0 ppg) while allowing 144 points (24.0 ppg), but McPhee is not about to take the Bears lightly.

"They are better than their record indicates," said McPhee. "They put in a strange offense, a single wing, which is a throwback to the old, old days.

"It's difficult to contain if you haven't seen it. Our kids will just have to get used to it and play intelligent football. If we give them some life, they can give us some trouble."

In the Weymouth game, both defenses were the story as the game remained scoreless through three quarters. Finn, who played despite having the chicken pox, missed a 28-yard field goal in the second quarter on the best scoring opportunity of the half.

In the third quarter, North's Charlie Plaskasovitis intercepted Scott and returned it to the Weymouth 31, but Red Raider quarterback Tom Coughlin was picked off by Brian Harvey four plays later.

After North's defense held Weymouth to three plays and out on its next possession, the Red Raiders took over at their own 47. Walsh (104 yards rushing, 869 for the season) carried the ball five straight times to the Wildcats' 15. Five plays later, faced with a fourth and inches at the Weymouth four-yard line, Walsh lunged forward to pick up the first down by the nose of the football.

On the next play, Walsh followed the blocking of fullback Powers and scored the game's only touchdown with 9:05 to play. Finn's extra point pushed the lead to 7-0.

Weymouth nearly came right back to tie the game, driving 73 yards to the North five-yard line before coming up empty on a fourth-down incomplete pass.

After a 20-yard pass play to Jeff Edgar started Weymouth's march downfield, Anzalone (144 yards rushing) rushed five times for 48 yards to the North seven-yard line. Scott kept the ball on the next play, gaining two yards to set up a fourth and three from the five-yard line. Scott threw towards the end zone, looking for Edgar, but Powers hit the intended receiver to break up the play and turn the ball over to North on downs.

"That was a big time play, breaking up that pass," said McPhee. "He was in the end zone when he made that play."

Unable to muster much offense, North was faced with a fourth and 14 at its own 15 with 1:56 to play. McPhee decided to have Finn take a safety rather than give Weymouth a chance to block the punt or end up with good field position. After the safety, Finn booted an uncontested punt from the 20 and North's special teams converged to keep Weymouth on its side of the field, at the 46.

After Anzalone was stopped for a one-yard loss, Red Raider defensive end Norm Connell wrapped up Scott for a loss of five yards. On third and 16 from the Weymouth 40, Scott was sacked again, this time by defensive tackle Kevin Bowes for a six-yard loss. Faced with a fourth and 22 from the 34, Scott dropped back to pass, only to find linebacker Walsh closing in for the sack to clinch the win for North.

Much of the credit for the win, McPhee said, goes to North's assistant coaches, including defensive coordinator Earl Metzler, offensive coordinator Greg Wilson, special teams coach Joe Sullivan, scouts Tom Carter and Peter Chrisom Jr., and Sean Glennon, Ryan Craig, Bill MacDougall, David Joyce and Pete Zoia.

Defensively, McPhee cited Walsh, Connell, Frank McNamara, Shaun Donovan, Charles O'Brien, Brian Wells, Tim Semchenko and Pat Egan for excellent play against Weymouth.

On the other side of the ball, McPhee was impressed with the play of the offensive line and Coughlin, who rebounded from the interception to lead the Red Raiders to the game-winning score.

Quincy Youth Soccer Round-Up

This past weekend, Quincy Youth Soccer made up games rained out Sept. 8 and 22.

The U-8, U-10 and U-12 games rained out Sept. 8 were played Saturday, while the U-10 boys games rained out Sept. 22 were played Friday.

Sunday's games were washed out by the rain and will not be made up, with only one more week of regular season games remaining before the playoffs begin.

Here are last weekend's results:

Rested Quincy Hosts OCL Foe Friday

Presidents Need Top Performance Against Weymouth

Quincy head coach Peter Chella knows all about how stingy Weymouth is defensively and how Wildcats fullback Steve Anzalone bowls over opposing defenders for big chunks of yardage.

What Chella also knows is that when Weymouth visits Veterans Memorial Stadium Friday night at 7, the Presidents can defeat the Wildcats, though few give Quincy any shot of emerging victorious.

"Not many people expect us to win, but I think we're capable of winning this game," said Chella. "They are a very good team, but we can play with anyone, if we play up to our potential.

"We have yet to play our best football. We've shown spurts here and there, so I think we're capable of beating them if we play hard and aggressive football."

Heading into Friday's game, Weymouth is 5-1 overall, 3-1 in the Old Colony League (including a 3-0 road record) and ranked No. 7 in The Boston Globe Top 20. The Wildcats suffered their first loss of the season last week, falling to North Quincy, 7-2, at Legion Field.

Quincy (2-3, 1-2) was off last week following a 12-7 win over Plymouth South two weeks ago. The week off gave the Presidents the opportunity to rest and let heal some nagging injuries that have kept numerous players out of action.

Returning this week are center-defensive lineman Jay Little, wide receiver-linebacker Bob Walsh and offensive tackle Paul Daley.

"Little makes us a better offensive line simply because of his experience," said Chella. "The kids are more comfortable with him in there."

Facing a Weymouth defense which allows just four points a game, Quincy quarterback Mark Glynn will look to spread the offense around and force Weymouth's defense to play the whole field, Chella said.

"You have to open up your offense and force them to play the whole field, and I think our offense does that," said Chella. "You have to force their defense to play you sideline to sideline and deep.

"We spread it out pretty well: Kevin (Connolly) has about 500 yards rushing, our fullback Tim Santos has about 250 yards rushing and we have a good tight end and good wide receivers."

The Wildcat defense, Chella said, also attempts to stop its opponent's running game and force the offense to throw more--something Chella knows the Presidents can overcome if it happens Friday night.

"They try to take away the run; they want you to throw and we throw better than average," he said. "Glynn has between a 50-60 percent completion rate and has thrown only three interceptions, all in the Taunton game. He throws better than your average QB, so I'm not as worried about them taking away the run as another team might be."

While Quincy's offense will be preoccupied with putting points on the board against the Weymouth defense, the Presidents' defense will be focused on containing Anzalone, "their main offensive weapon," according to Chella.

Anzalone, a 6-2, 225-pound senior, gained 144 yards against North Quincy's strong defense last week.

"He (Anzalone) is a force, like a man among boys sometimes," said Chella. "He's their main weapon without question, but they also throw the ball decently and their quarterback (Matt Scott) can also run the ball well. They don't score a lot, but they don't have to.

"They have enough real good athletes that can put pressure on your defense. We need to play with more fire and intensity on defense and get some more confidence. Once we do that, we'll be fine."

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Flynn Phenomenal In North Girls' Win

Junior Laurie Flynn struck for three second-half goals to propel the North Quincy girls soccer team past the Taunton Tigers, 4-1, at Teal Field.

Flynn, who plays right wing, began her career day heading a corner kick from Kristen Keohane into the top left corner to draw the Red Raiders even two minutes into the second half.

Flynn tallied her second goal on a rebound of a Betsy Stone shot six minutes later. Flynn completed her pure hat trick, taking a perfectly placed pass from senior tri-captain Lisa Bragg and driving it into the net for her fifth goal of the season.

Bragg was a catalyst all day, playing striker and just missing a semi-breakaway midway through the half. Senior Kelly Wigmore completed the scoring, drilling a 12-yard shot to the rear post with Bragg assisting.

Tina Katsarikas saw extensive second half action and played well, as did Maureen Casey at outside back. Senior tri-captain Laura Shea also excelled, as did senior stopper Jill Picardi.

North then dropped a hard-fought, well-played game against Old Colony League foe Weymouth, 2-1.

The Red Raiders came out attacking and controlled play early. At the 26-minute mark, sophomore Betsy Stone took an excellent feed from senior tri-captain Hillary O'Donoghue and drilled a one-timer past the Weymouth keeper from 15 yards out. O'Donoghue created the play, making a brilliant run down the left side before feeding Stone. It was Stone's seventh goal of the year.

Bragg nearly made it 2-0 five minutes later when her shot from 10 yards out sailed over the crossbar. Weymouth tied it at 1-1 four minutes before the half ended.

Bragg barely missed giving the Raiders the lead midway through the second half, only to be denied by an outstanding, sprawling save by the Weymouth goalkeeper.

In North's end, sophomore goalie Kristen Bowes was just as impressive, stoning the Weymouth attackers. Defenders Keohane, Rachael Powers and Katie Koch also were strong in the defensive end. Flynn nearly gave the Raiders the lead with 10 minutes left, but her shot off a set play was saved.

North had a breakdown with less than three minutes left and Weymouth took advantage, scoring the game-winner.

"My kids played courageously in the Weymouth game and should have won the game," said NQ head coach Paul Bregoli. "Our last three losses have all been by one goal and to teams which are perennial powerhouses in the OCL.

"The good news is that we're close to breaking through and joining that group of teams. Most of the team is made up of underclassmen and that bodes well for the future."

North was scheduled to take on Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday, then conclude the 1996 season against rival Quincy Saturday at 5:30 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

On the same day, North Quincy's boys team battles the Quincy boys team at 7:15 p.m. at the Stadium in the final game of 1996 for both squads.

Quincy, North Girls Soccer Finale Saturday

The Quincy High girls soccer team faced three Old Colony League teams last week and came away with two losses and a tie.

In a 6-0 loss to Barnstable at Varsity Field, the Presidents played a solid first half, but ran out of steam in the second half. Barnstable outshot and outran the Presidents en route to the win.

"This is the best I have seen this team play all year long," said Quincy head coach Robin Welinsky. "The passes were perfect and we played Barnstable strong throughout the first half. The kids are giving everything that they have out on the field."

Earlier in the week, the Presidents fell 4-0 to Falmouth, the OCL's first place team, despite 19 saves by junior goalkeeper Becky Mackey.

"For someone who has not been trained as a goalkeeper, Becky has done well for our team," said Welinsky. "The girls played Falmouth well. They held them defensively and held them predominately in the middle. We had a few chances to score, but we did not take advantage of the opportunities."

In their first game of the week, the Presidents battled Plymouth South to a 1-1 tie at Varsity Field.

Trailing 1-0 with five minutes left, senior captain Erin Flaherty scored off a crossing pass by freshman forward Amy Papile to force the tie.

"The cross was a perfect ball and Erin was there to finish the play," said Welinsky.

Quincy held South scoreless through most of the first half, until Amy Conso's shot slipped through Quincy goalkeeper Becky Mackey's hand at the 30-minute mark. Mackey played a strong game, making 12 saves.

Playing strong defensively for the Presidents were sweeper Kara McSweeney, stoppers Julie Gibbons and Kim DiBona and Kelley Raymer, Crystal Kazolias and Michelle Boncek on the outside defensive positions.

After a game Tuesday at Silver Lake, the Presidents' season finale will be against rival North Quincy Saturday at 5:30 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

On the same day, Quincy's boys team battles the NQ boys team at 7:15 p.m. at the Stadium in both team's final game of the season.

North Outruns Quincy

North Quincy's runners took both ends of their recent meet against Quincy at Pageant Field.

The North boys took a 16-45 decision and the North girls won, 21-39.

North's boys took the top four spots to clinch the victory and put seven runners in the top 10.

Finishing first through fourth were senior Matt Quinn (14:38), senior Jimmy Wan (14:50), junior Bryan Linskey (15:00) and junior Joe Linskey (15:16). Junior Mike Devin came in sixth (15:50), junior Jay Newhall finished seventh (15:52) and sophomore Chris Barra was tenth (16:41).

For Quincy, Matt Langille placed fifth (15:36), Henry Wan came in eighth (15:57) and Chris Haidul was ninth (16:15).

Quincy's Julie Dunn (16:53) won the girls race with a blistering finishing kick over the last 300 yards to edge NQ senior Lauren Molloy (17:00) and freshman Lynda Wilson (17:04). However, North's girls placed seven runners in the top 10 and came out victorious.

Other top finishers for North included freshman Sarah Houghton (fourth-18:13), freshman Genevieve O'Brien (fifth-18:46), senior Carrie Jarvie (seventh-19:04), freshman Heather Meighan (eighth-19:08) and sophomore Nancy Gardner (tenth-20:18).

In the Freshman Championship race at the Brown University International in Rhode Island, North's freshman girls placed fourth with 148 points.

Ahead of North were Longwood of Middle Island Long Island, St. Anthony's of So. Huntington, N.Y., and Holliston, the team that edged NQ in the Baystate Invitational. Over 200 girls and 40 teams participated from New England, New York and New Jersey.

North's scorers included Wilson (14), O'Brien (19), Houghton (20), Meighan (27) and and Rebecca Favorito (68).

Gallant and Szczesuil both added an assist, as did Kerrin Griffin and Katie Markhard. Other key contributors were Kelly Rose O'Brien, Melissa Clifford and Meghan McLean.

Youth Hockey Action

Squirt A's Roll Out 'Matt' Line, 8-0

The "Matt" line of Matt Lavery, Matt Grazioso and Matt Germain led the Quincy Youth Hockey's Squirt A's to an 8-0 blanking of Somerville in their season opener.

With less than a minute gone in the first period, Lavery snuck one in off a pass from Grazioso. Grazioso netted the second goal, set up by Matt Germain. The "Matt" line closed out the first period scoring with Lavery connecting on a pass from Grazioso.

Ryan Feldoff opened the second period with a goal on a breakaway which started in the Quincy end by a pass from Billy Barter. Germain then notched his first score of the season with assists from linemates Grazioso and Lavery.

Goaltender Nick Manning, with strong support from defensemen Tim Duggan and Kevin Richardson, turned away strong Somerville rushes to keep Quincy ahead, 5-0, after two periods.

The "Matt" line combined again in the third with Germain dishing to Grazioso for the sixth Quincy goal. Liam Powers scored midway through the period off a pass from Barter. The Quincy offensive onslaught concluded with Ryan Conley finding the back of the net off a rebound of a Pat Maxey shot from the point.

Coaching the Squirt A's this season is Bill Richardson.

Squirt B II In Romp, 9-2

Paul Graham netted four goals as the Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt B II team romped over Somerville, 9-2, in its season opener.

Quincy got on the scoreboard early as Justin Thorley, assisted by Graham, beat the Somerville goaltender 30 seconds into the game.

Graham tallied his first goal, set up nicely by Alex Shaffer. Next to light the lamp was Joe McManus, assisted by Danny Donovan and Tim Mullen. Graham scored again, this time unassisted as the period ended.

Graham notched his third goal, an unassisted score, at the 7:43 mark of the second period. Somerville was able to sneak by the Quincy defense in the second with some quick forwards breaking in along the boards.

In the third, the Quincy squad picked up the pace, sending three shots into the cage. Brian Martin netted an unassisted goal, followed by a classic pass from Mike Tetreault to Tony Benigni. Mike Flaherty finished up the scoring with a second to go with an unassisted blast by the Somerville goaltender.

Hard hitting Chris Sheehan monitored the blue line, keeping the Somerville forwards back. Paul McLean, Jonathan O'Conno, Brendan Linnane and Mike Faherty contributed to the victory with outstanding play all over the ice.

Quincy goaltender Ryan Barter turned away a number of Somerville shots after they got by the Quincy defense on a couple of occasions.

Squirt B's Win, 5-0

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt B's opened their Greater Boston League season with an impressive 5-0 victory over perennial powerhouse Tri-County.

Andrew (General) Patten opened the scoring, assisted by (Dandy) Andy McDonough and Pat (The Ghost) Casper. (Dangerous) Dennis Rugg ticked the twine twice for the B's, assisted by Billy (The Kid) Cox and Casper. Patten lit the lamp again for a 4-0 lead and Matt Haskins closed out the scoring with an unassisted goal.

Forwards Dan (The Man) Durocher, Paul (The Powerhouse) Lennon and George (Snowman) Snowling also peppered the Tri-County goaltenders with shots all game long.

Goaltender Patrick (Toaster) Maloney recorded the shutout, turning away every Tri-County scoring attempt. Lending Maloney a hand on defense were Gino Nazarro, Paul (Graz) Grazioso, Myles (The Curse) Clancy and Joey (Roughneck) Norris.

Coaching the Squirt B's this season is Frank Casper.

Mite A's Win, 5-2

Mike McKeon netted two goals as the the Quincy Mite A team opened its season with a 5-2 win over Somerville.

Brittany Lomand scored the Mite A's first goal unassisted. Also lighting the lamp were Matt Giordani and Chris Rooney, while Matt Jones and Matt Tobin both added an assist.

In his first win as a Mite A goaltender, Frankie Sorrento was strong between the pipes for Quincy.

Also playing well for the winners were Jonathan Conso, Patrick Devlin, Andy Donovan and Paul Fasoli.

Other key contributors included Jim Fitzpatrick, Mike Giordani, Evan and Jessica Harrington and Raymond Marchand.

Coaching the Mite A's this season are Jim Conso and Jim Donovan.

HOW TIMES HAVE CHANGED

Traditionally, drivers have been urged to grip the steering wheels of their cars at the "ten" and "two" positions, with the numbers referring to the spots they occupy on the face of a clock. However, one look at today's steering wheels reveals that this hand positioning is no longer appropriate. Over the past 50 years or so, the average height of the driver's seat has dropped fifteen to nineteen inches, while the steering wheel has been lowered twelve to fourteen inches. The cutouts to either side of the hub of the steering wheel now indicate that the left hand should be positioned between 7 and 9 o'clock, while the right hand should be placed between 3 and 5. This lowered positioning is easier on the shoulders and helps reduce fatigue. The revised grip also keeps the hands away from the center of the wheel so they will not be thrust into the face by airbag deployment.

HINT: Grip the steering wheel at the positions indicated above, with the palms facing each other, canted about 45 degrees.

Call 843-1550, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for an appointment if your car is showing signs of any problem, especially the steering system . . . delay could be dangerous. SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"He had a lot of courage" . . . It is a commendable compliment; a fine tribute at any time . . .before, during or after the final moment of life.

Today, perhaps more than at any other time, it takes a lot of courage to bear witness to our beliefs, to avoid compromise when conscience says we must. It takes courage at times to agree. And it takes courage to disagree when disagree we must.

I like this quote by Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Whatever you do, you need courage. Whatever course you decide upon, there Is always someone to tell you - "You are wrong." There are always difficulties arising which tempt you to believe that your critics are right- To map out a course of action and follow it to an end, requires some of the same courage which a soldier needs. Peace has Its victories, but it takes brave men to win them."

Record 120 Golfers Take Part In Fr. Heery Memorial Tournament

Sacred Heart Parish in North Quincy recently held its annual Golf Tournament fundraiser at the Presidents Golf Course.

This year's tournament was dedicated in memory of Fr. Cornelius J. Heery, pastor of Sacred Heart for 20 years until his sudden death in January. Fr. Heery began the tournament four years ago and participated in it each year.

A record number of 120 players took to the course for the Florida-style scramble. Allie Shaughnessy scored a hole-in-one on the 18th hole. Due to the generosity of Bill Foley at Foley Chrysler Plymouth in Quincy, Shaughnessy had several prizes to choose from.

Over $1,100 in prize money was awarded and each player received a commemorative polo shirt through the generosity of Dan Flynn of Daniel J. Flynn & Company.

Playing on the winning team, which shot 13 under par, were Walter Hannon Sr., Walter Hannon Jr., Allie Shaughnessy and Jeff Davidson. In second place at 12 under par, were Bill Foley Jr., Doug Olson, John Foley and Paul Daley.

The men's longest drive award was won by Gary Fitzgerald and the woman's longest drive award was won by Marilyn Nester.

Finishing last this year was the team of Mark Carey, Tom Clasby, Steve Healy and Fr. Jim DiPerri.

All proceeds from the tournament benefit Sacred Heart Parish. Serving as the tournament committee were Fr. Jack O'Brien, Fr. David White, Tom Koch, Paul Hines, Bill Foley, Mal Nester, Dan Flynn, Mark Carey and Michael Burke.

The 36 sponsors of the tournament included: John J. Mulvey & Sons Plastering, Mayor James Sheets, The Quincy City Club, The Quincy Sun, Eric and Claudette O'Brien, Almquist Flowerland, Barry's Deli, LB Franz Services, Doran & Horrigan Insurance, Paul J. Rogan Company, Burke's Seafood, Fitzpatrick Roofing Contractors, Curry Hardware, Financial Data Services, Atty. David P. Mahoney, Atty. Paul J. Hines, and PMT Electric.

Other sponsors included: Keohane Funeral Homes, Patrick J. Kennedy & Sons, Kid's Connection, National Window Cleaning Services, The Ink Spot Flowers by Helen, The Healy Company, North Quincy Knights of Columbus, The Adams Inn, Jim Hines Plumbing & Heating, David J. Donaghue Insurance, Anchor Janitorial Services, Quincy Police Superior Officers Association, Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Bellotti.

Fitcorp, High Schools Enter Partnership

Fitcorp will enter into a partnership with Quincy High School and North Quincy High School at a ceremony Saturday at 11 a.m. at the Fitcorp Office, One Enterprise Dr., North Quincy.

The partnership with the two high schools focuses on helping students become more knowledgeable about wellness and careers represented by the staff at Fitcorp. Also, the academic curricula will be enhanced by application of the services offered by members of Fitcorp.

Fitcorp has donated fitness equipment for high school use to upgrade and enhance fitness and wellness opportunities for students and staff. Fitcorp will also provide speakers for high school programs concerning the themes of wellness and fitness, and will be a resource for career exploration and health education.

Since 1979, Fitcorp has executed an effective program for integrating fitness and health promotion into corporate culture. At its seven urban and suburban locations, Fitcorp provides trained health and fitness specialists, health promotion programming, and state-of-the-art fitness centers.

St. John's Basketball League Registration Saturday, Sunday

To Harriet Goldman of Quincy, Vincent A. DiRusso of Quincy and the City of Quincy all within the County of Norfolk and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Joan Wechsler of 148 Puritan Drive, Quincy, in the County of Norfolk representing that she holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County and briefly described as follows: A certain parcel of land, in Quincy, Norfolk County, Massachusetts said to contain 1.33 acres of land, more or less, as outlined on a Map made by E.W. Branch in 1907, as published by the said Branch in a Map showing the area of the property in Quincy which may more particularly be described as follows:

Beginning at the Northeast corner of the land, now or formerly of one McGrath, on Douglas Street (the portion of which is now known as Springfield Street) in West Quincy, and running Westerly 190 feet on the land, now or formerly of said McGrath, then Northerly by the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, to the Quincy Quarries Company Railroad, thence from that point northwesterly on the land, nor or formerly J.S. Swingle, then Northeasterly on the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, then Southeasterly on the land, now or formerly of J.S. Swingle, to the Quincy Quarries Railroad, then Easterly to Douglas Street, then via Douglas Street (the portion of which is now known as Springfield Street) to the point of beginning, the same lot being Lot No. 5 on a map of October 1904, as made by H.T. Whitman, C.E., together with the building or buildings thereon, with an exclusive right to all the privileges connected with the well that attaches to the land sold at the present time setting forth that she desire that all of said land my be sold at private sale for not less than $350,000 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham, 649 High St., P.O. Box 269, Dedham, MA 02027-0269 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the thirtieth day of October 1996, the return day of this citation.

Your Social Security

Retiring From Your Own Business?

By CAROL BOYLE

Are you in this picture? You own and operate a business. You're at retirement age and the golf course looks more inviting every day. You don't want to sell the business. Perhaps you could put it in a family member's name. You would continue working, but not work as much. That way you could spend more time on the course and collect Social Security benefits at the same time.

Before you consider such a plan, you should talk with your local Social Security office. We'll need to know whether you'll be completely retired or whether you plan to have some involvement in the business. To get all of your Social Security benefits, you must retire, or at least reduce the extent of your involvement in the business to match any reduction in your reported earnings.

When you work for wages, it's easy to determine whether you're retired. Your earnings tell the whole story. But when you work in a business that you or your family owns, or you're an officer in a corporation, it's not that simple. Because you could be in a position to control the amount of earnings reported in your name, you may need to furnish us with additional information—such as tax returns or corporate records—when you file your application, or when you file your tax return (if later). This will help us decide whether you have reduced your services in the business to match the reduction in your income. You cannot simply pay yourself a smaller salary to stay under Social Security's earnings limits. Your earnings must match the work you do.

When you continue to receive compensation, we consider the work you performed and the amount you earned while working and compare it with your work and earnings after "retirement." We determine the reasonable value of the services you perform for the business, based on the time spent and the nature of the services, and compare it to the income you receive. If the value of your services exceeds your income, we determine a dollar amount for those services and count it against Social Security's annual earnings limits.

The annual earnings limit is the amount you can earn at a certain age before your benefits are reduced. Here's how the reduction is figured: If you're under age 65, your 1996 benefits are reduced by $1 for every $2 you earn over $8,280. If you're age 65-69, your benefits are reduced $1 for every $3 you earn over $12,500. There's no earnings limit after you reach age 70.

Social Security isn't trying to tell you when to retire or how to run your business. We're merely encouraging you to check with us before filing for retirement benefits to make sure you are aware of the documentation you'll need for the interview. We also want to remind you that you have to "retire" to collect "retirement" benefits — or at least significantly reduce your involvement in the business and keep your earnings within the income limit. That will permit us to pay some or all of your Social Security benefits.

When you decide to retire, call our toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213, to make an appointment to talk with a Social Security representative. Our lines are busiest early in the week and early in the month, so if your business can wait, it's best to call at other times.

(Carol Boyle is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

UNICEF Seeks Children For Halloween Fundraiser

UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund) is seeking Quincy children and families interested in collecting contributions for the 46th annual "Trick-or-Treat for UNICEF" on Halloween, Thursday, Oct. 31.

Funds raised will benefit UNICEF programs around the world. The organization is hoping to raise more than $270,000 in New England this year to help care for the world's neediest children.

Collection boxes and education materials are available by calling UNICEF/New England at 277-3334 or stopping by its office at 1330 Beacon St., Suite 355, Brookline.

Seaside Group Seeks Compromise On Dance

(Cont'd from Page 1)

Seppala said is in agreement with O'Brien about limiting the dance to the older students, is away until Friday and could not be reached for comment.

Seppala said he looks forward to meeting with both men.

"I want to try to compromise with Mr. O'Brien and Fr. DeVeer," he said.

Students are charged $4 to attend the dance, and proceeds are earmarked for the Seaside Group's food pantry. However, various expenditures, including the cost of paying a disc jockey to provide entertainment, has made it difficult for the group to raise funds.

"I literally break even," said Seppala.

Of the 75 to 80 students who attend the dance, only a small handful are in Grades 7 and 8, Seppala added. He said because most of the funds raised come from students in Grades 4-6, the dance may have to be canceled altogether if it is limited to the oldest students.

Seppala said if that happens, he will try to come up with an idea for another fund-raiser for the food pantry. He added, however, that his main concern now is providing an event for the younger children to enjoy.

"At this point, it's not the fund-raising," he said. "It's something for the kids."

Regarding the concerns that have been raised, Seppala said it is only natural for children to want nice clothes and if there were no dance, they would want them for some other reason. As far as the age difference, he said the older students tend to stay at one side of the room and the younger children on the other, so there is very little interaction.

On the subject of teasing, Seppala said, "My wife works at the school and she's never seen it. She's never heard it."

Jean Kennedy, treasurer of the Seaside Group, said 38 parents and 53 children have signed a petition to keep the dances as they are. She also said she was disturbed by the fact that some parents have approached O'Brien and DeVeer with their concerns.

"I personally haven't heard any complaints from parents," she said. "Why don't they come to us at Seaside? We're the ones running the dance."

Kennedy agreed with Seppala on the clothing and age gap issues and said if teasing is occurring at Snug Harbor, O'Brien should hold a student forum letting the children know the dance will be canceled if such actions continue.

Ultimately, Kennedy said, she thinks of the monthly event as simply something that is enjoyable for the students.

Total Registration Now At 51,000

86% Voter Turnout Forecast

City Clerk Joseph Shea is forecasting an 86 percent Quincy voter turnout at next Tuesday's presidential-state election.

The city's registered voters now total exactly 51,000--a gain of 3,311 since the primary elections in September.

Shea said he is basing his turnout prediction on the voter registration increase "and the general feeling that things seem to be busier than usual and interest is growing as the election draws near."

Four years ago, 85 percent of the city's then 48,208 registered voters cast ballots as Bill Clinton carried the city over incumbent George Bush, 18,879 to 12,296.

This will be the second time Quincy voters will use the new optical scan voting machines which replaced the troublesome punch-card method.

The new system speeds up both the voting and the counting by computer, leading Shea to estimate: "We should have it all wrapped up election night by 9:45 p.m."

The races for president, U.S. Senate and the vacant 10th Congressional District seat will be the main focus for Quincy voters with local interest also in the Norfolk County treasurer fight.

Downtown Parking To Be Expanded

Concourse Will Be A 'City Street,' Not A Highway

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The planned Quincy Center Concourse will be a pedestrian-friendly city street rather than a major highway, officials said Tuesday.

In addition, the $8.6 million roadway being funded by federal and state monies, which is expected to be completed by 1999, will result in a significant increase in downtown parking spaces, they said.

Quincy Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton and Anthony Lionetta of Earth Tech Infrastructure Services made their comments this week before members of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Colton said one major component of the concourse plans calls for the roadway to run one way westbound from Mechanic Street to Hancock Street. Although officials had discussed the possibility of making it run two ways, he noted, they decided that would not be the most feasible choice.

"The decision was made to make it a city street, not a highway," he said.

Colton said the decision was based largely on the fact that the concourse is supposed to help revitalization of the downtown by making it easier for people to travel into Quincy Center, rather than having them simply drive through it. Although traffic improvement is one aspect of the plan, he said, the well-being of the downtown is the priority.

"With this plan, the concourse kind of fits Quincy Center," added Lionetta.

The concourse will be completed in two phases: Burgin Parkway to the Parkingway and the Parkingway to Southern Artery. The so-called "east link" of the roadway, or the project's second phase, recently received the approval of the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) formed by Mayor James Sheets to provide a liaison between the community and project officials, Colton said.

Colton said community input is still crucial to the timely completion of the project and praised the CAC and other involved individuals for their assistance.

One issue that came up at Tuesday's meeting was the lack of parking spaces in the downtown. Paul Sturman of Frantic Framers pointed out that while it is important that access to Quincy Center be improved, having not enough parking could make that improvement a moot point.

Mounted Police Saddle Up Nov. 18

The city is in the process of purchasing three horses for a mounted police unit that will hit the streets of Quincy Nov. 18.

Mayor James Sheets and Lt. Norm Goyette of the Quincy Police Department said the horses will be bought from the Boston Police Department at a pricetag of $1,000 apiece. Goyette said the horses were to be given a physical examination this week before the sale was finalized.

Sheets said the city already has spent about $50,000 for the transportation and care of the horses as well as additional equipment. The horses will be housed at the St. Moritz Stable in West Quincy, he added.

The three horses and their riders, Officers Gerard Nichol, John Sullivan and Bruce Tait are currently attending school at the Boston Police Stables, according to Sheets.

The mayor said the mounted unit will give the city "a new dimension" in its ability to fight crime. He added that it will be a fine complement to other police department weapons including cruisers, motorcycles, mountain bikes and the K-9 unit.

"In many ways, the mounted police unit makes us a full-service department," said Sheets.

Goyette agreed, saying the horses will not only be helpful in wooded areas and other locations that are hard

Registered Voters In City Now 51,000

Quincy now has 51,000 registered voters, the fifth highest in the city's history, reports City Clerk Joseph Shea. This is an increase of 3,311 since the primary elections last month.

The breakdown:

Democrats: 28,020.
Republicans: 7,531.
Unenrolled: 15, 245.
Libertarian: 134.
Reform Party: 55.
Conservative: 10.
Socialist: 4.
Green Party: 1.

Most of the 3,311 who registered since the primary election did so as unenrolled: 1,684. Registering as Democrats were 1,197 and as Republicans, 333.

The largest number of registered voters in Quincy was 51,908 in 1980. That year, Republican Ronald Reagan carried Quincy over incumbent Democrat Jimmy Carter by a slim 61-vote margin. The vote was 18,038 to 17,977. The turnout was 81.2 percent.

Second highest number of registered voters was in 1988 with 51,537. Democrat Michael Dukakis carried Quincy over Republican George Bush 20,911 to 18,403, with 79.79 percent of the registered voters going to the polls.

There were 51,380 voters in 1976 and 51,193 in 1972.

Shea notes that voter figures fluctuate, dropping as residents move or die and then picking up during Presidential election years.

Benefit Concert Nov. 10 For Veterans' Shelter

A benefit concert for the planned veterans' shelter on Burgin Parkway in Quincy will be held Sunday, Nov. 10 from 5 p.m. to midnight at Spotlights in Weymouth.

Several local acts, including Clutch Grabwell, Morris, Bellevue Cadillac, Shy Tuna, Tidal Wave and others will perform to raise funds for the shelter to be operated by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, which also runs the homeless shelter Father Bill's Place.

Tickets are $5 and may be purchased at the Spotlights box office, Rtes. 18 and 53 in Weymouth. They may also be purchased at the door Nov. 10.

to maneuver around but will also help provide better relations with the public.

"I think they'll be a great community draw," he said. "The horses will fit right in."

The mayor's office, police department, Quincy School Department and Quirk Auto Dealerships also will be sponsoring a "Name That Horse Contest." Three Quincy elementary school children who choose the names of the horses each will receive a new bicycle from Quirk Auto.

Entries must be received no later than Nov. 8 and can be mailed to: Chief Francis E. Mullen, Quincy Police Department, One Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169 RE: Horse Contest. Winners will be announced Nov. 11 and prizes will be awarded during a ceremony Nov. 15 at 3:30 p.m. at McIntyre Mall.

'Labor Of Love' Says Site Coordinator

Volunteers From Kentucky Assisting Local Flood Victims

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A group of 18 flood relief volunteer workers from Kentucky has been working with local emergency management and other officials helping residents whose homes were flooded last week.

The volunteers from Lexington, KY, who have assisted residents on LaFayette St. and Sheldon Rd., plan to continue their efforts for another three weeks or longer.

What motivates these volunteers to help complete strangers more than 1,000 miles from their Lexington, KY homes?

"We're just trying to follow Jesus' example of helping our fellow man and to be good Samaritans," said Michael Klein, a site coordinator for the Kentucky Disaster Relief group.

This is the fourth relief effort the volunteers have responded to this year. In February, they helped flood victims in West Virginia. In June, they headed to Bullet County, KY after a tornado touched down there. And just last month, the group assisted folks in Jacksonville, N.C. which was pounded by Hurricane Fran.

"It's a labor of love," Klein explains. "It's a ministry. We want to help people who have had a great loss in their lives and help them get back on their feet."

That's what some flood victims in Quincy are finding out.

Since arriving in the city on Saturday, the volunteers have cleaned out 10 basements on LaFayette St. Klein said Sheldon Rd. was next on their list, perhaps as early as Tuesday.

The volunteers are focusing on cleaning and sanitizing basements which have been contaminated with raw sewage.

"We're sanitizing these basements where raw sewage got in. The walls, floors and any furniture. (Sewage) is so dangerous when it's in the homes. You can get mold and fungus that can grow and that mold can get in someone's lungs.

"That's why it's important to sanitize homes--to kill the mold," Klein said.

To sanitize contaminated basements, Klein tells homeowners to hose down the sewage and pump out the basement. Next, the area should be completely sanitized using a 2:1 mixture of chlorine bleach and water. Then the area should be air dried.

Flood victims are coping with more than just physical damage to their homes, Klein said.

"Some people are having a tough time emotionally. Yesterday (Monday), we visited a woman whose home had been flooded out for a second time. She lost just about everything. She's under quite a bit of stress."

The relief workers have been welcomed to Quincy with open arms. Neighbors on LaFayette St. treated the workers to a pasta dinner Monday night. "The

Sunbeams

Remembering Ruth Gordon

Ruth Gordon never forgot Quincy.
And Quincy hasn't forgotten her. That's the way it should be.

The Quincy Historical Society is celebrating the 100th anniversary of her Wollaston birth with an exhibit tribute and recollections by speakers who knew her.

RUTH GORDON

She died suddenly at her Martha's Vineyard home in August, 1985, at age 88. A young, 88. I spoke with her just the week before and she was gung-ho with plans to make another movie, TV guest spots and other activities. You didn't mention the words rocking chair to her.

I was stunned to hear of her death exactly seven days later. And saddened because we had become good friends.

Our friendship began in 1968 when I started The Quincy Sun and sent a copy of the first issue to her at her Central Park South apartment in New York City.

I knew she loved Quincy and I thought she might be interested in knowing there was a new newspaper in her hometown. She wrote and thanked me. And she was on the mailing list for the next 17 years.

She really read the paper.

The Burgin Platner Insurance Agency was running "Remember When?" ads with old photos of Quincy from the Crane Public Library collection back then. She called to say: "I love those old scenes. They bring back fond memories."

I'm sure she would have loved Tom Galvin's old postcards now running in The Sun.

Another time she called to say: "I see that your Quincy Sun youth hockey team got beat by Burgin Platner." (I knew for sure then that she was reading everything in the Sun.)

There were many calls down through the years, keeping me up to date on what she was doing. Like guest spots on Taxi, a Super Bowl commercial, the Bob Newhart Show, etc.

And there were many letters. But her handwriting was as hard to read as a doctor's prescription. I had to pass them around to the staff to help me decipher them.

Once she called to say: "Next time you're over at City Hall, will you check on my birth certificate? It's getting along in years. See if it is wearing well." (Her birth certificate was getting along in years--not her.)

In 1979 she invited me to attend the 65th reunion of her Quincy High School class of 1914--the famed "worst class" so dubbed by a teacher because not one of them made the honor roll.

Arthur Tobin who was then mayor and I went up to the Neighborhood Club. And were joined by former Mayor Tom Burgin who was around her age.

Tobin and I were fascinated as she and Burgin got to reminiscing about their early days. They were remembering people they knew and things they did a half century before as if it were yesterday. Ruth was rattling off first and last names of people and the color of the houses they lived in and the number on their door.

Work on the Ruth Gordon amphitheater which had been started during Mayor Joseph LaRaia's administration was continuing under Tobin. He asked if she would like to go down and see it. "No," she declined. "I will see it when it is finished." (Frank McCauley was mayor when it was finally completed.)

The class was holding its reunions annually at the time and Ruth came back to attend most of them. But in 1984 she informed classmates she would be in Spain making a movie and hoped they might hold the reunion a little later that year. But it was held in June, as usual.

She was miffed about that and called me and said: "The stinkers!"

That was followed by a letter: "They could have picked a different date. If the Neighborhood Club wasn't available on another date, we could have brown-bagged it somewhere else. The Class of 1914 can go sit on a tack."

But she loved her classmates and she got over it. Later she told me: "I didn't care. I was off making lots of money."

Incidentally, that so-called "worst class" became a most successful one. In addition to Ruth, the class included: Admiral Giles Stedman, who later become vice president of United States Lines; Andrew Deane, vice president of United States Steel; Ernest Gellotte, a professor at MIT; Ted Rollins, a dentist; Harry Burr, the class president who become a Wollaston banker; Francis Duggan of the Duggan Brothers auto agency and others who made it locally.

As for no one making the honor roll, Burr once told me: "We were having too much fun." (Could be a lesson there, too. Maybe sometimes it takes a little time for youth to find itself.)

I got a call from Ruth in Martha's Vineyard in April, 1983: "Henry, I just read Descent From Glory. It's the finest modern book I've read. Would you check the Crane Library and see if they have copies?"

I checked with Warren Watson who was then the director. Yes, they had four copies but all four were in circulation. I called Ruth back.

"Okay," she said. "I am going to send you two copies. Would you present them to the library for me?" I said 'sure'."

When the books arrived there was a letter with them. It gives you an idea of how she felt about Quincy.

"Dear Thomas Crane Library:

"Please accept these two copies of Descent From Glory which I have asked my friend Henry Bosworth to deliver to you. I think it is the finest modern book I've read.

"I hope everybody in Quincy will read it. It's not only about the great John and Abigail Adams and Louisa and John Quincy Adams and Charles Francis and Henry and Brooks Adams, it's about all of us New Englanders and how hard it is to live our lives and make it come out right.

"Dear Thomas Crane Library, you meant a lot to me in my teens. I carried home as many books as I could get on the library card. A big square bound Theater Magazine. Oh! how heavy. I was going to be an actress. An Isben play; a Yeats play. I was going to be an actress.

"I hope Descent From Glory will bring pleasure and courage to all who read it. We need it."

The author, Paul Nagel, who was director of the Virginia Historical Society, happened to be in Quincy at the time and was there at the library when I presented the books to Watson. It made his day.

In November, 1984, the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater was finally completed with LaRaia then a city councillor and chairman of the South Shore Cultural Commission again having a role in it. It was ready for the re-dedication ceremony and Mayor McCauley proclaimed Nov. 10 "Ruth Gordon Day."

Ruth gave a great performance that day, wowing the large crowd. Standing on the stage of the amphitheater, she had the audience in the palm of her hand.

"I am the first person in my family to have a theater named for her," she noted. "It took a long time. I started toward this 88 years, 11 days and five a half hours ago. I never face facts. I am a slow starter but I get there."

Recalling that her father, Clinton Jones, a seaman, wanted her to become a physical education teacher, she said:

"But I hated all those serge bloomers and dumbbells and Indian clubs. I wanted to do something a little more sexy than that."

She recalled getting on the train at the old Wollaston station in 1915 heading for New York City with dreams of becoming an actress. She had a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, her father's old spyglass and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset for security.

"Papa said I could hock it (the spyglass) if I needed the money," she said. "He said if you're going to be an actress you'll be in and out of hock shops all your life.

"Well, I hocked plenty of things but never that spyglass. The corset wore out. But you know what didn't wear out? Me! And I still have the $50."

She unwrapped a silver baby cup engraved with the name Ruth Gordon Jones. It was given to her by Dr. Alexander Gordon who delivered her at 41 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston, the morning of Oct. 30, 1896. He was pleased to learn her middle name was to be Gordon, after him.

She also announced she was presenting the cup to the Historical Society. And that she planned to return to Quincy the following year for "An Evening With Ruth Gordon" at the amphitheater.

She was so happy that day and a little later wrote to tell me what it meant to her:

"I knew the paper would handle it great but it was greater than great. It included everything. Everything!

"I think it was the best day of my life.

"It was the perfect day--a day on which Quincy seemed to be a dream world all of its own. I thought we all took off and went somewhere else. We went somewhere where there was no trouble, or worry, or mean stuff. We all floated off where it all went right.

"I know the work that went into making it happen. Oh, my!"

Sadly, that was her final visit home. She never got back for that "Evening With Ruth Gordon."

In April, 1985 I got a call from her from the Vineyard: "There's a Charles Flagg who wants to take a photo of me. He says he works for you. Is he your photographer?"

I told her he was and that I had asked him to stop by and see her next time he was on the Vineyard.

"Okay," she said. "I've got a busy schedule but I

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1940's view of the ART Theater that was located at 1373 Hancock St. in Quincy Square for almost 40 years. Originally opened as the Alhambra Auditorium around 1925, it was known simply as the Alhambra until the name was changed to the ART at the end of World War II. ART was an acronym for Alhambra Recreation Theater. The popular 700 seat movie theater was closed in the early 1960's when this site became part of the Della Chiesa parking lot. Today the Photo Quick shop is just to the right of this picture and the old theater's box office would be in the middle of the road which runs under and around the base of Stop & Shop's headquarters which was built on the parking lot. The crosswalk in the foreground is still there.

Keep The Independence Ave. T Gate Closed

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Here we go again.

The homeowners of Penn's Hill have, for 20 years, resisted efforts by Braintree and other South Shore communities to open the gate on Independence Avenue. The negative impact upon the area was of little concern to commuters seeking convenient access.

Convenience is the issue once again, the convenience of the newly-arrived "young professionals," stopping off, temporarily, on their way to better things. The fact that Penn's Hill will be turned into a parking lot by South Shore commuters doesn't bother these people. Why should it? They plan to be gone shortly. Most have no stake in a home or the neighborhood.

Traffic? Who cares? They can walk to the gate. That children and the elderly are put at risk by the influx of out-of-town commuters, late for work or rushing home, matters not when it comes to their convenience.

Another point: the property west of Independence Avenue, from the Braintree line to Federal Avenue, is zoned industrial. This means that a developer could purchase and package existing properties and build apartments, luxury or low-income, as the case may be, further adding to existing traffic and parking problems.

Finally, there is the assurance that crime and criminals will flow out of the station and into our poorly-lit neighborhood. Increasing numbers of housebreaks, assaults, and stolen cars will be the least of our problems when the word gets out. Ride out on the T. Ride home in a car.

When it happens, and if the gate is opened, the "young professionals" will flee to another area, there to regale their new acquintances with horror stories about the Penn's Hill they abandoned. We who have homes and families will be left to survey the wreckage.

I commuted to Cambridge by T for 20 years. I took the bus to Quincy station with few problems because my home, family and neighborhood were more important to me than the convenience of an open gate.

Question 1: 'A Very Reasonable Law'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We recently read the Voter's Booklet from the Secretary of State's office with information about Question 1. We have decided to support Question 1 on Nov. 5.

Question 1 is a very reasonable law that would end two specific cruelties that are inflicted on wildlife in the name of sport, or in the case of trapping, in the name of profit. Hunters do not need to use packs of hounds to chase down and tree black bears before shooting them at point-blank range. Is this their idea of fair chase and good sportsmanship? And leghold traps should have been outlawed years ago. There are humane alternatives such as box traps which do not injure the animals.

We can see why the hunters and trappers are so upset about Question 1. For years they have had control of wildlife because they are guaranteed a majority of the seats on the Fisheries and Wildlife Board which sets wildlife policy for all animals and for all of us. This is not fair and Question 1 will correct the situation.

Many people assume that non-partisan wildlife professionals are determining wildlife policy. They are not. In fact, professionals of that caliber cannot even be considered for five of the seven seats on the Board of Fisheries and Wildlife if they haven't held a sporting license for the past five years.

The supporters of Question 1 can count on two "yes" votes from this household. It's the human thing to do.

Seeks 'Eviction' Of White House Tenant

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I have part ownership of a piece of real estate in Washington, D.C., although I do not reside there. The present occupant is coming to the end of his four-year lease, but he has forfeited his right to a renewal because of conduct unbecoming to a tenant.

Something can be done. On Nov. 5, by a vote of the rightful owners of this historic property (1600 Pennsylvania Ave., otherwise known as the White House), the present tenant would be evicted.

We will then have a chance to lease our property for the next four years to someone who will treat it, and the office it represents, with more respect.

City Plans For Ruth Gordon Day

By PAUL HAROLD

Oct. 31 - Nov. 6
1946
50 Years Ago

Plans were announced this week for "Ruth Gordon Day" in the city for Nov. 19, sponsored by the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and the Quincy High School Class of 1914.

The event would coincide with the pre-Broadway production of "Years Ago," written by Gordon and based on her early life in Wollaston and efforts to go on the stage. It was playing at the Copley Theater in Boston.

Of the play she said, "It has been in the back of my mind for years. My father was such a wonderful man I knew he would made an equally wonderful charter."

RED FEATHER CAMPAIGN EXTENDED

The city's Red Feather drive fell $7,500 short of its 1946 quota of $130,000, prompting organizers to extend the campaign until Nov. 8.

The shortfall came despite last minute pledges by phone of over $600 and an anticipated $500 contribution from the Squantum Naval base and repair yard.

Philip Barker, general chairman, said the first report banquet would be held at Cliveden Hall.

PRICE RECORDS TO NATIONAL ARCHIVES

Z. Cranston Smith, chairman of the Quincy Price Control Board said when the office officially closed in December, the records would be sent to the National Archives in Washington. Quincy's were one of only 17 boards nationwide whose records would be part of the permanent records.

The Quincy board had operated for four years, mostly with volunteers. It was one of 59 boards in New England ordered to be closed. A regional board would continue to operate mostly to handle the sugar rations and a small number of other items.

QUINCY-ISMS

Quincy contributed to the national Republican landslide victory, of historic proportions. It gave Robert Bradford a two-to-one margin over incumbent Maurice Tobin for governor and a two and a half to one margin to Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. for U.S. Senate over incumbent David Walsh. One incumbent returned was Republican State Senator John McKay of Quincy who received 18,776 over Democratic City Councillor Carl Anderson. . . Mrs. Elsa Morgan of Brackett St., Squantum, began work as the city's first female police officer. Her assignments were juveniles, non support cases and morals cases. . . A crowd of 10,000 was expected at Veterans Memorial Stadium for the 10th year rivalry between the football teams of North Quincy and Milton. . . Scotty Holmes and his 12-piece orchestra played at the Quincy Armory. Admission was 60 cents. . . Lawrence Maibach of Sterling St. received his Eagle Scout award from Troop 11 at St. Chrysostom's. . . At a meeting at the Quincy Central Labor Council, Constanza Paganano, president of the Granite Cutters' International called for the defeat of Atty. General Clarence Barnes' referendum, requiring financial disclosure by unions. Also speaking against were John Murphy, president of the Quincy local of the street car operators; Joseph Sullivan, president of the Quincy local of the meat cutters and Edward Wyldes, president of the central labor council. . . Another referendum would allow for women to serve on juries in Massachusetts. . . Mrs. Colombo Cerubini was chairman of the silver tea for the Webster PTA. . . Robert O'Brien of Island Ave. married Mary Dolan of Sea St. at Most Blessed Sacrament Church. . . Uno Wall presided at the local chapter of Help Finland, Inc. meeting at the W. Quincy Congregational Church. . . Balfour Day was celebrated by the city's Jewish community under the leadership of Rabbi Jacob Mann, Lester Glasser, president of the Quincy Zionists and Mrs. Maurice Zack, president of the Quincy Hadassah. . . Guy Faiella chaired the Bradford for Governor rally at the Webster School. . . Alley McInnis was president of the Coddington School PTA with Mrs. Arthur Rapport, vice president; Mrs. Munroe MacLean, treasurer; and Mrs. Frank Keefe, secretary. . . The West Quincy Evangelical Lutheran Church celebrated its 50th anniversary. Rev. Martin Hallnen was pastor. . . Atlas Market was operating on Hancock St. opposite Remicks. Granite Public Market was on Franklin St. and the Mohican Market and bakery was on Chestnut St. . . Albert Everett, chief clerk of the paint department at the shipyard, was cited for not having been late for work for 46 years. . . Police Chief John Avery hosted five Catholic bishops at his Upland Road home.

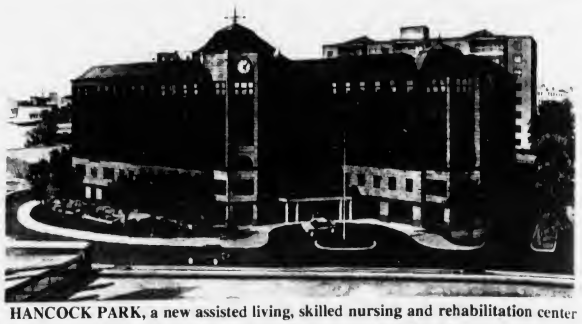
Hancock Park To Hold Open House Nov. 16-17



HANCOCK PARK, a new assisted living, skilled nursing and rehabilitation center located in Quincy will hold an open house Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 16 and 17 from noon to 4 p.m. The facility will serve 21 communities on the South Shore by offering assisted living apartments, rehabilitation services, skilled nursing care and an adult day health program all under one roof.

Hancock Park, the new $9 million healthcare and assisted living community visible for nearly a year from cars driving along the Burgin Parkway, will hold a two-day public open house Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 16 and 17 from noon to 4 p.m.

The six-story, 110,000-square-foot facility will house a 142-bed rehabilitation and nursing center, 40 assisted living apartments and an adult day health center offering a host of services to the area's seniors. The project is being developed and managed by Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group of Norwell, a family-owned company which operates senior housing complexes, nursing homes and other facilities for the elderly throughout the South Shore.

"What makes Hancock park unique is that we have a nursing home, rehabilitation center, assisted living center and a daytime senior health center all in one building," said Paul Casale Jr., vice president and treasurer of the Welch group.

Richard Welch, president of Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, said the opening of Hancock Park marks the long-awaited return to the roots of his family's healthcare business, which spans three generations.

"Our grandmother worked as a home health nurse in Quincy in the 1930's, specializing in serving elderly people in her home," Welch said. "Late she opened one of the city's first nursing homes. So the opening of Hancock Park represents a kind of homecoming for us," he added.

Hancock Park is the downtown area's first major building in years. When the project was announced in 1993, it was hailed by city officials as the spark they needed to begin revitalizing Quincy Center.

The 142-bed rehabilitation and nursing center will offer a full range of healthcare services including post-acute short-term rehabilitation and complex medical care, long-term skilled nursing care, specialized care for patients with Alzheimer's disease, respite care and care for terminally ill patients. Amenities and support service areas will include resident dining rooms and lounges, recreation rooms and areas for physical and occupational therapies.

The assisted living residence, to be known as "Allerton House," will provide personalized care in an apartment setting for seniors who need minimal assistance with certain daily activities such as bathing, dressing and medication reminders, but who otherwise function independently. Residents will be offered three meals each day in a restaurant style dining room, and other support services such as housekeeping, laundry, assistance with personal care, 24-hour emergency response, wellness programs, social activities and transportation. Allerton House common areas will include a library, parlor, club room, exercise center a post office.

The adult day health center will provide services to local seniors during daytime hours, including medical services, counseling, nutritious meals and supervised social activities.

All residents of Hancock Park and their visitors, as well as residents of the nearby senior apartment complexes of Hancock Court and Hancock House, will be able to use an indoor "Main Street" area featuring a cafe, convenience store and beauty salon, and the outdoor patios and landscaped courtyard.

"By creating a campus with a continuum of care, Hancock Park will provide everything from outpatient services to 24-hour, skilled nursing care," said Welch. "We expect Hancock Park will be a landmark building in the city of Quincy, and an integral part of the community's fabric."

NQHS Students Compiling Oral History of WWII

Students at North Quincy High School, working along with several veterans from World War II, are compiling a vivid and informative oral history of the war entitled "Before the Colors Fade."

The video presentation will give a first-hand account of many of the battles that took place in the European and Pacific theaters of war from 1941 to 1945.

Retired Army Sgts. Donald E. MacDonald, John Donlon and Leonard will describe their experiences liberating occupied Europe from Fascist control. Also, William J. Sullivan, a retired captain for the Navy, will detail the landings in Pacific locations such as Leyte Gulf.

NQHS juniors Erin Tormey, Spiro Regas, Uyen Pham, Diane Yu, Nathaniel Scott, Bai Lan Zhu and Sharon Lee recently conducted and taped the interviews with the veterans. The students have been trained and helped in their historical research by practicum students Stephanie Schoen from Boston College and Dean Smith from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

The film will be used through the years in history classes at NQHS to help future generations understand the sacrifice and efforts made by World War II veterans.

The project is being conducted under the supervision of NQHS Social Studies Department Head Michael Hurley.

A CASE OF THE SHAKES

Tremors, shakes, quivers — whatever you call the involuntary motions suffered by thousands of people — can have any number of causes. The physiological explanation is an uncontrolled tightening and relaxing of groups of muscles attached to the skeleton. What causes that action may involve disorders as different as multiple sclerosis (MS) and lead poisoning. Tremors sometimes run in families, as well as in older patients with certain nerve disorders. Each type of tremor tends to have its own signature style. Senile tremors are small, quick movements of the hands and a rhythmic head nodding. These tremors typically worsen when the individual tries to make deliberate body movements. The pattern of increasing tremors during normal muscle use also may be part of familial tremors and those of MS patients. Lead poisoning tremors often occur in the lips.

P.S. Tremors sometimes increase when the individual gets excited or worried about how the shaking appears to others.

If you have any symptoms which concern you, no matter how insignificant they might be, call us for assistance. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I are here to help. 86% Voter Turnout Forecast For Nov. 5 state representative.

Quincy, a Democratic stronghold that temporarily stepped to the Republican side to give Ronald Reagan a scant 61-vote margin over Jimmy Carter in 1980, is expected to stay with the Clinton-Gore Democratic ticket over Republicans Bob Dole and Jack Kemp.

There are four other presidential tickets on the ballot: Ross Perot-Choate (Reform Party), Brown-Jorgensen (Libertarian), Hagelin-Tompkins (Natural Law) and Moorehead-LaRiva (Workers World).

Incumbent John Kerry and Gov. William Weld are locked in what could be the closest battle in the country for Kerry's U.S. Senate seat.

Susan Gallagher of Milton, a Wollaston real estate agent and former chairwoman of the Quincy Republican City Committee, is running for the seat as a Conservative Party candidate. Some observers think she could be the spoiler by siphoning off enough votes from either Weld or Kerry to give the other a sqeaker win.

Also running is Robert Stowe, a Natural Law party candidate from Cambridge.

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt of Quincy and Edward Teague, a Yarmouth state representative, are the major contenders for the 10th Congressional District seat being vacated by Gerry Studds who is retiring. Delahunt is a Democrat and Teague a Republican.

For nearly two weeks after the September primary, it appeared that the Democrat facing Teague in the November showdown was going to be Philip Johnston of Marshfield.

Johnston, in what appeared to be a big upset, was an apparent 266-vote winner in the primary. But because of a large number of blanks cast in communities using the punch-card system, Delahunt filed for a recount. The recount upheld Johnston's victory. Delahunt took it before a superior court judge who ruled Delahunt the winner. Johnston appealed to the state Supreme Judicial Court which had the final word and declared Delahunt the official winner.

Delahunt and Teague have been in a hard-hitting campaign since with attack ads coming out of both camps.

Delahunt, if he wins, would be the first Congressman from Quincy since John Quincy Adams.

Charles Laws is running for the Congressional seat as a Green Party candidate.

City Councillor Tim Cahill, a Democrat, is challenging Republican incumbent Robert Hall, Jr. of Needham for Norfolk County treasurer.

The only other contest on the ballot is Question 1, an initiative petition that would change the law regarding the trapping and hunting of animals.

Running unopposed are:

Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella, Jr., state Senator Michael Morrissey, state Reps. Michael Bellotti, Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano; Register of Probate Thomas Hughes and County Commissioners John Gillis and William O'Donnell.

Finnegan Receives Special Award

Impact Quincy Honors 10 Community Heroes

Impact Quincy, a grassroots coalition dedicated to the education on prevention of the abuse of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs and the encouragement of healthy alternatives, recently held its annual meeting at the Christ Episcopal Church in Quincy.

The meeting included the election of coalition co-chairpeople, leadership team at large members for the coming term, presentation of 10 Community Hero awards, and the presentation of a special award to Mitch Finnegan, former director of Impact Quincy, in recognition of his five years of service at Impact Quincy.

A potluck dinner was served and music was provided by students from North Quincy High School.

Community Hero awards recipients were honored for their selfless dedication to improving quality of life in the community, as well as for their contributions to the City of Quincy and surrounding neighborhoods.

This year's recipients were:

•Patricia Thorley, honored for her dedication to the well-being of children in Quincy as well as for her work with the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

•The Atlantic Neighborhood Center, a 180-person-strong organization recognized for its work with the Elders Association, Alcoholics Anonymous and various support groups.

•Jim Morgan, a steward with the post office who organized a food drive for the poor.

•Harold Crowly, the coordinator of Kids Voting MA program that had a positive effect on adults as well as kids.

•Charlene McDonald, director of the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

•Iman Tala Eid, creator of Muslim/Islam workshops that share the Middle Eastern culture through food and celebration.

Also receiving awards were:

•Kevin Coughlin, for his efforts in a grassroots group dedicated to alcohol reduction in the city.

•The North Quincy Stay Out '96 Committee, recognized for the creation of a fun, safe event for students to attend after the prom.

•The North Quincy Fire Station, honored for their continued commitment to keeping the city safe, and for their work with the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

•One anonymous award for an individual's tireless efforts in a sensitive area of community service.

A certificate of recognition was presented to the Elders Alliance, which disbanded earlier this fall for various personal reasons. The Elders Alliance was key in addressing the harsh reality of alcoholism among the elderly.

An award was also presented to Impact Quincy co-chairpeople Jon Simons and Donna Cunningham for their hard work and dedication to Impact Quincy and all of the Alliances and programs the organization is involved with.

Finnegan was recognized with a special award for his "tireless and caring commitment to the people of Quincy, MA."

Arthur Keogh, in presenting the leadership team, noted two things Finnegan installed that will carry Impact Quincy into the 21st century: the Together We Can Program and the Alcohol Action Committee. Finnegan's work ethic and belief that a day is not complete unless someone does something to help someone else is an ideal that every member of the Impact Quincy team holds with them as they purse different areas of community service.

Patricia Thorley and Deanna White-Heber were elected to the Leadership Team at large members. Daniel Lindsay and Felicia Tam were chosen co-chairpeople of the coalition.

Cancer Society Programs Available To Residents

The American Cancer Society offers Quincy residents a wide variety of breast cancer services and support.

Services include referrals to free mammograms, transportation to and from treatment appointments, Reach to Recovery one-on-one support, wigs and prostheses, educational videos in multiple languages, a toll-free information line, and literature and posters on the early detection of breast cancer.

Colton said the city has "conceptual plans" in mind to increase parking in the downtown. While he said it is "too preliminary" to discuss them in detail, one idea is to have the Ross Parking Garage expanded to the west over the Parkingway.

Bruce Arons, the city's downtown development coordinator who attended Tuesday's meeting, said improved parking is an issue addressed in Quincy 2000's recently-unveiled downtown action plan. The matter is addressed through short-term, mid-term, and long-term goals, he said, and one of the recommendations calls for 650 additional spaces at the Ross Garage.

Another matter discussed was the number of buildings that will be razed as a result of the project.

Colton said three buildings will be razed: one that houses Fancy Nails, Wings Express and an optometry office; three buildings on Mechanic Street and the nearby American Legion Post. He noted that the city will work with those affected to help them relocate and added that if the original idea of having the concourse run two ways had been implemented, many more properties would have been affected.

Lionetta said one issue as yet unresolved is what will happen with Revere Road. He noted that three possibilities exist: leaving it a one-way, east-bound road; changing it to a west-bound road or restricting it to pedestrian traffic only.

A "green area" acting as a buffer zone between affected residential properties and the road also could be created, Lionetta added.

Paul Phillips Elected New QEA President

Paul J. Phillips, an English teacher at North Quincy High School, was elected president of the Quincy Education Association in a recent special election.

The QEA bargaining unit represents more than 800 teachers, nurses, and assistant principals in the Quincy Public Schools, as well as faculty members of Quincy College.

The special election was held because Thomas Walsh, who served as QEA president for over eight years, recently assumed a new position as director of personnel for the Quincy Public Schools. The position of QEA president was contested by Phillips and Kathleen Mitchell, a media specialist at Sterling Middle School.

Phillips, in his 22nd year as a teacher in Quincy, presently teaches grades 10 and 12 at North Quincy High. He also taught at Central, Atlantic, and Broad Meadows Middle Schools, and Point/Webster Junior High during his career. He previously served the QEA as vice-president (six times), grievance chairman (twice), and as a member of Negotiations Teams (four times).

"The role of the QEA is to advance the cause of teachers and teaching in Quincy," Phillips said. "By doing so, the QEA also improves the educational experience of all of Quincy's 8,500 students, kindergarten to high school, as well as the thousands more who attend Quincy College."

Phillips' first priority will be to resolve the protracted contract negotiations between the QEA's college facility unit and the Quincy College Board of Trustees.

"As the college reaches its 40th year, the future may seem bright, but quite honestly the College will go nowhere without resolving its contract difficulties. Quincy College without its faculty is nothing.

"We're expecting the Board of Trustees to finally deal seriously with the important issues separating us, to settle our contract so that everyone can go forward," Phillips said.

Disability Commission Meeting At City Hall Nov. 4

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

FILING A LAWSUIT

Anyone who wishes to use legal means to recover any injuries or damages incurred due to the negligence or liability of a wrongdoer generally begins with the filing of a complaint and the issuance of a summons. The complaint sets forth the grounds of the lawsuit and states the injury or damage suffered by the plaintiff, as well as the names of the people believed to be responsible and the type of remedy that the court is being asked to impose. As for the summons, it is a legal notice issued by the clerk of the court telling the person named as defendant that legal action has been initiated against him or her. It also directs the defendant to file an answer with the court by a specified date. Any person who receives a summons in a civil lawsuit can choose to respond, or not; however, it should be noted that failure to respond most likely will result in a default judgment being entered against the defendant.

HINT: The grounds for a civil lawsuit, as set forth in the complaint, is known as the "cause of action."

Do you have grounds for a lawsuit? Have you been injured? I will take prompt and aggressive action to pursue your case, and be compensated only when recovery is made. I'll also help ensure that parties such as insurance companies also act in an expedient manner. If you would like to schedule a free appointment, call 773-2880. Our office is conveniently located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

Literacy Day Events To Be Held Saturday

The Quincy Family Literacy Network and Literacy Volunteers of America will hold the city's first Literacy Day event Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon.

The day will consist of a parents' workshop at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center and a children's workshop at Bethany Congregational Church.

Parents from Quincy Family Literacy Network, Literacy Volunteers of America, Quincy Community Action, Community Care for Kids, and The Homeless Program will attend the workshop at the library led by Jennifer Smith. It will include a variety of activities and will be limited to 30 parents.

Up to two children from each family between the ages of 4 and 9 are invited to attend the children's workshop. Led by Colleen Brannick, it will include art and reading activities, face painting, music and more.

The two workshops are being held one day after National and Massachusetts Family Literacy Day, which will be observed Friday.

Three Residents Receive Norwich Military Promotions

Three Quincy residents have received military promotions in the Norwich University Corps of Cadets for the 1996-97 academic year.

Thomas M. Arcadipane, 182 Quincy Ave., has been promoted to the rank of cadet staff sergeant; Matthew S. Linehan, 297 Beach St., has been promoted to cadet corporal and Erik M. Oster, 145 Grand View Ave. has been promoted to cadet first lieutenant.

Accreditation by the nation's oldest and largest healthcare accrediting body is special. Even rarer is to receive accreditation with commendation, indicating excellence in all aspects of care. Elihu White Nursing & Rehabilitation Center achieved all of this and more! We were also recently honored as one of only 20 nursing centers in the entire United States to have received accreditation from JCAHO continuously for the past 30 years.

Thanks to one of the finest and most caring teams of healthcare professionals in the industry, Elihu White has again demonstrated why generations of families have allowed us to share in the care of their loved ones.

A Happy Halloween For You And Your Home

It's that time of year again. A time for ghosts, goblins, jack-o-lanterns, haunted houses....and vandalism.

Yes, vandalism. For many communities, unfortunately, Halloween is more of a time for tricks on home and property than for treats.

"As a property owner you can take steps to help keep your home safe from mischievous pranksters," says Mary E. Dawson, president of the South Shore Association of Realtors.

The following tips are suggested by the association for keeping your home and property safe from vandals on Halloween:

•"Keep your yard and porch free of such items as lawn mowers, hoses, outdoor furniture, barbecue grills and other items that might be tempting to vandals," reminds Dawson. Removing these items from the path of trick-or-treaters also ensures youngsters will not be hurt by tripping over an object they didn't see in the dark or because they were wearing a costume mask. Also, put your garbage cans away or out of sight."

•Park your car in a garage, if possible. If not, make sure that the car is locked and parked in a well-lighted area. Do not leave packages or other valuables on the seats in plain sight of passers-by. Also, lock tool sheds and other outdoor storage facilities.

•Illuminate your property with whatever outdoor lighting you have--porch or patio lights, garage lights and lawn lights. Leave lights on inside your home as well. Ask your neighbors to do the same for their property. Pranksters cruising an area in a car are more likely to avoid a neighborhood that is well-lit. Check city street lights and report any lights that need replacing.

•"Plan to be home on Halloween, if possible," Dawson advises. "If you must be away, ask a friend to house-sit. If you are planning to offer treats to costumed children, use common sense when opening your door. Do not invite trick-or-treaters into your home unless you recognize them as neighborhood children."

•Support community-sponsored approved trick-or-treat times during daylight or dusk hours and ask concerned adults in the area to accompany children on their tricks. The presence of responsible adults will minimize harmful pranks.

•Determine if there are Halloween parties planned for neighborhood youth by area churches, schools or civic groups. Volunteer to help promote and supervise these programs. A well-planned and fun activity will leave less time for random vandalism.

•Finally, if you don't have a neighborhood watch program in place, now is an ideal time to organize one. Contact your local police department for information.

If in the unfortunate event your home is vandalized, report it immediately to the police. Unreported crime, quite simply, eliminates any chance of the vandals being caught and retribution being made.

"By following these suggestions, you will decrease the risk of vandalism to your home and property, thereby keeping your neighborhood safe for trick-for-treaters," says Dawson. "The South Shore Association of Realtors would like to wish you, and your home, a safe and happy Halloween!"

The South Shore Association of Realtors is "The Voice For Real Estate" on the South Shore and is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association.

Small Investment-- Big Life Saver

(NAPS)—Can you name a small, inexpensive device in your home that protects against electric shock? If you answered a ground fault circuit interrupter (GFCI), you're absolutely right. If you didn't, read on.

GFCIs provide protection against electric shock from ground faults, or contact with live electrical parts by a grounded individual. Ground faults are often the result of damaged cords or appliances, poorly insulated wires or mishandled products. They occur when the electrical current strays outside of the path where it should flow. If your body provides a path for the current to the ground, you may be injured.

The National Electrical Safety Foundation, in cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, urges all homeowners to have a qualified electrician install GFCIs in outlets that are outdoors, or in bathrooms, kitchens or wherever products may come in contact with water. By doing so, more than two-thirds of all residential electrocutions could be prevented.

For safety sake, appliances should be plugged into ground fault circuit interrupters.

GFCIs function very simply. They constantly monitor electricity flowing into a circuit to detect a loss of current. If it does detect any, it will quickly shut off the current flowing through that circuit, even if it's too small for a fuse or circuit breaker to detect.

There are three types of GFCIs for homes:

• Wall receptacle GFCIs which are used in place of standard receptacles.

• Circuit Breaker GFCIs, installed in a panel box.

• Portable GFCIs which can be plugged into receptacles or are part of extension cords.

Once a GFCI is installed, it must be checked monthly to make sure it's working properly.

For more information, write to the National Electrical Safety Foundation at 2101 L Street, N.W., Suite 300, Washington, D.C. 20037; or call (202) 457-1962.

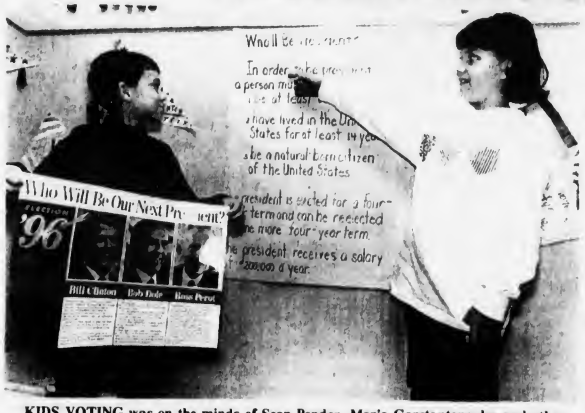
Wollaston School Kids Ready To Vote



KIDS VOTING was on the minds of Sean Pender, Maria Constantopoulos and other Wollaston School students during a recent program at the school. Here, the two third graders read the qualifications for the Presidency. Students in Grades K-12 in all of the city's public, private and parochial schools will participate in the Kids Voting Program during the Nov. 5 election.

Remembering Ruth Gordon

can probably do it tomorrow. I'm going to make another movie. Tell you all about it later. Got to run."

"Don't forget our date," I told her. The date was to make a video special of her visiting all the places in Quincy that meant so much to her. Like: 41 Winthrop Ave., and 14 Elmwood Ave. where she grew up, and the Central Middle School which was Quincy High School when she graduated in 1914.

"I won't forget," she said. "We'll make a million."

A week later--to the very day--she was gone.

I called her husband, playwright-author Garson Kanin who had been at the amphitheater ceremony with her, to tell him how sorry I was.

We talked awhile and then he said: "You were her link to her hometown." (Which I still consider an honor.)

The photos Flagg took of Ruth and Garson are the last known of her. The Associated Press picked up one of them and sent it to newspapers around the country.

I miss her and those telephone calls and hard-to-read letters.

Not just because she was a great actress, a great talent. But because she was down to earth, no phony airs. No matter how high she climbed career-wise, she never forgot her Quincy roots. .

The day she got on that train out of Wollaston in 1915, she left her heart in Quincy. I called her "Quincy's Ambassador of Goodwill" and "One-Woman Quincy Chamber of Commerce." Wherever she went, she would mention her hometown with sincere pride.

She had that bubbly enthusiasm and energy which prompted me one time to say to her: "Ruth, you could play the role of a high school cheerleader and get away with it."

She liked that and laughed.

I remember her that way. She was one of a kind.

Concourse Committee Meeting Nov. 14

The Quincy Center Concourse Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) will meet Thursday, Nov. 14 at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

CAC Chairman David Ezickson encourages all members to attend, as various phases of the design of the bridge over the MBTA tracks and roadways linking Burgin Parkway with the east and west sides of Hancock St. will be on the agenda.

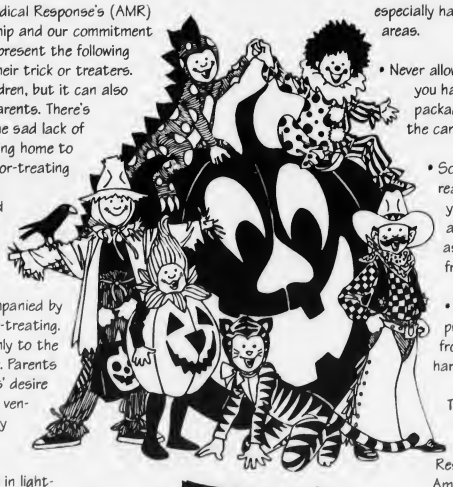
Earth Tech engineers from the firm planning and designing the project will outline the next critical steps to be taken by the CAC, the body appointed by Mayor James Sheets to seek public consensus and make recommendations for final acceptance by the mayor's task force.

American Medical Response of Massachusetts

Wants you to know how to have a safe Halloween

In keeping with American Medical Response's (AMR) community outreach partnership and our commitment to training and education, we present the following information for parents and their trick or treaters.

(Halloween is a time for children, but it can also be a time of concern among parents. There's plenty to worry about, from the sad lack of nutrition in the treats kids bring home to the safety of little ones trick-or-treating in the evening hours. But the Halloween season doesn't need to be cause for concern, if parents keep this advice in mind.)



• Kids should always be accompanied by an adult when they go trick-or-treating. Furthermore, kids should go only to the houses of neighbors they know. Parents shouldn't be lured by their kids' desire for more loot. Keep them from venturing into unknown, potentially dangerous neighborhoods.

• Dress yourself and your kids in light-colored clothing, if you plan to go out after dusk. Reflective tape will also help make kids more visible.

• Kids' masks and costumes should in no way impair vision. This could be especially hazardous if kids are in high-traffic areas.

• Never allow your children to eat candy that you haven't carefully inspected. If the packages aren't completely sealed, throw the candy away.

• Some pets may have an adverse reaction to some costumes. Have your child use caution when approaching your own family pets as well as your neighbors' and friends' pets.

• If your child's costume requires props, make certain they are made from soft foam rubber, instead of hard plastic or wood.

This is provided as a public service by AMR. For additional information, contact American Medical Response at (508) 650-5555. American Medical Response of Massachusetts is a trusted community partner. AMR serves hospitals, nursing facilities and health care organizations in four states while covering 45 New England communities with 911 emergency ambulance service.

Open House Sunday At Squantum Gardens

An Open House will be held Sunday from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Squantum Gardens Community Center.

The event is being sponsored by the office of Mayor James Sheets through its Local Redevelopment and Re-use Committee for Squantum Gardens. It will be hosted by state Sen. Michael Morrissey and Bernice Mader, Sheets' administrative assistant.

The city is in the process of negotiating a lease with the Department of the Navy for the rental of the units at the site to Quincy senior citizens. Interested residents are invited to attend and examine sample apartments at the two complexes.

The city hopes to rent the apartments to middle income seniors who do not qualify for public senior housing but who are not able to pay full market rents for apartments.

Sheets also hopes, in the immediate future, to locate a senior center and a health clinic on the site as well as an extensive van transportation system for seniors.

Committee members will be present to answer questions. Navy personnel also will be on hand to address questions about the Navy process of returning base property to communities.

A shuttle between the two sites will be provided for those unable to make the walk. Coffee and light refreshments also will be provided.

THE RACE FOR THE 10TH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

Delahunt: 'I Understand The People's Concerns'

Name: William D. Delahunt
Age: 55
Address: Marina Bay, Quincy
Family: former wife Kati Delahunt, daughters Kirstin and Kara
Education: Middlebury College graduate, 1963; Boston College, law degree, 1967
Military: U.S. Coast Guard Reserve, 1963-71
Public Service: elected Quincy City Councillor, 1971; appointed Norfolk County District Attorney by Gov. Michael Dukakis, 1976 (re-elected five times)

DEMOCRAT WILLIAM DELAHUNT

The Quincy Sun recently interviewed Democrat William Delahunt and Republican Edward Teague, candidates for Congress in the 10th Congressional District which includes Quincy.

Here's what the two candidates had to say about important issues, political philosphy and why they should be the city's next Congressman.

Q. There are many important issues facing the 10th Congressional District. Can you pinpoint the top three?

A. Well, I think we need a context. And I think that context is that the middle class has been under siege for the past 15 years. Real wages are declining, and middle class folks have had to work harder to simply make ends meet. Real wages have declined some 12 percent. It would appear that in the last year, the gap that was growing between the wealthy and the affluent, and the rest of us, was ever, ever widening.

So in that context, what concerned me most was this Gingrich Congress that really was dismantling those programs that allowed the middle class to sustain middle class living standards such as Medicare, college loan programs, educational initiatives, as well as public safety issues. I mean, it was Democratic programs that allowed for more funding for additional police officers for this city. It was federal funds that initially helped us start the first domestic violence program in the nation. People in this city need to have college loan programs available so they can afford to send their kids to college, so they can compete in this global economy, because it's a high-tech world. Education and training are absolutely essential.

And in terms of health care, what we saw was an assault on Medicare down in Washington. The Republicans—particularly the hard right of the Republican Party—was advocating Draconian cuts in the amount of $270 billion which clearly would have had a disastrous impact in terms of health care services and quality of services that would have been available to senior citizens and the elderly.

These are middle class initiatives that were introduced by Democrats that have been incredible, incredible success stories, and I represent them—I have as district attorney for better than two decades. These programs are essential to the quality of our lives here in the City of Quincy.

Q. There's a proposal right now to revitalize the Fore River shipyard....

A. It's a very exciting proposal.

Q. What, then, would you do for the shipyard if elected?

A. I would take the baton from Gerry Studds and continue to run with it. I've met with Mr. (Sotirios) Emmanouil; I'm impressed with his commitment, his perseverance, and I would continue to advocate on behalf of seeing the shipyard reopened. It would produce high-paying jobs; at the same time, it would not become so dominant in terms of our economy that the city would become dependent on it. It just makes a lot of sense; it's something that I'm excited about, and I hope to see Congressman Studds' efforts born into fruition.

Q. The federal deficit is another extremely important issue. As a Congressman, how would you work to help fix the debt and what federal programs would you want to see cut or saved?

A. Well, I think it's very important to be honest with the people, and my opponent (Rep. Ed Teague) has embraced the Dole tax cut package, which is $600 billion or in that neighborhood. That would blow a hole in the deficit. And it's that kind of thinking that has created a $5 trillion deficit that is really a mortgage on our future and is responsible for the slow growth we've seen in our economy.

If we're ever going to do anything about job creation and creating a very vital economy, we've got to deal with the deficit. I'm opposed to tax cuts at this point in time, other than two targeted tax cuts: one being the capital gain tax cut for the sale of a primary home, because that is very much a middle class tax cut; and I also would support President Clinton's initiative for a $10,000 tax deduction and/or a $1,500 tax credit for education, because again, training and education are so essential. Again, those go to middle class families.

Now when I talk about the middle class, I want to emphasize that I'm not dismissing the poor and disadvantaged. But without a healthy middle class, you simply don't have any opportunity or any hope for the poor or disadvantaged. What really makes this country so special and so unique is that we've always had a vibrant, healthy middle class.

Q. Some people would argue this has been a negative—sometimes nasty—campaign on both sides. Voters want campaigns to be about issues. What's your feeling about the negativity?

A. I think, unfortunately, my opponent represents the extreme right wing of the Republican Party, and their approach to campaigning is the negative, is the attack ad, is the innuendo, is the low road. I think it was clear to me that when Phil Johnston was the apparent (Democratic) nominee, the first advertisement on TV was a negative ad attacking Phil Johnston on the Willie Horton issue. It said nothing about what Ed Teague stands for.

Q. Let's switch gears for a moment. You're a Quincy resident. If elected, do you plan to maintain a Quincy office?

A. Oh, absolutely, clearly. I mean, this is my hometown. I was born in this city, I was raised in this city, and this is my home. I'll always live in Quincy. My family's here; we're natives. My heart and my soul are part of this community.

Q. The whole recount process after the Democratic primary must have been wearing. Do you think that's caused some splintering in the Democratic Party?

A. Oh, not at all. Recently, I went throughout Plymouth and Marshfield with Congressman Kennedy. The week before that, I was with Ted Kennedy down in Hyannis. Gerry Studds and I have been all over the Cape together. Congressman Joe Moakley has introduced me at various fund-raisers. Brian Donnelly, the former Congressman from this area, has called me on several occasions to congratulate me. We're united. Ian Bowles, who was one of my opponents, has driven with me throughout the district, and Phil Johnston has just been absolutely, totally supportive and enthusiastic. So we're ready.

Q. The issue of your refusal to make your tax returns public has been brought up. What's your response to that?

A. Again, I think you have to put this in a context. I've been district attorney for 21 years. I have filed every year; complete, total financial disclosure forms. It's there; it's there to be looked at. Congressman Studds, who has been a great public servant and represented us well in Congress, never released his income tax returns. As D.A., I never did that. There are others that don't because there is a point where there's a line of privacy. In my situation....I also want to respect the privacy of Kati Delahunt. It's really a question of principle.

Q. How do you define your political orientation? Liberal? Moderate?

A. Well, labels can be misleading. I'm sure on some issues I'm probably conservative. I'm conservative on the deficit; I think I'm fiscally responsible. I received an award in my first year from the district attorney's office for cutting my budget from Citizens for Limited Taxation, a group concerned about waste and spending in government. Other issues? I'm pro-choice, for example. I'm in favor, like I said, of gun control. That's, I guess, a moderate position. I feel very comfortable. I think I represent people in the mainstream of America and in communities like Quincy.

Q. What would you describe as your greatest accomplishment in public service?

A. I think the fact that we raised the issue of violence against women. I began that program back in 1978; we put Quincy on the map. That program has been a national model. I started it; I initiated it. We've brought it all over the nation. I was one of the co-founders of DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) here in the city. I look back on my life and I know that we saved many, many lives, and we raised public consciousness about the whole issue of family violence as well as violence against women. And I think that will be the greatest legacy I can leave, having saved lives.

Q. What's the single most important reason our readers should vote for you?

A. I think it's that I understand them, I am of them, I live in this city, I know their needs, I know their concerns. I'm part of this community. I was born and raised on Milton Street here in this city; I came from their neighborhoods.

All of the people in this city want the opportunity to live a life with some dignity; they want a good job, they want to be treated with respect, they want to have safe streets, they want to enjoy their lives and their families. And that's what I'm about.

Delahunt, Teague Television Debate On Channel 3 Live Friday Night

Democrat William Delahunt and Republican Edward Teague will square off in a live debate Friday, Nov. 1 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. when Continental Cablevision presents "View Smart To Vote Smart: The 10th Congressional Race" in 24 local communities.

Locally, the debate can be seen on QCTV Channel 3 in Quincy.

Voters with home computers and on-line connections can quiz the candidates during the debate via e-mail to Continental on the Internet (http://www.continental.com, View Smart to Vote Smart page).

Middle and high school students from 10 communities in southeastern Massachusetts, Cape Cod and Nantucket have worked with their teachers and Continental to produce brief videos, each of which illustrates an issue of local concern and poses a question for the two candidates. During the live debate, the videos will be aired and the candidates asked to respond.

The students, dubbed Continental Cub Reporters, are participating in "View Smart to Vote Smart," Continental's education initiative designed to help current and future voters more effectively analyze the positions of candidates on the issues and better understand the way the media covers and influences political campaigns.

New England Cable News anchor Margie Reedy will moderate the debate. NECN will distribute the video and audio signal of the telecast to Continental channels over its fiber optic and microwave facilities, and will also air the debate live on its cable network.

The debate telecast will also feature brief video profiles of the candidates produced by Brockton High School students in conjunction with Continental's Brockton Metro News staff.

Videotapes of the debate will be distributed to other cable operators serving communities in the 10th District for later airing.

THE RACE FOR THE 10TH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

Teague: 'I'll Make A Difference In People's Lives'

Name: Edward B. Teague III
Age: 46
Address: 115 Hallet St., Yarmouth
Family: wife Kathy Hogan Teague, daughter Kate, sons Ed, Matthew and Chris Education: St. Anselm's University, B.A. in politics, 1971; Pepperdine University, M.B.A., 1974
Military: U.S. Army, 1971-75; Massachusetts Army National Guard, 1977-president
Public Service: elected Yarmouth Selectman, 1986; state representative, 1988 (now in fourth term; current House Minority Leader)

REPUBLICAN EDWARD TEAGUE

Q. What do you see as the top three issues in the 10th Congressional District?

A. The very most important one is to elect a Congressman who can get things done for the people he represents, because the issues are going to change from time to time. The top priority at the moment might be the Fore River shipyard, the MWRA, or assistance in converting the Naval Air Station in Weymouth—but you still need to have a Congressman who gets things done. In terms of issues generally, certainly, I think jobs, the economy, crime, and the problems with the federal budget are the top issues with the people I speak to.

Q. You mentioned the shipyard. There's a plan now to reopen it. What would you do for the shipyard if elected?

A. I've already done something. I was down in Washington the day that Congress passed the bill to authorize funds to assist the Quincy shipyard, and I was lobbying members of Congress as I had done weeks before. It's industrial property on the water, and the city is eager to do something there. I think there are opportunities. You've a legitimate interest from the private sector in this case; that hasn't always proven true in the past.

But there are a couple of additional things you can look to other than shipbuilding. One is scrapping of ships. There are some real problems with obsolete craft—both military and civilian craft—and the practice in recent years of selling them overseas, running them ashore, and cutting them up has led to some serious environmental damage, and the United States government is no longer going to permit that. And the same types of skills that a welder needs, for example, to assemble a ship can be used in disassembly, and there's a big market for the scrap materials.

The other point is that the new Ocean Partnership Act is going to coordinate various agencies, and Woods Hole in Falmouth is one of the key institutions. There is no place on the East Coast that serves as the focal point for the research vessels themselves, and because of the proximity of Woods Hole and Quincy, and Woods Hole's inability to accommodate several craft, Quincy might provide an opportunity for berthing, repair, and maintenance in coordination with the Ocean Partnership Act.

Q. Regarding the federal deficit, what do you propose to help fix the debt, and what federal programs would you want to protect or cut?

A. Certainly, we have to do the same thing in Washington that we've done here in Massachusetts, and that's turn things around and learn to live within our means. The way you do that is by setting priorities. We've a variety of priorities that are not essential in the current environment, including programs in the Department of Defense. There's also a large area that's been identified by people sort of across the spectrum now as legitimate: a corporate welfare. Some steps have been taken there; they're going to eliminate agri-business subsidies—pay to companies not to grow crops. That's a step in the right direction to reduce the federal deficit.

Programs you want to protect....In Massachusetts, we've demonstrated—and I was a participant in that demonstration—that we can control the costs of things such as our state Medicaid program, our state group insurance program, and still provide the important benefits to people that need them, and live within our budget. We can bring those lessons to Washington.

Q. There's a perception that this campaign has been kind of negative—even nasty—at times, on both the Democratic and Republican sides. Since people want elections to be about issues, what's your feeling about that?

A. We have been talking about our Ten-Point Plan for about six or seven months. I held a press conference here on Hancock Street in Quincy the day we announced it....My opponents (Democratic candidate William Delahunt and former candidate Philip Johnston) both went out of their way to attack me in negative radio ads....and I certainly defended myself with items that were on the record, that had been printed in the newspaper. We've talked about the record when we've defended ourselves against negative attacks which have very little to do with anything on the record and are mostly scare tactics and fear mongering on their part. I'd much rather talk about the real issues.

Partisan bickering is one of the things they have to learn to put aside in Washington—that's one of the lessons we've learned in Massachusetts.

Q. Do you plan to maintain an office here in Quincy if elected?

A. If I'm elected, I plan to continue to live within the district. I'll be in Quincy every single week, and we're going to have an office here in Quincy to deal with the day-to-day issues that citizens confront dealing with the bureaucracy of the federal government.

Q. Do you consider yourself a strong supporter of Newt Gingrich?

A. I consider myself a strong supporter of the people I was elected to represent. Some of the things that have been done in Washington this year, I think are important from any point of view. For example, eliminating agricultural subsidies. Applying wage and hour laws to Congressional employees. Granting the president a line-item veto—a power almost every United States governor has to help control spending. Reauthorization of the Clean Water Act. The extension of loan guarantees for the Fore River shipyard.

One deficiency I've found in Congress is in the area of child support. Certainly, they did a welfare reform package which I support, but an essential component of that is child support enforcement. I've passed the toughest child support enforcement law in the nation through the Legislature twice. The federal government has created barriers that inhibit individuals—usually mothers who are left with their children, who have a very difficult burden to bear—it makes it difficult for them, and it makes it difficult for states who want to assist, to collect support that those children are due. So that's one place where I'd be critical of Congress.

Q. In Quincy, and throughout Massachusetts, there are a number of Democrats who represent the people.

A. I've noticed (laughs).

Q. If you're elected, how do you plan to work with them?

A. I'm the leader in my party in the state Legislature; I've been in leadership for five of my eight years there. We're a relatively small minority. But I passed the child support law in Massachusetts; I passed the whale license plate which is raising millions of dollars for the environment; I was the chief sponsor of the welfare fraud law; I was the first legislator to get the sex offender registration bill to the floor of the Legislature. I was one of the chief proponents of the juvenile law which provides for mandatory prison sentences for young gang members who carry firearms. I was the one who actually wrote our black market gun-smuggling law in Massachusetts. I was the one who wrote the first law to allow principals to indefinitely suspend students who carry drugs or alcohol or weapons in school.

Those all happened in a house that's primarily Democratic. One of the great advantages I have is the ability to work in a bipartisan fashion.

Q. How you describe your political orientation? Conservative? Moderate?

A. I'd say just common sense. Very simple, common sense. I come from the point of view that individuals are largely responsible for their own well-being, and government has to assist those who can't. There are some responsibilities that are clearly those of government, and we have to take those responsibilities seriously, and execute them well. At the same time, I don't think the government is the solution to all ills. I really think that in many respects, people can work out their own solutions and government should assist them in cases where they can't.

Q. What's your greatest accomplishment in public service?

A. I would say, in a larger sense, playing a role in turning this state around. I was a participant in that in a very serious way when I was on the Ways and Means Committee and as a floor leader dealing with some difficult issues, when we were on the brink of bankruptcy. In terms of individual achievement, I would say successful passage of the child support enforcement law is something I'm really proud of.

Q. What's the single most important reason our readers should vote for you?

A. The voters of this district deserve to have a Congressman who's going to get things done for them, and deal with the serious problems in a serious way, and can look them in the eye and tell them the truth about what he plans to do. I've done that for the last six months with my Ten-Point Plan.

That's what I'd tell the voters. If they want somebody who's going to get things done—things that make a difference in their lives—and uses common sense in doing those things and can operate in a bipartisan fashion, then I'm the candidate they should support.

FALL CAR CARE

Opinions Vary On Car Care

"We had three people in one week come in with major engine failure due to neglected oil or cooling systems," says repair shop owner Rick Dube, of McAllen, Texas.

He says oil change is the most frequently neglected service among his customers.

Dube's comment was in response to a survey of Automotive Service Association members by the Car Care Council. The majority of respondents listed the cooling system as the number one area of neglect, with emission controls running a close second.

"While the National Association of Attorneys General Auto Repair Task Force is seeking ways to 'reform' the industry to help curtail unnecessary automobile repairs," notes Car Care Council President Don Midgley. "Many auto safety and air quality spokesman lament the degree of maintenance neglect that affects highway safety and air quality.

"We concur with a statement by N.A.A.G. that improved consumer education can help curtail unnecessary auto repairs. It also can help raise the motorists' level of awareness of the benefits of proper vehicle maintenance."

As ASA member Bill Pawlak, of TEAM Chevy-Geo in Westmont, Ill., says it: "I wish people would read their owner's manual and invest in scheduled maintenance."

He lists wheel alignment as the service most neglected on the cars coming into his shop.

For an informative pamphlet on the fundamentals of car care, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Dept. UH, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, Ohio 43452.

Tire, Automotive Care Is Safe, Economical

Tire and related automotive care is extremely important to motorists concerned about the safe and economical operation of their cars.

Since 1921, the National Tire Dealers and Retreaders Association (NTDRA) has shared that concern for the well-being of the nation's monitoring public. The NTDRA offers these important car care tips:

Tire Inflation

You can turn air into oil, simply by keeping your tires properly inflated.

According to the Department of Energy, American motorists could save 90,000 barrels of oil a day by properly inflating their tires. Keeping their tires underinflated could result in wasting an estimated 600 million gallons of gasoline annually, or about $750 million a year.

Motorists should check their vehicle owners manual to determine the proper inflation.

It is not possible to tell if tires are underinflated just by looking at them. Since air pumps are not always accurate, NTDRA recommends that you either stop by a tire dealer for an inflation check or carry an accurate air gauge in the glove compartment. Tires should be checked at least once a month and before any long trip.

Underinflation lowers miles per gallon, creates excessive heat, seriously reduces tread life, increases rolling resistance and can cause tire failure.

Tires

Don't go bald early! At least once a month, inspect tires closely for signs of uneven wear. Uneven wear patterns may be caused by improper inflation pressures, misalignment, improper balance or suspension neglect.

If caught in time, the cause may be corrected. When the tread is worn down to 2/32nds of an inch, or to the wear bars, which look like thin strips of smooth rubber across the tread, appear on the tire, it's time to replace the tore. Don't wait!

Suspension and Steering

Suspension systems in need of repairs send out warning signals: (1) excessive bounce at front or rear end when you push down on the bumper, (2) rough, uncomfortable ride caused by leaking shock absorber seals or (3) clinking noises when going over a bump or pot hole.

If any of these problems are noticed, motorists could avoid excessive and expensive damage to their cars and tires by having the suspension system checked. If the car fails to respond immediately to a turn of the steering wheel, then a professional check of steering components is in order.

Brakes

Squeaky is not always bad, but be careful. All brakes are susceptible to slight occasional squeal or grinding. This occurs after the vehicle has been idle overnight or in unusual damp weather conditions. This noise will dissipate quickly, and has no effect on brake operation.

However, if the brake noises (grinding and squeaking) continue, or brake linings haven't been checked by a professional check should be in order. Also, if the brake pedal has to be pushed down further than normal to engage, a check may be needed. Brake fluid level should be checked every six months.

Alignment

Keep it going straight. If the car seems to pull to one side or appears to be traveling at an angle while all four wheels are straight, and the tire tread is wearing unevenly, the car is probably out of alignment. This could happen to either a new or older car.

To avoid permanent damage and the risk associated with driving a vehicle in this condition, NTDRA suggests a professional opinion.

NORTH DEFENSIVE BACK Manual Vasquez gets a hand on Don Bosco running back Rob DiFrummolo during the Red Raiders' 54-31 win Saturday. Vasquez and the rest of North's first team defense held the Bears to 12 points and have allowed just 56 of the 88 points the Red Raiders' foes have scored in 1996.

Walsh Scores Career High 5 TDs

Raiders Run Don Bosco Ragged, 54-31

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Not only did Brian "Muskie" Walsh score a career-high five touchdowns during North Quincy's 54-31 romp over visiting Don Bosco Saturday, but he also rushed for 247 yards to break the 1,000-yard plateau in just the sixth game of the season.

"He's an amazing individual," said North Quincy head coach Ken McPhee. "He might be one of the best I've ever coached."

This season, Walsh has gained 1,116 yards (186 yards per game) and scored 12 touchdowns. The most any back has gained during McPhee's tenure at North is 1,365 yards, which current NQ assistant coach Ryan Craig compiled in 1988.

The five touchdowns in one game by Walsh also tied a school record last accomplished by Craig in 1988 against Medford.

North's entire offense reached a milestone as well: the 54 points were the most points scored by a McPhee-coached team.

The Red Raiders, ranked No. 17 in The Boston Globe Top 20, improved to 5-1 overall and remained 3-1 in the Old Colony League following the non-league win over the Bears. Bosco fell to 2-5.

Friday at 5 p.m., North hosts Silver Lake (3-4, 2-3) looking to avenge last year's 25-21 loss to the Lakers. Silver Lake jumped out to a 20-0 lead, taking advantage of a few turnovers and three successful onside kicks, and held on as North's rally fell short.

"We have a little vendetta to repay," said McPhee. "The beat us last year on some stupid plays, so we're looking for a little payback."

Against Don Bosco, Walsh broke free for a 40-yard jaunt on his first carry before finding the end zone on a 15-yard run. The first of Jim Finn's six extra points gave North the lead for good at 7-6. Walsh's second score came on a fumble recovery, which he returned 37 yards for a touchdown.

On the Red Raiders' next possession, quarterback Tom Coughlin threw his only pass of the game--an 11-yard touchdown strike to receiver Tim Semchenko. The touchdown reception was the first by a North wide receiver all season.

"Tom played a real nice game," said McPhee. "He threw the ball right where it had to be thrown and did a nice job running the offense."

Walsh's third touchdown came when he broke away from would-be tacklers for a 55-yard scoring run, then added a 14-yard touchdown scamper to close out the first half scoring. North led, 35-12, at the half.

In the third, Walsh ran untouched across the middle to score his last touchdown of the game, a 30-yard run which put North further ahead, 42-12.

Junior running back Jason Turner had a solid game of his own, rushing for 93 yards on six carries and scored two touchdowns on runs of 41 and 32 yards.

Opening holes for Walsh and Turner and protecting Coughlin was North's offensive line, the biggest question mark before the season began due to its inexperience.

"They're starting to come on and are doing a great job," said McPhee. "They've become more mature as the season as gone on. The work on the blocking schemes, then go out and make the right calls in the games. They're doing real well right now."

Defensively, the Red Raiders' first team allowed just 12 points--a 55-yard pass play to Rob DiFrummolo and the two-yard run by O'Brien--and has given up just 56 of the 88 points scored by North's opponents.

"The defense played well Saturday," said McPhee. "It has been the strength of our team all season."

Panthers Blank Squantum; Manets, Elks Also Win

The Quincy Point Panthers improved to 3-2 win a solid 12-0 triumph over the Squantum Storm in recent Quincy Youth Football League action.

Mark Robertson took the opening kickoff and raced 68 yards to put the Panthers on the board. That proved all that would be needed as the Panthers added an insurance TD in the second quarter. Robertson scored his second touchdown to put Point up 12-0 at the half.

In the second half, the Panthers defense was sparked by the fine play of Sean Connolly, Jonathan Page and Mike Doucette.

Robertson also helped out on defense.

Squantum slipped to 0-4-1.

In other games, the Houghs Neck Manets (5-0) remained unbeaten by downing the North Quincy Apaches (2-3). West Quincy Elks improved to 4-1 with a win over the Milton Mustangs (0-4-1).

With two weeks remaining in the regular season, this weekend's matchups include: Panthers versus the Elk; Manets tackling the Storm; and Apaches facing Milton.

South Shore YMCA Dedicates William Kelley Running Track

The South Shore YMCA recently dedicated its outdoor running track to Cohasset resident William Kelley, in honor of his continued support and service to the Y as a director, sustaining member and committee chairperson.

The new track is part of the ambitious renovations underway at the South Shore Y's Coddington St. facility, including the construction of new athletic fields, basketball court, and restructured parking lot. Indoor renovations included a new swimming pool, redesigned and accessible back entrance, and locker rooms.

All renovations are being funded through a $2.5 million Capital Campaign, for which Kelley serves as a committee member.

"Bill Kelley's personal commitment to our association is outstanding," said South Shore YMCA President Ralph Yohe at a recent ceremony. "It is not every day that we can honor a person like this, who has given freely of his time and expertise in many capacities. Every foot that steps onto this track represents one step closer to achieving our Capital Campaign fundraising goal, and the strides Bill Kelley has enabled us to achieve to date."

Kelley has been a director of the South Shore YMCA Board since the late 1960s. In addition to serving on the Capital Campaign committee, he is chairman of the Y's finance committee and chair of the planned giving committee. He also serves as liaison for the investment committee, and is on the executive and insurance committees.

SOUTH SHORE YMCA President Ralph Yohe (right) joins William E. Kelley at the dedication of the Y's outdoor running track in Kelley's honor.

Kelley said he was honored by the Y's recognition. "I have a high level of interest in this YMCA, and in its success. I would like to take this opportunity to thank those who have made a contribution to the Y's capital fund drive, and acknowledge my friends and former business associates, and in particular Tom Flatley, who have all made contributions to help dedicate this track in my name this afternoon."

Kelly served as president of the former Hancock Bank (now FleetBank) in Quincy from 1967-86, and is currently retired. He lives in Cohasset with his wife, Angie.

North Blanks Quincy For Bragging Rights

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Sophomore forward Betsy Stone notched two first-half goals to lead North Quincy over Quincy, 2-0, Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The game was the last of the season for both teams.

At the 17:37 mark of the first half, Stone controlled a loose ball in front of the Quincy net and kicked it in for a 1-0 North lead.

Quincy's Erin Flaherty nearly knotted the game when she drove up the right side, but her shot deflected off Bowes and hit the post before Bowes booted it out of the area.

Ten minutes later, Stone was in the right place at the right time, tapping in a rebound from out front to put North ahead, 2-0, at the 27:57 mark.

"The kids played well," said North head coach Paul Bregoli. "We had some good opportunities in the first half, got a couple of breaks and put the ball in the net."

Red Raider senior tri-captain Hillary O'Donoghue beat Presidents goalkeeper Crystal Kazolias right before the half ended, but the goal was disallowed because of a hand ball against North Quincy.

Early in the second half, the Presidents' Kim Mackey broke in all alone, but her shot sailed over the net. A few minutes later, North's Bowes picked the ball up out of her area, giving Quincy a shot at scoring from less than 10 yards out. Flaherty booted it high over the net and the Red Raiders survived another Quincy scoring chance.

"She (Flaherty) was terrific for them," said Bregoli. "She was their best tonight (Saturday). She was a concern whenever she touched the ball, but (Dorothy) Cronin and (Liz) Bennett did a good job of containing her."

Bowes was flawless in net, stopping every Presidents shot the rest of the way to preserve the shutout win for North.

"We had every opportunity to put it in, but we didn't do it," said Quincy head coach Robin Welinsky.

The Red Raiders, who lost five one-goal games to tournament teams in the second half of the season, were pleased to conclude the season on a positive note.

"I'm really happy we won," said North senior tri-captain Laura Shea. "It's nice to go out with a win. I wouldn't want it any other way."

"Since the second half of the Falmouth game, we played as well as anyone in the league," said Bregoli. "The girls always play so hard; I never questioned their effort. I'm really proud of this team. It got better as the season went on.

"We have a lot of kids back next year, and if they work hard in the off-season, they can make history as the first North team to make the tournament."

Seniors O'Donoghue, Shea, tri-captain Lisa Bragg, Tina Katsarikas, Maureen Sullivan, Maureen Casey, Amanda Rork, Kelly Wigmore and Jill Picardi played their final games for the Red Raiders.

Welinsky, whose team finished 3-14-1, does not believe the record does her team justice.

"The record doesn't show how hard these kids played this season," she said. "They want to learn the game, the attitude is 100 percent and the desire is in their hearts. We had a fun season this year. This was a great team to coach.

"I want to take this opportunity to thank the parents at Quincy High School for all their support during my first season. I appreciate all the help."

Playing their final games for Quincy were senior tri-captains Flaherty and Kim Mackey, Kim Garthwaite and Angela Hogrell.

North Girls Split Meet While Boys Lose Two

North Quincy's girls split a twin bill with Plymouth South and Barnstable over North's 3.1 mile Pageant Field loop. The boys dropped both ends.

Lauren Molloy and Lynda Wilson both placed in the top five, while Sarah Houghton and Genevieve O'Brien placed in the top 10. Diane Jordan was 12th overall as North's fifth scorer.

Barnstable's depth and experience was the difference. However, Plymouth's undermanned squad could only put one girl in the top 20 and was shut out by both schools.

"Three point one miles is still a tough distance for freshmen, but we're still improving," said coach Geoff Hennessy. "Many girls improved a minute from their meet with Taunton two weeks ago. How can I complain?"

North's boys also are improving, but not enough to overtake powerful Plymouth and Barnstable. All five scorers did place in the top 20 overall. Jimmy Wan made the top five. Jason Newhall also ran his best race of the year for the Raiders.

North ran at the OCL championships at Silver Lake Tuesday. The Raiders take part in the State Coaches Invitational Saturday, Nov. 2 at Franklin Park.

North's girls finished with a 4-4 record. The boys are 2-6.

Youth Basketball Tourney Nov. 9-11

Quincy Youth Basketball will hold a basketball tournament Saturday through Monday, Nov. 9-11 at the North Quincy High School gym.

Boys and girls in grades 6-8 from the Quincy and South Shore area are invited to participate. Organizers are expecting up to 50 teams, with each team playing a minimum of three games prior to the playoff rounds.

To ensure the success of the tournament, a small number of sponsors are required to cover the overhead cost. Each sponsor's name will be printed in the tournament program and on banners placed around the facility.

Those interested in becoming a sponsor may send a donation or tax deductible check payable to Quincy Youth Basketball Tournament and forward all correspondence to Quincy Youth Basketball, 45 Cliff St., Quincy, MA 02169.

All proceeds from the tournament will go towards the youth sports programs of St. Ann's, Wollaston and St. Ann School's eighth grade class trip.

Raiders Edge Presidents

Senior forward Chris Erler's two first-half goals lifted North Quincy past Quincy, 2-1, Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The game was the season finale for both squads.

"This was only our third win, so each win is sweet," said first-year Red Raiders head coach Bob Dano, whose team finished 3-14-1.

After Red Raider midfielder-forward Bill Walker was knocked down in the box, Erler booted the penalty shot past Presidents goalkeeper Brian Snow at the 6:32 mark of the first half.

Erler scored again at the 23-minute mark, lifting a shot over Snow's head off a feed from Walker for a 2-0 North lead.

"He (Erler) has been a nice player all year," said Dano. "He led the team in scoring with eight goals this season."

Quincy (0-19-1) had a few chances to get on the board in the opening half, but Red Raider goalkeeper Matt Norton was sharp, stopping every shot he faced in the first 40 minutes.

The Presidents cut the North lead in half early in the second half when co-captain Jared Downey tallied on a penalty kick 8:39 into the half.

"He (Downey) is going to be something next year," said first-year Quincy head coach Ray Papile. "He had a great year and works real hard. He's fun to watch."

Snow came up big later in the half, stretching out horizontally to stop a blast by Quincy's Alex Cordona that would have tied the game.

"That was as good a save as you'll see," said Dano. "He played his best game of the season tonight (Saturday)."

Downey, Quincy's main attacker, had a few chances to bring the Presidents even but North's defenders were solid down the stretch, preserving the one-goal win.

Papile was pleased with the play of Snow and co-captain Jason Lumaghini on defense, who kept the Raiders scoreless in the second half.

"Jason did a lot of good things on defense, and Brian was real aggressive in the second half, getting his confidence up and making a couple of good saves," said Papile.

Playing their final game for North were Erler, co-captain Neil Costa, co-captain Bill Barron, Mike Johnston, Jeremy Riley and Ryan Herlihy.

Quincy's departing seniors were Lumaghini, Cardona, Snow, Garth Skeet, John Tormey and Cuong Diep.

Both coaches are already looking towards next season, as both the Red Raiders and Presidents have a number of players returning, along with talented additions from their respective JV squads.

"The future looks good for us," said Dano. "We have a bunch of players back and we had a good crop of freshman this year. If we can keep up this level of play and play smart, we should improve."

"We improved every game and had a good second half of the season," said Papile. "I think we're heading in the right direction. If we keep plugging away and work hard during the off-season, we will get better."

QUINCY'S KEVIN CONNOLLY, who had 19 carries for 92 yards and a touchdown in Friday night's loss to Weymouth, tries to fend off Wildcat linebacker Brian Harvey and pick up a few more yards. (Quincy Sun Photos/Tom Gorman)

PRESIDENTS' WIDE RECEIVER Mark Belanger (7) is unable to haul in this pass from Mark Glynn as Weymouth linebacker Steve Anzalone (43) looks on. Anzalone hurt Quincy more with his offensive play, collecting two touchdowns and 115 yards rushing.

Tries To Rebound Against Falmouth

Weymouth Too Much For Presidents, 21-12

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Friday night's Old Colony League game between Quincy and Weymouth came down to one play: a fourth and four for the Presidents from the Wildcats' 28-yard line.

Trailing 14-12 with 3:12 to play, Presidents quarterback Mark Glynn threw to his left, looking for reliable receiver Bob Walsh, who was in position to make the catch for the first down.

Before Walsh could catch it, though, Wildcat defensive back Mark Davey stepped in front to intercept the pass and returned it 78 yards for a touchdown to seal the 21-12 win for visiting Weymouth.

The loss dropped Quincy to 2-4 overall, 1-3 in the Old Colony League. Weymouth, ranked No. 6 in The Boston Globe Top 20, improved to 6-1, 4-1.

The schedule does not get any easier for the Presidents, who visit Falmouth (3-3, 3-2) and powerful running back Willie Ford Friday at 6 p.m. Ford, a 6-2, 190-pound senior tailback, has 12 TD's this season in six games.

Against Weymouth, two key plays helped Quincy take the lead early in the second quarter. The first came on a fourth and less than one from Quincy's 18, when Glynn kept the ball and lunged forward for the first down. The other was a 70-yard pass to Walsh, who outleaped the Weymouth defender for the ball and took it down to the Weymouth nine-yard line. Three plays later, Kevin Connolly (19 carries, 92 yards) scored on a three-yard run, his sixth touchdown of the season. Tim Santos' extra point went wide right and Quincy led, 6-0.

With less than four minutes to play in the half, Glynn was intercepted by Brian Stanton, who returned it to the Quincy 33. Weymouth fullback Steve Anzalone (22 carries, 115 yards) went off right tackle for a 20-yard scoring run, followed by Bill Lovendale's point after boot, which gave Weymouth a 7-6 lead.

The Wildcats opened the second half with an impressive eight-play, 60-yard drive in which Anzalone rushed seven times for 47 yards, including a six-yard touchdown jaunt. Lovendale's kick pushed Weymouth's lead to 14-6.

Connolly, who rushed for only 21 yards in the first half, paced the Quincy attack on its next possession, carrying the ball seven times for 54 yards. On second and goal from the one, Glynn took it in v to bring Quincy to within two, 14-12. The Presidents went for the two-point conversion, but Glynn's pass sailed out of the back of the end zone and Weymouth clung to a two-point lead into the final quarter.

Quincy's defense stepped it up in the fourth quarter, stopping Anzalone for a six-yard loss and sacking quarterback Mike Scott for a loss of six to force a punt.

Starting at Weymouth's 45 following an 18-yard punt, Glynn ran the option, tossing to Connolly for an 11-yard gain. Three plays later, Connolly was held to one yard on third down, setting up the fourth down pass and subsequent interception by Weymouth's Davey.

The Sun was unable to reach Quincy head coach Peter Chella for comment about the game.

Christopher Barra State Judo Champion

North Quincy High School sophomore Christopher Barra, 99 Bigelow St., won his second straight Massachusetts State Judo Championship recently in a double elimination tournament at Dalton.

Moving up a class to middleweight, Barra went undefeated in the boys 13-16 age group.

After advancing in the semi-finals, he was well behind Cale Basset of Pittsfield, who had defeated Barra in July at the Bay State Games. He avenged the earlier loss by coming back and cleanly throwing Cale with a left side Tai-Otoshi (side body throw over the left leg) followed by a strangle and pin.

In the finals Barra defeated Jerry Harding of Springfield with a sweeping leg hip throw followed by a submission pin.

Barra will compete in the New England Championships in December in Connecticut. He studies under the guidance of Bill Stevens and Tom Comorford at the L Street Judo Club in South Boston.

FLUSH WITH POSSIBILITIES

As part of an automobile's regular maintenance, its cooling system should be drained and flushed at least every three years. Symptoms that indicate the immediate need for a system flush include a water/antifreeze mixture in the radiator that contains suspended particles and a heater that does not provide as much heat as it should. If the fluid in the radiator looks and feels filthy or contains rust, the cooling system should be back-flushed without delay. This is not the same as simply draining the radiator. Back-flushing requires that the thermostat be removed and replaced. And, while there are many possible causes of reduction in heater efficiency, one of them is the ac ulation of rust and sediment in th eater core. If the car's cooling system has not been back-flushed within the previous three years, it is a good idea to perform this service before authorizing replacement of the heater core.

HINT: Back-flushing involves pumping fresh water through the engine cooling system until rust and sediment have been removed.

The best way to make sure your car functions at its optimum level, and safely, is to follow a regular maintenance schedule, including back-flushing the cooling system. SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

One vote has many times made the difference, even in national elections. Three of our early Presidents were made head of our country by a one-vote margin over their opponents: Thomas Jefferson, John Quincy Adams and Rutherford B. Hayes.

The Ballot Box is the best instrument to attack the problems of our time - whether it be in a presidential election or a local election. The Ballot Box is the best way to legislate and clarify issues.

The right to vote is the most fundamental of all our rights because the behavior and performance of officeholders, at every level of government, is dictated by the knowledge that periodically they must come before the bar of public opinion in the polling booths. The caliber of a man or woman in public life is a direct reflection of the wisdom and judgment exercised by the voters. It is your right to vote. . . use it. . . Remember that if that right be refused or taken away, we would have anarchy at its worse! . . .

Quincy To Benefit From Project Bread Grant

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has awarded Project Bread a $50,000 grant to launch the Food Resources for the Elderly Campaign.

The federal grant, known as the Community Food and Nutrition Program Grant (CFNP), will be used to battle hunger and malnutrition among the elderly. Project Bread will target eight communities throughout Massachusetts, including Quincy, where there is a high incidence of poverty among elderly people as well as a large number of linguistically-isolated senior citizens.

There are currently 72,000 elderly in Massachusetts living below the poverty line. The seven other communities that have been selected for focus are Greenfield, Lawrence, Leominster and Fitchburg, Lowell, Roxbury (Boston), Springfield, and the area of Waltham, Needham, Watertown and Newton.

Submitted Informally To City Council

Copies Of Proposed Signage Law Available

Copies of a proposed ordinance affecting the signage of Quincy businesses have been informally submitted to the City Council and are available to the public.

Councillors, business owners and residents alike are invited to make comments or suggestions for possible amendments to the ordinance by Friday, according to Quincy Signage Committee Chairman Bernice Mader. Copies of the ordinance, which is currently in draft form, may be picked up at the front desk in City Hall Annex, she added.

Mader said after all input is received, appropriate amendments that all parties can live with will be made. She added that she hopes to formally submit the ordinance to the City Council in its final form in December.

The Signage Committee was formed over a year ago after several downtown merchants voiced concerns about the city's current signage law, saying it places too many restrictions on their businesses.

Mader listed among the major provisions of the proposed ordinance:

•Businesses would be allowed to have one main sign and up to two additional signs in their front windows. Currently, only one sign is allowed, one of the major complaints of a number of merchants.

•The local signage code has been upgraded to meet the standards of the state code.

•Language of the ordinance has been simplified considerably. Mader said the language of the current law is far too vague.

•All projecting signs and others currently in violation of the present code will be required to be removed. Although about 90 percent of affected businesses already have complied with that regulation under the current law, according to Mader, the new ordinance will require that those who have not must do so within one year.

Another issue that has emerged as a result of the Signage Committee's work is the role of the Quincy Historic Commission regarding signage.

Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth, a member of the Signage Committee, has submitted a letter to Mader about the commission's authority over signage in the city's Historic District.

"I feel that businesses in the Historic District should have the same rights as businesses outside of the Historic District, and that they should not be subjected to an extra layer of rules and regulations by the Historic Commission," he wrote.

Bosworth's suggestions for changes in that area include:

•That the mayor and City Council look into the feasibility of changing the boundaries of the Historic District.

•That the mayor and council also examine the possibility of amending the role of the Historic Commission in the matter of signage. Specifically, that businesses located in the present Historic District be allowed the same rights as businesses outside the Historic District under the new signage ordinance.

•That jurisdiction over signs in the Historic District come under the Quincy Building Department, not the Historic Commission, except in the case of a historic building being involved.

Mader, however, said such recommendations are a separate issue from the proposed signage ordinance and can be addressed, if necessary, after the new ordinance is passed.

ladies prepared food and fed our whole work group in one of their homes. It was delicious," Klein said.

"They were so thankful that we came up from Kentucky to help them with their physical needs and their spiritual needs. We try to be attentive."

Klein said their group is working in conjunction with Quincy Emergency Management. "(Deputy Director) Tony Siciliano is supplying us with the jobs. He's sending out escorts with us to the different areas. Tony has been very cooperative."

The volunteers were asked to come to Quincy by Jim Miers of the Massachusetts State Brotherhood. Besides the West Virginia floods, the group has responded to some notable disasters, including the Great Mississippi Flood of 1993, when they helped Quincy's sister city, Quincy, Ill., and the Albany, GA flood of 1995.

While in Quincy, the group is staying at the South Shore YMCA. It's also utilizing the kitchen at the Emergency Management office on Sea Street.

The disaster relief workers are a close-knit bunch, Klein said.

"We're 1,800 members strong. When we go out on a disaster, it's like a family reunion," said the 60-year-old retired LP gas serviceman.

ABCC Upholds Board Decision On Stop & Shop

The state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) has upheld a decision by the Quincy License Board to grant a beer and wine license to Stop & Shop's new North Quincy store.

The leader of a group of local residents who opposed the license said a follow-up appeal is "very unlikely."

The ABCC made its decision last week following an appeal filed by a number of Montclair residents who said allowing a beer and wine license at a supermarket sends the wrong message to children. The License Board voted 3-2 Sept. 10 to grant the license.

"The commission finds that the action of the local board in granting the license was a reasonable action in the exercise of its jurisdiction," the ABCC decision reads. "There was no abuse of its discretion. The action of the local board is approved."

Kevin Coughlin, president of the Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association who led the opposition to the license, said he was disappointed by the ABCC's decision but added, "I'm not overly surprised by it."

Coughlin acknowledged that he and the other residents who attempted to have the License Board decision overturned were facing an uphill battle but noted they felt their actions was necessary.

"A lot of the community felt we needed to do this," he said.

The residents who fought the granting of the Stop & Shop license now have the right to appeal to Superior Court within 30 days of the ABCC's decision. Coughlin, however, said it is "very unlikely" any such action will be taken because the initial appeal already has caused a financial strain on him and his neighbors.

"We don't have deep pockets," he said.

He added, however, residents will continue to address such issues as best they can through the education of their children and other methods.

Joseph Dennehy To Receive JWV 'Citizen Of Year' Award

Alan Bowers, state commander of the Disabled American Veterans, will be guest speaker at the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post's 46th annual "Citizen of the Year" Awards Program Sunday.

The event will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Beth Israel Synagogue in Quincy Point. The award this year will be presented to Joseph Dennehy of Quincy for his concern for the fair treatment of disabled veterans and the well-being of their families.

Bowers, an Air Force veteran, received his military education at the Squadron Officer's School and Command and Staff College. He graduated from Pennsylvania State University and holds a master's degree in computer science.

Bowers was medically retired from the Air Force after he was injured ejecting from an OV-10 in Vietnam. Since his retirement, he has remained active in veterans' affairs and has served his community as campaign chairman and president of the United Way, president of the Boy Scout Council and chairman of the Board of Directors of the local hospital.

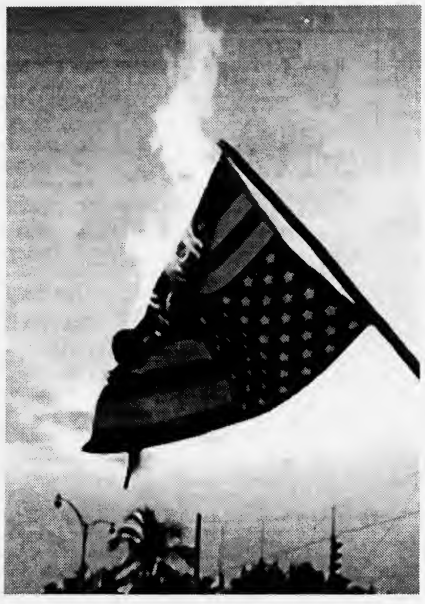
POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

Burn this and get jail time.

Burn this and get nothing.



Is this the way you see it, Senator John Kerry?

Two violent, terrorist acts. With one big difference.

There's a law against burning a cross. When people do it, it's called a "Hate Crime." If they're caught, they go to jail for up to a year. Or even longer. But for another violent, hate-filled act—burning the American Flag—there's no law, no penalty.

In fact, the American people don't have the right to outlaw desecration of the American Flag.

Evidently, that's how Senator Kerry likes it. He voted against the Flag Protection Amendment.

All the Flag Amendment would do is return to the people the right to pass laws against Flag burning. The Supreme Court took that right away and only an Amendment can bring it back. An Amendment would move the debate closer to the American people and away from the Washington insiders.

But Senator Kerry says, "No."

We think Senator Kerry is wrong and the majority of voters agree.

We're a broad based national coalition made up of over 100 civic, fraternal, veterans, minority, business and labor organizations. We think the American Flag and the values it represents are important, and that Americans have a right to discuss this issue back home. Some politicians in Washington disagree.

We urge you to consider your vote in this election, remember the Flag and its values and then vote your conscience.

Maybe then Senator Kerry will see the mistake in outlawing one violent, terrorist act, while condoning another.

Call Senator John Kerry at

Cahill Elected Norfolk County Treasurer • 72.28 Percent Turnout Here

It's • Clinton • Kerry • Delahunt

By ROBERT BOSWORTH and MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy voters joined those in the nation and state to re-elect President Bill Clinton and Senator John Kerry while propelling local sons William Delahunt to Congress and Tim Cahill to the Norfolk County treasurer's office.

The Clinton-Al Gore ticket carried this Democratic stronghold with 63.47 percent of the vote to 26.9 percent for the Bob Dole-Jack Kemp Republican team.

Ross Perot and Pat Choate running on the Reform Party ticket polled only 3,064 votes or 8.39 percent.

Kerry racked up 54.09 percent to Gov. William Weld's 40.8 percent. Susan Gallagher, Wollaston real estate agent and former Quincy Republican City Committee chairwoman, had 4.88 percent running as Conservative Party candidate.

Delahunt, who is 52 and Norfolk County district attorney since 1975, piled up 23,845 votes or 66.97 percent here to jump-start him to victory over Republican Edward Teague in the 10th Congressional District. Teague's vote was 10,812 or 30.37 percent.

Delahunt will be the first Congressman from Quincy since John Quincy Adams 148 years ago.

Cahill was the city's top vote-getter in the contested races, rolling over Republican incumbent Robert Hall by a vote of 27,777 to

Receives Unanimous Council Vote

$282,823 Budget OK'd For Senior Facilities At Squantum Gardens

The City Council has unanimously approved a supplemental budget of $282,823.40 for planned senior facilities at the Squantum Gardens property in Squantum.

The funds, to be used for personnel, repairs and other expenses, will be charged to the revenue of Fiscal Year 1997.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday he is happy with the council's support of the plan, which was devised by the Quincy Council on Aging.

"I think the process is going very well," he said. "I'm pleased that the budget got passed."

Sheets added that the council's passage of the budget means the plan will move forward regardless of what happens to a home-rule petition affiliated with the project that has sparked some controversy.

Both state Sen. Michael Morrissey and Councillor Paul Harold have raised concerns about the petition and spoke on the matter Monday night.

Morrissey said he has concerns about provisions in the petition to establish a department of senior affairs in the city, saying they lack specifics. The petition has passed the Massachusetts House of Representatives, but Morrissey said he will see to it that the Senate does not pass it unless several amendments are added.

Harold, meanwhile, pointed out that there is no lease for the project.

"I think we have to find out, with some certainty, where we're going with this project," said Harold.

They also said the city still has to get special approval from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to use the site for senior housing.

The majority of the council, however, said the plan is a solid one, noting that the city, including the entire Council on Aging and Sheets, has put a lot of thought into it.

"We've moved cautiously," said Councillor Michael Cheney.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi agreed.

"We need to adopt the vision that the Council on Aging has adopted," he said. "It's a well-thought plan, and it's time to move on it."

The city is acquiring the 27-acre property from the Navy as a result of the closure of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station. Currently, the city is awaiting the Navy's approval of a one-year interim lease and plan to start moving seniors into the apartments as soon as January.

Sheets said the city should have the lease within two to three weeks.

Concerns about the home-rule petition were first voiced by Morrissey last month. The senator, who helped organize a reuse committee for Squantum Gardens last year, said that unlike similar legislation for Quincy College and Quincy Hospital, the petition would create a board of directors

51% Go To Polls

Kids Back Same Candidates As Parents, Other Adults

Quincy students participating in the Kids Vote USA Program, as they did last year, picked all of the same candidates as their parents in Tuesday's election.

The students voted even more overwhelmingly Democratic than their parents, however.

Some 5,075 students, or 51 percent of the 10,023 students in Grades K-12 in the city's public, private and parochial schools cast ballots. The student vote was 4 percent higher than last year, the first time the program took place in he city.

Kids Voting Executive Harold Crowley said, "I think, realistically, that's as good as it can get. As much as I'd like 90 percent of the kids getting out to vote, I don't think that's realistic."

In the race for President, Bill Clinton received 3,799 votes from the students, compared to 737 for Bob Dole and 384 for Ross Perot. The President's victory was even higher than the 63.47 percent (23,172 votes) over Dole's 23.90 percent (9,819) and Perot's 8.67 percent (3,064) in the adult election.

Sen. John Kerry received 2,987 votes in the Kids Voting election, with Gov. William Weld taking 1,345 votes, Susan Gallagher 532 and Robert Stowe 102. Numbers in the adult election were a bit closer with Kerry receiving 19,770 votes (54.09 percent), Weld 14,912 (40.80), Gallagher 1,784 (4.88) and Stowe 65 (.18).

Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt of Quincy crushed Rep. Edward Teague of Yarmouth, receiving 3,391 votes to Teague's 1,099 and Charles Laws' 356 in the Kids Voting election. Numbers in the adult election were 23,845 votes for Delahunt (66.97 percent), 10,812 for Teague (30.37 percent), and 842 for Laws (2.36).

Naval Commander Guest Speaker

Veterans' Day Parade, Ceremonies Monday

The Quincy Veterans Council Veterans' Day Parade and ceremonies will be held Monday, Nov. 11.

The parade will start at 10:30 a.m. and proceed from School St. to Hancock St. to the Adams Academy where the Veterans' Day ceremonies will be observed.

Guest speaker will be Capt. Robert Duetsch, commanding officer of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, a position he has held since January 1995.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., Duetsch received a commission as an Ensign in the U.S. Naval Reserve in November 1971. After commissioning he continued flight training and was designated a Naval Flight Officer in May 1972.

He has accumulated over 3000 flight hours and 400 carrier landings in the F-4 and F-14 aircraft. He served initially in Fighter Squadron TWENTY ONE (VF-21), making two Western Pacific cruises. Among other positions he held were Fighter Program Manager, NATOPS Officer, Operations Officer and Chief of Staff during two tours of duty with Carrier Air Wing Reserve TWENTY.

His most recent assignment was as Deputy Director Plans and Program in the Material and Facilities Deputate, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs.

His awards and decorations include the Defense Superior Service Medal, Meritorious Service Medal, two Navy Commendation Medals, Navy Battle "E" Ribbon, two National Defense Service Medals, two Vietnam Service Medals, and two Armed Forces Reserve Medals.

Mayor James Sheets and City Council President Peter Kolson will bring greetings from the city.

Invocation will be given by Joseph Sullivan, chaplain of the Quincy Veterans Council. Benediction will be given by Joseph Dennehy, chaplain of the Quincy DAV Cavanaugh Chapter 79. Prayer will be given by Edwin Boland, assistant chaplain of the Quincy Veterans Council.

The annual ceremonies are sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council on behalf of local veterans' posts.

Thomas Stansbury of the Quincy Veterans Service Department is parade chairman. John Raeke Sr., commander of the Veterans' Council, is parade marshal.

Aides to the commander are Stansbury and Edward McAllister, vice commanders of the Veterans' Council.

Co-chairman and emcee is Quincy Veterans Services Director Henry "Hank" Bradley, past state commander of the American Legion and past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council.

Aides to invited guests are Peter Stonis and Joseph Callahan, past commanders of the Veterans Council.

Chief of staff is Paul O'Neill, past commander of the Veterans Council.

Among the participants will be: North Quincy High School ROTC, North Quincy High School Band,

Officials Hail Shipyard Loan Guarantees As Giant Economic Boost

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City officials are calling a commitment of $55 million in federal loan guarantees from the U.S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) to rebuild the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point the biggest economic step forward Quincy has taken in recent years.

Mayor James Sheets said the reopening of the shipyard, which now could happen as early as next fall, could create new jobs for up to 2,000 workers. Modernization of the yard should begin by January and shipbuilding in the fall of next year, he said.

Sheets added that the announcement allows the city to begin the purchase and sale of the shipyard, which is owned by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

"In terms of economic progress, this is the most significant step forward we've taken since I took office," said Sheets.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi, whose ward includes the shipyard, agreed.

"Clearly, it's the biggest economic shot in the arm this region has had since General Dynamics first opened the shipyard years ago," he said. "It's a tremendous boost for the Quincy Point community and the entire South Shore community, really. It's great news.

Raymondi added that he was glad to accompany Sheets to Washington, D.C. to do what he could to help gain support for the project.

"I was happy to participate in the process," he said

State Rep. Mariano, a Quincy Point resident, said he thinks the surrounding neighborhood, in particular, would benefit greatly from the shipyard revitalization.

"I view it as a tremendous opportunity for economic development in Ward 2, specifically in the lower Point," he said. "I'm hoping that with the combination of the new elementary school that's going in there and new jobs that will be created by the shipyard, we can revitalize that whole area.

"It's something I really believe. I think it's a once-in-a-lifetime deal."

The announcement of the letter from Transportation Secretary Federico Pena notifying the city of the federal loan guarantees was made during a Democratic rally in front of City Hall last week by Sens. Edward Kennedy and John Kerry and Congressman Gerry Studds.

Among those in attendance were Sheets, members of the City Council and Quincy's State House delegation, Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt, Sotirios Emmanouil, owner of Swampscott-based Massachusetts Heavy Industries and the man behind the planned shipyard reopening; and a number of union leaders and other Democratic supporters.

Pena's letter to Kennedy, Kerry and Studds states, in part, "The Department of Transportation's U.S. Maritime Administration has successfully concluded negotiations with Massachusetts Heavy Industries Inc., and will sign a letter of commitment to extend $55 million in loan guarantees to finance the rebuilding and modernization of the Fore River shipyard in Quincy, Massachusetts. As you know, this agreement fulfills the promise made [in September] by President Clinton to the people of Massachusetts."

The federal loan guarantees will allow Emmanouil to modernize the dormant shipyard next year and begin building double-hulled tankers for a Greek shipbuilding firm by late 1997 or early 1998. Emmanouil reached a final agreement on loan terms last week.

Emmanouil, who must meet all loan conditions by Jan. 1, is continuing negotiations for a separate $250

Council Thanks Kentucky Baptists For Flood Assistance

The City Council paid tribute to volunteers from the Kentucky Baptist Convention's disaster relief program Monday for their assistance following the Nov. 20 nor'easter that poured 8 1/4 inches of rain on Quincy.

Eight members of the program, which has a number of units that help the Red Cross and other emergency agencies deal with hurricanes, tornadoes and other natural disasters across the country, appeared before the council Monday night. In all, about 20 unit members have helped Quincy residents deal with flooding and other problems they have experienced since the Nov. 20 storm.

Unit spokesman O.A. Collins said the members, who have been in the city since Oct. 26, are not compensated for their efforts and even pay their own travel expenses.

"This is our objective: to go out and serve our fellow

Sheets Proclaims Nov. 18-28 'Homeless Awareness Days'

Mayor James Sheets has proclaimed Nov. 18-28 "Homeless Awareness Days" in Quincy.

Sheets said in his written proclamation that the mission of the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition--which operates Father Bill's Place, the city's homeless shelter--"is to educate the community on the issues of homelessness in our nation, state and South Shore communities."

Sheets also wrote that November is an especially appropriate time for Quincy residents to think about the issue of homelessness.

"It is important to reflect upon the many blessings that we possess and share in Quincy, as we prepare to celebrate the holiday of Thanksgiving," the proclamation reads. "It is a time not only to be thankful for prosperity and the hope of a positive future, but a time to be thankful for the gift of family, community and the support of friends.

"It is important that we not forget that there are those, who for many reasons, social, economic and personal, feel themselves beyond the pale of our blessings."

Registration For Teenagers Snow Shoveling Job

Quincy teenagers may sign up for the Chores Program for snow shoveling and other odd jobs this winter at the John F. Kennedy Health Center, 1120 Hancock St., Saturdays Nov. 2 and 9 from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

Intergenerational Chores Coordinator George Dunn will conduct registration at the office downstairs in the JFK Health Center.

Interested parties unable to attend the registration can contact the Council on Aging office at 376-1246 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., or contact their local community center directors.

Shovelers will be assigned in their own neighborhoods and will be paid for the services. For more information, call the Council on Aging office.

NOTING THE DETAILS

Anyone who endures pain or other physical problems as the consequence of an accident should keep track of his or her symptoms in a daily journal. Because pain, discomfort, anxiety, loss of sleep, etc. are the basis upon which any compensation will be determined, it is necessary to be as specific as possible. Those accident victims who fail to make immediate note of their problems run the risk of relying upon faulty memories to create inaccurate recollections. As a result, important details may not be included in a demand for settlement that may take place weeks or months after the initial incident. Keeping an injury journal also prevents seemingly inconsequential items from being forgotten. Sometimes, a mere bump or twist can lead to the understanding of a major problem later on.

Hint: Information from an injury journal that is relayed to the doctor becomes part of medical records and provides evidence later that injuries were caused by the accident.

If you have been injured by someone or something, you owe it to yourself and your family to determine whether you are entitled to compensation for those injuries. First, start by keeping an accurate daily journal of your symptoms. Second, contact an attorney experienced in the area of personal injury law. Check around and you'll find that I have the expertise and track record to get results. Call 773-2880 to schedule a free appointment. A Letter From Hillary

A few readers have asked if Hillary Rodham Clinton ever wrote to me as she said she would when she was in Quincy last month.

That was after Councillor Paul Harold handed her a photo of her father and me taken at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center during World War II.

HILLARY

Her father, Hugh Rodham, was company commander of my company (Company 1968) during basic training at Camp Green Bay there.

Her father died in 1993 and it was a sentimental and unexpected moment for her in Quincy when she was suddenly looking at a photo of him as a young man in the Navy. A photo taken before she was born.

At the end of the speaking program she came by where I was standing and Harold introduced us. We spoke briefly and she thanked me for the photo. "I am going to write you," she said as she was leaving.

And, did she? She did.

Fourteen days later--despite her busy campaign schedule--a short typed letter on stationery with the Presidential seal dated Oct. 18--arrived from the White House:

"Dear Mr. Bosworth:

"Thank you for the photograph of my father and you taken at the Great Lakes Company 1968 Training Center in 1943. I'm delighted to have a copy of this photo for our family album!"

The Sun was one of the distribution centers for the free tickets to her appearance at the Crane Library to which she noted:

"I appreciate your assistance in facilitating the recent event in Quincy. I enjoyed meeting the people from that area and spending some time in your city."

She closed: "Sincerely yours, Hillary Rodham Clinton" with her name personally signed..

It was thoughtful of her to take time out from a whirlwind Presidential election campaign to say "thank you" for a little memento that apparently means a lot to her.

FORMER STATE SENATE President Bill Bulger, now president of the University of Massachusetts, still has his sense of humor. Bulger was the keynote speaker at the inaugural of Jeremiah Ryan as president of Quincy College at United First Parish Church last week.

BULGER

Following the ceremony, Bulger was chatting outside with former Mayor Arthur Tobin and City Councillor Paul Harold, both of whom served with him in the Senate, and this writer.

Betty Sweeny, Charlie's better half, happened along and said, kiddingly: "So this is where all the politicians are."

"Oh, no, not me," said Bulger, throwing his hands up in mock protest.

"I'm waiting to write my first letter to the editor as an irate taxpayer."

George suffered two heart attacks two weeks ago and is in the intensive care unit. His wife, Sheila, says he is "holding his own" and is asking for your prayers.

Friends who may want to send cards may send them to him at: VA Hospital, Intensive Care Unit, 1400 VFW Parkway, West Roxbury, MA 02132.

FINDING THE TIME: Joseph Dennehy was honored Sunday by the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post as its "Citizen of the Year" for his work with veterans and other worthy causes including the Salvation Army.

DENNEHY

Program Chairman Irving Isaacson noted that when he visited Dennehy at home to inform him of his selection as recipient of the award, he noticed a 25-hour clock on the wall.

"Well," mused Dennehy, "I found I just couldn't do all the things I wanted to do in 24 hours."

THOSE OF US who were fortunate to have had her in school were saddened by the recent death of Mary DiBartholomeo, one of those really dedicated teachers you remember with fondness all your life.

Her teaching career spanned 40 years, most of it at the old Pollard School in Quincy Point. She was my fifth grade teacher there and I remember her as someone special. A teacher who really cared about her students and their future.

She helped launch me on a newspaper career with an article I wrote in her class and was published in the old Quincy News. I've never forgotten the thrill of seeing my first by-line.

When it came to outstanding teachers the Pollard had them--a lot of them. Names that still come to mind include Ruth Abbiatti, Mildred Litchfield, Irma Salvucci, Esther Sullivan, Helen O'Connor, Beatrice Fitts.

A great school with great teachers. Fond memories.

THINGS YOU LEARN by checking the news releases that come pouring in. According to the Kennedy Library, Harry Truman once said Abigail Adams probably "would have been a better president than her husband."

Well, women's equality would probably have gotten off to an earlier start.

'Osteoporosis' Topic At Hospital Nov. 13

Dr. Charlotte Richards, Crown Ob/Gyn, will present "Osteoporosis" on Wednesday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Education Center at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St.

Dr. Richards will discuss what a person can do to prevent osteoporosis, and how one can strengthen his or her bones before it's too late.

The free Wellness Wednesday program is part of an ongoing series of monthly health education programs for the community sponsored by Quincy Hospital.

Advance registration is required. For more information or to register, call 376-4018.

Opponents of the Electoral College system point out that it has already allowed three candidates to become president, whose closest opponent received more popular votes. The three were: John Quincy Adams in 1824, Rutherford B. Hayes in 1876, and Benjamin Harrison in 1888.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD shows the Sevigny's world famous Fried Clam shop on Southern Artery as it appeared in the late 1940's. At the time the Artery was Route 3, the main road to Cape Cod and Nantasket Beach. Near 7E's were Morey Pearl's, Dutchland Farms, the Mayflower Diner, and later, the first Dunkin Donuts, Howard Johnson's and the Leaning Tower of Pizza. The back of this card says that 7E's is the 'Only place of its kind in the country using the most modern and largest equipment for the frying of seafood.' Everyone who had them knew 7E's were the best clams. This shop was in what is now Stop & Shop's parking lot. 7E's also made the 'worlds' thinnest' ribbon candy at their factory on Woodbine St. in Wollaston.

Community Groups Bring Real Community Power

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recently, the Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association celebrated its fifth anniversary.

As someone who has always been active in whatever community I lived in, I commend the association on its anniversary.

Community groups bring real community power. When I lived in Charlestown, I was on the boards of both the JFK Family Service Center and the Charlestown E.D.C. In Charlestown we learned often the hard way that unless you speak up nothing happens. When the City of Boston tried to shut down one of the two firehouses in town, townies took over the firehouse and bodily prevented the city from removing the fire apparatus. As a result, the city caved in and re-activated the firehouse and engine company.

Recently, folks here in Quincy's Montclair neighborhood stood up to Stop & Shop's plans to obtain a beer and wine license. Neighborhood residents just said "no." They were supported by four ward councillors and a petition signed by 1,200 Quincy residents nearby the new Super Stop & Shop being constructed on Newport Avenue. However, when the matter reached the city's Licensing Board, the board voted 3-2 to grant the beer and wine license despite the overwhelming opposition of the surrounding neighborhood.

The story could have ended there but the neighborhood didn't give up and have brought the matter to a higher court, spearheaded by Kevin Coughlin, a Montclair resident, parent and association member, the neighborhood is now appealing to the ABCC in Boston.

I agree with Kevin Coughlin and his Montclair supporters, there is no real need to give Stop & Shop a beer and wine license. There are already numerous smaller package stores in the area serving peoples' drinking needs. One would think that the police, fire and health commissioners would have understood the neighborhood's concerns but apparently their concerns didn't register on the Richter-scale of beer and wine.

Kudos to Ward 3 Councillor Pat McDermott who has been out front on this issue truly being a voice for his constituents and his neighborhood. I was shocked at a statement reported in The Patriot Ledger that the mayor was going to remain in a seemingly neutral position on this licensing board decision. He is the mayor. He appointed these folks. He can't be neutral! But neutrality is politically correct with this mayor. He says he's neutral over Stop & Shop. It's one thing to be neutral in partisan politics but how can you be neutral over Montclair's quality of life?

As the mayor, he should be standing up and speaking out for the Montclair neighborhood's position. You can run from making a decision but you can not hide from its consequences, can you?

Quincy isn't just downtown. Quincy is its neighborhoods. Once again, kudos to the Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association and good luck to Kevin Coughlin and his supporters with the ABCC. Keep on keeping on because in the end, neighborhoods have to take care of themselves in this city.. City Hall appears A.W.O.L.

A 'Thank You' From QHS Health, Human Services Programs

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As the students and instructors in the Health and Human Services Programs at Quincy High School prepare to begin their curriculum based on internships, we want to express our thanks to the "village" that helps "raise our children."

These 125 students, while moving through academic courses, add a career focus to their day. Taking their skills and knowledge into the field, these young people will work alongside community specialists for real life experiences. None of this could happen without the support of our "village."

Students travel from as far away as Braintree Hospital and as close as the YMCA and Harvard Pilgrim Health. Some students have experiences in community preschools and area nursing homes, including Eventide and Quincy Rehabilitation. Quincy Public Schools places students with teachers, working in the gymnasiums and classrooms. We have been very fortunate to have all of these professional placements and the success of our students is built on them.

Special thanks, however, need to go to the staff and administration of Quincy Hospital. They have helped us to lay the foundation for all our external placements. The professionals at the hospital have embraced our program and students, they have helped us work out the kinks, worked on our curriculum, joined our advisory board, provided multiple placements and assisted with transportation. Quincy Hospital has consistently provided professional appropriate experiences. We appreciate their support and the support of all the community agencies.

These partnerships, together with strong academic courses, help us to move our students into colleges and careers. Seventy-five percent of our 1996 graduates are pursuing health and education careers at two- and four-year colleges. Another 20 percent have entered employment in their career path. This collaborative effort serves our students as they become the Health and Human Service providers for the future of our community.

Overflow Crowd At Grossman Funeral

Nov. 7 - 13
1968
28 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Reuben Grossman, founder and chairman of the board of Grossman's Inc., was buried this week following a funeral at Aharath Achim Synagogue on School St.

An overflow crowd attended the service presided over by Rabbi David Jacobs of Temple Beth El and Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue.

Six hundred employees attended a memorial service at the company's warehouse on Union St. in Braintree, with all 75 stores in the company's chain closed for a four-hour memorial.

Rev. Chester Porteus led a tribute at the Rotary Club.

WIDENING OF COPELAND ST. VOTED

The Planning Board voted to widen Copeland St. 16 feet from Furnace Brook Parkway to Cross St., necessitating land taking from the parcel being developed by School Committee member Dr. Charles Djerf, Louis Cassini, and others.

The vote came following a request by Ward 4 Councillor Albert Barilaro for a traffic study of the area because of planned developments in the area. A vote on Miller St. was tabled until an engineering study was prepared.

RETIRED TEACHERS ELECT OFFICERS

Katherine Horrigan, former head of the math department at North Quincy High School, was elected president of the Retired Teachers Association at its meeting at the Quincy Point Congregational Church. There were 125 in attendance.

Graton Howland, former business education teacher, was elected co-president. Others presiding were Catherine Black, secretary; Ruth Waring, co-secretary; Karl Briggs, treasurer; and Harold Kidder, co-treasurer.

Accent On Quincy Center

By BRUCE ARONS
Quincy Center Development Coordinator

Business Map, Directory Available By End Of Month

Did you know that we have over 400 businesses located within Quincy Center; providing a wide range of goods and services to residents and visitors alike?

Thanks to shared support by The Quincy 2000 Corporation and the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association, I have been able to produce a Quincy Center Business Map/Directory indentifying and locating each of these businesses. Free copies will be made available to the public by the end of this month. I will provide you with more details on the availability of this brochure in my next column.

Thanks to the Quincy 2000 Corporation's Commercial Property Improvement Program, The Blue Note Exchange on lower Hancock Street is undergoing extensive renovations. Co-owners Jerry Cronin and Dennis O'Connor gave me a tour of the improvements currently in progress. They have completely gutted the interior and are rebuilding the entertainment, dining and lunge areas. A new exterior facade is due to be installed shortly. If you like good food and Blues & Jazz, give the new place a try. Their grand opening is scheduled for the middle of this month.

Speaking of grand openings, an official ribbon cutting took place at the Siam House Restaurant on Hancock Street this past week. Councillors Paul Harold and Patrick McDermott did the honors. I sampled the buffet following the ceremony. If you want to eat some of the best Thai Cuisine available in Quincy Center--check it out!

Button, button, who's got the button?? First Night Quincy Buttons are available for sale at Stop & Shop, Shaw's, Dunkin Donuts, Osco Drug Store, Old City Hall and Tedeschi Food Shops. Quincy Square is the family place to be on New Year's Eve.

A new kiosk has been installed in McIntyre Mall. Panels are being inserted with both historical and directional information for pedestrian traffic in Quincy Center. This is another example of the on-going support from Mayor James Sheets and City Hall in continuing to make both Quincy Center and the city more "user-friendly" to both residents and visitors.

❑

Until next time, be sure to check out what's "happening" in downtown Quincy Center--and feel free to write me with your comments and suggestions. (Mailing Address: The Quincy 2000 Corp., 1250 Hancock St., Suite 802N, Quincy, MA 02169.)

'Coping With The Holidays' At Quincy Hospital Nov. 17

"Coping With The Holidays," a special program for those who have suffered the loss of a loved one, will be offered Sunday, Nov. 17 from 3 to 4:30 p.m. in Conference Rooms B & C at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St.

The program will be led by Rev. Ann Rearick, director of the hospital's Pastoral Care Department. Refreshments will be served. Those in attendance are asked to bring a flower to be added to a "bouquet of memories."

Space is limited and advance registration is required. For more information, call 376-5502.

Entertainment Booked For First Night Quincy

All entertainment and entertainment locations have been booked for First Night Quincy, announce City Councillor and First Night Chairman Michael Cheney and Honorary Chairman Mayor James Sheets.

There are 21 locations this year and, as in past years, the theme will be multi-cultural family entertainment.

Among the highlights this year will be Irish entertainment at Presidents Place as well as Italian and Greek music and the annual International Food Festival at the Quincy Center for Technical Education gymnasium.

A special feature will be an Old Time TV and Radio Show starring local television personality Rex Traiker.

The fireworks display which again will close the festivities will be sponsored this year by Roche Bros. Supermarkets in celebration of the first year of operation of its Quincy store. Cheney said the Laser Light Show introduced at last year's First Night also is expected to return.

Another returning attraction will be the Festival of Lights Parade sponsored by Lappen's Auto Parts. Prizes of $1,000, $500 and $250 will be awarded for the three best-dressed pickup trucks. Applications for the event will be available at Lappen's beginning in mid-November.

Other events will include hat and mask-making, face painting, rides, and an Ice Sculpture Village. All sculptures are sponsored by local corporations.

For more information about the event, call Cheney or Rick Iacobucci at the First Night Office, 376-1071.

Merrill Lynch Offering Free Holiday Phone Calls To Seniors

Senior citizens may reach out and touch family and friends for free this holiday season, thanks to a program sponsored by Merrill Lynch called "Christmas Calls."

On Dec. 7, Merrill Lynch will open its office and phone lines to seniors, allowing them to make up to one hour of free long-distance phone calls to anywhere in the world. The office is at 2 Batterymarch Park.

Seniors will be selected to participate by the Quincy Council on Aging. Slots are limited and reservations are required.

To reserve time, call 376-1245 or 376-1243.

The deadline for reservations is Friday, Nov. 22. Once selected you will receive a confirmation in the mail.

Harvest Fair Friday, Saturday At Bethany

Bethany Congregational Church, Spear and Coddington St., Quincy Center, will host its annual Harvest Fair Friday and Saturday.

The celebration will open Friday with a Pot Roast Dinner at 6 p.m. Adult tickets are $6.50 and children under 12 will pay $3. The fair will open following the dinner at 7 p.m.

The event will resume Saturday at 9:30 a.m. Coffee and doughnuts will be available at the snack bar in the morning and a sandwich, chowder and dessert luncheon will be available at 11:30 a.m.

All of the fair tables will be located on the first floor of the parish house which is wheelchair accessible. There will be candies, jewelry, handmade articles, decorations, Christmas items, home-baked goods, plants, serendipity items and a silent auction.

There also will be face painting, toys, games and balloons for the children.

Tai-Chi Program At Ward 2 Center

A new Tai-Chi Program has begun at the Ward 2 Community Center, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

Tai-Chi, the ancient Chinese art of exercise, is designed to relieve stress and improve one's sense of harmony and well-being. The course, taught by Master De On An, an experienced teacher is held Wednesdays at 3 p.m. and Thursdays at 1 p.m.

For more information, visit the center or call 376-1376.

ARTHRITIS DRUGS: ALL IN GOOD TIME

There is a time for everything, and in the case of arthritis, the time of day that medications are taken, can make all the difference in the quality of relief received. For rheumatoid arthritis in which pain often peaks in the morning, the optimal time to take the nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDS) that are typically prescribed may be after the evening meal. This is because NSAIDS are most effective when taken at least two hours before pain occurs. Also, common side effects of the drugs (stomach upset, headache, anxiety) are least bothersome during sleep. In osteoarthritis, the most common form of arthritis, midday may be the best time for medication, as pain and stiffness are often at their worst later in the day. Everyone's symptoms are different, and careful monitoring of pain and timing of medication may as much as double the effectiveness of treatment.

P.S. "Chronotherapy" is the technical name for the growing practice of working out the timing of when drugs are best taken.

Properly treating this disease involves having a physician who keeps up with the latest pharmacological advances. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I specialize in heart disease. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Hours by appointment. We're at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions at 472-2550.

Standish Ave. Meeting Tonight

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin has scheduled a neighborhood meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers regarding Standish Avenue.

Durkin said the purpose of the meeting is to gauge whether there is support for making Standish Avenue a one-way street. A City Council order was introduced by Durkin earlier this year calling for Standish Ave. to be made one-way during morning and evening commuting time. Durkin said he received a neighborhood petition and input from a neighborhood meeting supporting the one-way.

"The one-way signs have been erected but remain covered pending a plan that would ensure orderly traffic flow once the signs are unveiled.

"Since the one-way signs have gone up," Durkin said, "I have received many telephone calls in opposition to making Standish Avenue one-way. I have always had serious reservations about the usefulness and ramifications of creating a one-way; however, it was my impression that is what neighbors wanted."

Durkin said making Standish Avenue and surrounding streets safer "for us all" is a top priority.

In a letter to constituents, Durkin pointed out the city has taken several steps to curb speeding and improve safety on Standish Avenue. Measures taken include:

•Stepping up speed limit enforcement with speed traps.

•Cutting back tree branches and adding street lights to improve lighting.

•Placing reflectors on the road dividing line.

•Placing stop signs at Old Colony and Standish, Standish and Hancock, and Hancock and Southern Artery.

•Painting crosswalks at two locations.

The city plans to purchase a portable radar trailer which, upon Durkin's request, will first be used on Standish Avenue.

Durkin urges area residents to attend tonight's meeting and express opinions.

SHARRON BEALS, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay in Squantum, presents a certificate of appreciation to Mayor James Sheets during recent press conference at which plans for an Aviation History Info Center at Beechwood were announced. Beals gave the certificate to Sheets to thank him for a proclamation he presented to her which she read at the recent Harriet Quimby Research Conference in Long Island, N.Y. Quimby, America's first woman pilot, would be among those honored at the Info Center.

HARRIET QUIMBY, the first woman pilot in the United States, was killed along with a companion when her plane crashed in the bay near the former Harvard Aviation Field, now the site of Beechwood on the Bay in Squantum. Miraculously, the plane she was flying was not damaged.

Aviation History Center Planned At Beechwood

An Aviation History Info Center is being organized at Beechwood on the Bay in Squantum in honor of the city's longtime affiliation with aviation.

The announcement was made at a recent press conference in the office of Mayor James Sheets by Sharron Beals, Beechwood executive director. Beals was one of eight people from across the country to give a presentation at the recent second annual Harriet Quimby Research Conference in Long Island, N.Y.

"Quincy is the birthplace of New England's aviation," she said.

Beals said the new center will:

•Provide information and education pertaining to the Beechwood site, formerly the location of the Harvard Aviation Field and later the Dennison Airport.

•Pay tribute to Quincy's early aviation history.

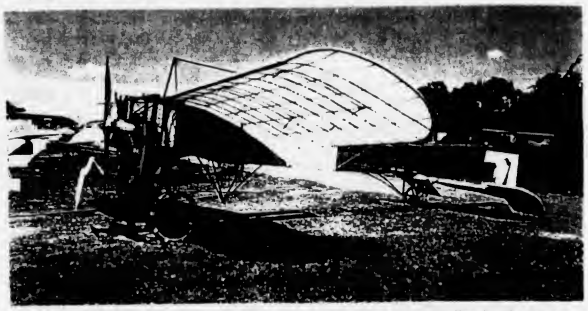
•Promote and educate about Quincy's "First Two Ladies of the Air": Quimby, the first woman pilot in America, who was killed along with a companion at the Squantum site in a 1912 plane crash--despite the fact that the plane, which went down in the nearby bay, somehow escaped damage--and Amelia Earhart, who flew from the site from 1925 to 1928.

An advisory committee for the center also has been selected. It consists of Beals, Peter O'Connell of Marina Bay Company, Henry Bosworth of The Quincy Sun, Atty. George Burke, Tom Galvin of Boston Gear, Don Uvanitte of Mahoney & Wright Insurance, aviation historian and author Frank Delear and David Duneen, president of both the Mansfield Municipal Airport and the Massachusetts Airport Managers Association.

Beals said the Beechwood site currently lacks the space for aviation center but plans are still in the works.

She also thanked Sheets for a proclamation he gave her declaring Oct. 19 and 20 "Harriet Quimby Days" in Quincy. The proclamation received enthusiastic applause when she read it at the conference in Long Island, according to Beals, who presented Sheets with a certification of appreciation for the gesture.

Beals noted that the papers she and seven others presented at the conference will be put on display in the Smithsonian Institution. She added that Quincy will host the Harriet Quimby Conference in 1998 following next year's event in Michigan.



PLANE THAT PILOT Harriet Quimby and a companion were traveling in, the same model as this one, was not damaged when it crashed into the bay near the former Harvard Aviation Field in Squantum, which later became the Dennison Airport and today is Beechwood on the Bay. Quimby was the country's first woman pilot.

TRACTION CONTROL

Along with anti-lock brakes and airbags, traction control is one of the more desirable safety and handling features to come along in recent years. Without any-input from the driver, traction control works -with an automobile's - engine-management computer and/or antilock braking system (ABS) to help maintain control during acceleration in extreme situations. In the event that sensors detect wheel slippage, some traction control systems work by braking the appropriate wheel(s) to improve low-speed traction on a slippery surface, while others employ a combination of braking and reduced throttle to maintain both traction and stability at a wider range of speeds. As effective as both traction control and ABS are at increasing safety and handling, neither should be thought of as a license to drive faster or more recklessly. Each adds safety during promising circumstances that drivers should not go out of their ways to induce.

When drivers see an ABS traction-control light flash on their instrument panels, it means that they are either driving too fast or braking too abruptly and the car's safety systems must take over to compensate for the error.

Park Dept., Avalon Clean Up Quarry St. Open Space

The Quincy Park Department recently teamed with volunteer workers from Avalon Properties to clean up a city-owned, nine-acre parcel of open space on Quarry St.

The property, recently acquired by the city, is located between the Elks Lodge and one of the Avalon developments. Park Department crews and volunteers cleared more than 15 feet of brush along the sidewalk to improve safety in the area and to spruce up the area aesthetically.

The land, once used as a construction dump, has become completely overgrown by brush and thickets. Officials said the recent clean-up effort was the first step in opening up the property with the intention of allowing residents access to the parcel. The Park Department soon will return to the property with some heavy machinery to clear and grade certain areas of the property.

The Avalon volunteer group, led by Senior Development Director Bill McLaughlin, was instrumental in completing the amount of work that was accomplished. Additional assistance was provided by Anneli Johnson of the Quincy Public Garden Task Force.

State Rep. Michael Bellotti and Ward 4 City Councillor Michael D'Amico have worked with the Park Department to ensure that the property is protected as open space. Bellotti is working on providing further protection for the land as open space and D'Amico led the local effort to have parcel officially zoned as open space.

"Our efforts on Quarry St. are another example of Mayor Sheets' commitment to provide quality open space areas for Quincy residents. With the help of Avalon and the local community, I believe we can someday have a passive recreation park at this site that the city will be proud of," said Park Department Executive Director Thomas Koch.

Quincy College New Course Schedules

Quincy College will include new schedules for courses beginning Jan. 27, in addition to the traditional hours.

The new format will allow students to design courses around work and home commitments.

Late afternoon classes (3:15 to 6 p.m.) will meet one day a week for 15 weeks. Each weekday will have a different menu of classes.

An intensive Saturday program is also being introduced specifically for students who are highly motivated and capable of independent study. The schedule requires only five Saturday classes, lasting from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Double-Up Program is being continued this spring, with two courses back-to-back on the same night.

Registration begins Nov. 4. For more information, call 984-1650.

DR. JEREMIAH RYAN gives his address after being inaugurated as Quincy College's fourth president during ceremonies last Friday at United First Parish Church in Quincy Center. Ryan pledged the college will be an institution that reaches out into the community in as many ways as possible.

Ryan Pledges College Support Of Community

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Pledging that Quincy College will be an institution that serves the community, Dr. Jeremiah Ryan was installed as the fourth president of the college during ceremonies last week at United First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

Among those in attendance were city and college officials, friends and family members, including Ryan's wife Gail. Keynote speaker for the event was University of Massachusetts President William Bulger.

The church was nearly full despite the decision of some college faculty members not to attend because they are not satisfied with the way current contract negotiations are being handled.

Ryan, 46, who began his duties in March after being appointed by the college's Board of Governors, said in his inaugural address the challenge before the college is to reach into the community to bring people together and to erase the boundaries between them.

"I am profoundly honored to serve as the fourth president of Quincy College," he said. "With the strong leadership of our governors, faculty, staff, staff, students, business, city and community partners, we will commit, as an institution, to journey past those boundaries into the community, to foster the mutual compassion, understanding and trust that are so crucial for the achievement of freeing people's minds to work and give to their community.

"And to that end, I promise you my energy, my enthusiasm, and my loyalty: to this college, to every student and to colleagues in the faculty and on the staff. My every day will stand as a celebration of what we build together, a college dedicated to serving the community and to venturing on new journeys every day to provide accessible educational opportunities that will serve all the people of Quincy and our neighbors, whether on the South Shore or around the world."

Ryan served as vice president for marketing, planning and development at Harford Community College in Bel Air, Md., before coming to Quincy. A 24-year veteran of his profession, he worked at three different community colleges in New York before starting at Harford in 1990 and also served on a number of city and county boards in New York, including the Binghamton City Council.

Bulger, for his part, said he was honored to be speaking at Ryan's inauguration.

"This is one of the great privileges of my lifetime," he said. "I'm a great admirer of Jerry Ryan. He knows what our purpose is and he recognizes that all of us in education have a very noble purpose: to provide people with the opportunity to learn."

Bulger added that while there are a number of "scientific disciplines" being developed in order to benefit today's society, things such as philosophy, the Judeo-Christian ethic and the humanities also should be stressed in college and universities.

WILLIAM BULGER, president of the University of Massachusetts, was keynote speaker during the inauguration of Dr. Jeremiah Ryan as the fourth president of Quincy College. Buiger called himself "a great admirer" of Ryan.

"It's a delight to be here today with a man (Ryan) who appreciates every bit of that," said Bulger.

Mayor James Sheets, who is on leave from a teaching position at the college, spoke briefly of its history as a institution initially founded as an alternative for "blue-collar" Quincy residents who could not afford such schools as Harvard University or the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"And Quincy College, today, is part of the very heart and very soul of this city," said the mayor.

Daniel Raymondi, chairman of the Board of Governors, installed Ryan as president during the investiture ceremony. Rev. Michael Wayne Walker, another board member, gave the invocation and benediction.

Quincy College currently has approximately 5,000 students from 50 countries and five continents at its campuses in Quincy and Plymouth.

Husband And Wife House Painting Team:

'Call It Love On A Ladder'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mike and Janice Johnson of Quincy are two people who have had their share of ups and downs together.

Up and down a ladder, that is.

The Johnsons own M & J Residential Service, which provides painting, landscaping, carpentry and other services to area homes and businesses. And they are, in all likelihood, the only married couple in the area that runs such a business together.

The two work side by side, 50 to 60 hours a week, painting houses and performing a host of other tasks. While one might think that could lead to some tension--spending so much time together can often wear on the nerves of some--Mike Johnson said it never happens.

"We have such a good relationship at home and at work," he said during a recent interview while on break from painting a home on Chicatabot Road.

Janice agreed.

"He keeps me laughing," she said.

"Yeah, I am funny," Mike added. "I'm a self-proclaimed funny man."

The Johnsons, however, take their business very seriously, and the work is made even more difficult by the fact that they don't just own M & J Residential Service--they're the only employees.

Still, Mike noted, the fact they have no one else to pay allows them to provide quality service at a more affordable price.

"We don't have the overhead, so we can afford to keep our prices low," he said. "We can give our customers whatever they need at a reasonably low price. They can depend on that. And we always get repeat customers."

The Johnsons, who have been married six years and have painted together for the past five, both have more than a decade's worth of experience in the business. Working for others, they said, convinced them they'd be better off being their own bosses.

"Working for other people," Janice noted, "is sometimes like this: you're supposed to scrape, paint, and more, but you're told, 'Just paint it and get out of there.' It's awful."

"They don't have the pride in their work," Mike added, nodding.

Not that owning their own business is always a picture-perfect situation, either. Sometimes, they noted, they are greeted with a chauvinism of sorts when people see Janice doing what is traditionally considered to be a man's job.

"People can be kind of leery of a woman doing it," Mike said. "And the funny thing is, she's a faster painter than me."

Business has been healthy, they noted. The Johnsons have completed more than 500 jobs since they began working together.

"It's been something," Mike said.

M & J Residential Service has not done too much advertising. The business has attracted customers, according to the Johnsons, mainly through word-of-mouth and the handing out of flyers and business cards.

The Johnsons, who have two daughters, Jennifer and Meredith, and a son, Jimmy, also have no plans to expand the business. For now, they said, it will just be the two of them.

"You can call it love on a ladder," Mike said with a laugh.

hunting received similar support from students and parents alike. Question One received 3,163 "yes" votes and 744 "no" votes from students, while the adult vote was 22,468 (72,25 percent) for "yes" and 8,630 (27,75 percent) for "no."

Other votes were limited to high school students.

In the one contested race limited to Grades 9-12, City Councillor Timothy Cahill defeated incumbent Robert Hall Jr. by a vote of 1,799 to 378 to win the Norfolk County treasurer's seat. Cahill also won the adult election, 27,777 votes (80.93 percent) to 6,504 (18.95).

High school students' totals for the non-races:

State Sen. Michael Morrissey received 1,988 votes with Reps. Michael Bellotti, Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano getting 370, 557 and 151 respectively.

County Commissioners John Gillis of Quincy and William O'Donnell received 1,368 and 1,444 student votes respectively. Register of Probate Thomas Hughes and Governor's Councillor Chris Iannella Jr., also unopposed, got respective votes of 1,888 and 1,935 in the Kids Vote Program.

6,504, or 80.93 percent to 18.95 percent.

Quincy went "Yes" on Question 1, approving the banning of certain traps for fur-bearing animals and prohibiting certain methods of hunting bear or bobcat. The vote was "Yes" 22,468 to 8,630 "no."

Of Quincy's 51,000 registered voters, 72.28 percent, somewhat lower than expected, went to the polls.

The results from the city's 30 voting precincts were completed shortly before 10 p.m.

Believed to be the fasted count in a Presidential-state election in the city's history, it was attributed to the new speedy optical scan voting system.

In claiming victory at a party at the Quincy Sons of Italy, Delahunt told supporters, "I'll never forget you. I'll never forget the working men and women who are the middle class. And I'll never forget the leadership of organized labor."

The Congressman-elect then shared his vision for the future. "This country is about treating everyone with dignity. We cannot allow this nation to become a nation of have and have nots because that's socially divisive.

"My vision is of a nation which is a community . . . one big happy family."

Teague conceded defeat at about 10:15 p.m. at his Plymouth headquarters.

"We lost some tough races today. There was nothing else we could have done," Teague told supporters. The Republican state representative said he harbored no regrets.

Cahill said his victory was due to the non-stop efforts of both himself and those working for his campaign.

"I attribute it to the hard work we did, not just me, but all of my supporters," he said. "It feels good. It's been a tremendous organization, especially since the primary. We didn't leave anything to chance, and we kept working. And now, I'm looking forward to proving to certain people who didn't have faith in me that I can do the job."

Cahill piled up some impressive numbers, both in Quincy, where he took 81 percent of the vote, and outside of the city. He won 61 percent of the vote in Norwood, where he lost in the primary. In Walpole, a traditionally Republican town, he was winning, 51 to 48 percent with two precincts left at press time. He won 64 percent of the vote in Brookline, and numbers in Weymouth were coming in at press time two to one in his favor.

A Cahill supporter said he also won victories in Holbrook, Randolph and Stoughton, although final numbers were not known.

Regarding his City Council seat, Cahill said, "My plans haven't changed. I plan on serving out my term and not seeking re-election. That was my plan even if I lost this election, but winning it certainly makes it easier."

Re-elected unopposed and their Quincy vote:

Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella, Jr., 25,853; State Senator Michael Morris, 28,206; state Reps. Michael Bellotti, 11,272; Stephen Tobin, 12,582; Ronald Mariano, 4,852; Register of Probate Thomas Patrick Hughes of Quincy, 26,022; County Commissioners John Gillis of Quincy, 27,969; and William O'Donnell of Norwood, 10,161.

City Applies For Aid

Disaster Recovery Center Opened For Flood Victims

The Federal Emergency Management Agency and Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency have opened a Disaster Recovery Center in Quincy to assist those impacted by the Oct. 20 nor'easter.

In addition, the city has applied for federal and state aid and should be reimbursed for more than 87 percent of damage costs caused by the storm, according to a top MEMA official.

The Recovery Center, open daily from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., is located at the National Guard Armory at 1000 Hancock St. (next to Central Middle School). FEMA and MEMA have established the center to allow residents and business owners who have experienced storm damage to file claims for federal and state aid.

The Oct. 20 storm poured 8 1/4 inches of rain in Quincy and flooded homes and businesses throughout the city and state. Other Disaster Recovery Centers have been opened in Boston, Lawrence, Peabody, and Woburn.

Thomas Rodger, MEMA Area II Director for Southeastern Massachusetts, said residents may apply for housing, tax, unemployment or agricultural assistance as well as grants for special needs or home or business loans. Those seeking assistance should visit the center at the armory or call 1-800-462-7585 (TTY 1-800-462-7585 for the hearing- or speech-impaired).

Rodger also noted that the city applied for federal and state aid during a public assistance meeting at Quincy High School on Monday, the same day the Recovery Center opened.

"The city has asked us to include them in the reimbursement process for infrastructure damage," he said.

Rodger said it is not known yet what the financial impact of the storm will total.

"This is just the start of the process, and it's a long process," he said.

He added, however, that the process calls for FEMA to reimburse Quincy and other communities for 75 percent of all storm-related expenditures--including overtime for city workers--while MEMA and the city each will contribute 12.5 percent.

RIBBON-CUTTING CEREMONY Monday marked the opening of a Disaster Recovery Center at the National Guard Armory, 1000 Hancock St., Quincy. The center, open daily from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., was established by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency to assist those who experienced flooding or were otherwise impacted by the Oct. 20 nor'easter. From left are Thomas Rodger, MEMA Area II Director for Southeastern Massachusetts; Police Chief Francis Mullen, Mayor James Sheets, MEMA State Director Peter LaPorte and Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano.

SPOTLIGHT ON BUSINESS

'We Love What We Do'

Petals & Pearls Makes Bride's Day More Special

PETALS & PEARLS, a business specializing in wedding flowers, gifts and accessories, located at 429 Washington St., Quincy, recently held its ribbon-cutting ceremony. Attending the ceremony were (left to right): Dr. Patrick Curtin, father of co-owner Mary Curtin, Curtin, Walter Frazer and Joseph Mannarino of Quincy 2000, Mayor James Sheets, Katheryn Rose Hadfield, niece of co-owner Marcia Brown, City Councillor Timothy Cahill, Brown, her father, Stanton Brown, and John O'Connor of Citizen's Bank.

(Quincy Sun Photo/Tom Gorman)

By LIAM FITZGERALD

When she was 10 years old, Marcia Brown would pick flowers out of her parents' garden (much to their dismay) and arrange them in vases.

Thirty years later, all this flower arranging paid off for Brown, who recently opened Petals & Pearls, 429 Washington St., Quincy, a business specializing in wedding flowers, gifts and accessories, with her business partner, Mary Curtin.

"It was always my dream," said Brown, 41, who previously worked 20 years in the hotel business. "Now I'm doing what I have always enjoyed doing. We both like making the bride's most special day a little more special."

Brown and Curtin, who met five years ago at Rittner's Floral Design School, both worked on weddings out of their house before opening Petals & Pearls together.

"We were very successful out of our homes, thanks to a lot of word of mouth," said Curtin, 30, a former caterer. "It was growing a lot, so we decided to work out of one space."

Graduates of the Quincy 200 Retail Incubation Program, Brown and Curtin then began looking for a location in Quincy to open their business.

One night, they stopped at 429 Washington St. and knew right away it was the perfect spot for Petals & Pearls.

"I saw this empty space, stood in the street one night at midnight and said, 'This is it,'" said Brown, a former Quincy resident who now lives in Hull.

"This had the look of what we wanted: great location, curbside appeal right on the corner," said Curtin, who lives in Marblehead. "It used to be a dart store, now it's a Victorian flowery place. And I really like Quincy a lot, having made a lot of friends in businesses around town, so this is a great place to be."

In business since May 1, Brown and Curtin are ecstatic about how the local community has welcomed Petals & Pearls to the area.

"We're thrilled with the response and support of our customers, Quincy residents, friends and family," said Brown. "It's like our own personal welcome wagon."

A typical day for Brown and Curtin includes meeting with a bride to discuss her ideas about, among other topics, the wedding flowers, decorations, gifts and accessories.

"It all starts with a consultation," said Curtin. "The bride tells us what she likes and doesn't like, maybe she'll cut out pictures or key words to describe what she wants. Then we calculate an estimation of what we need."

Curtin said while they also use wedding design books and floral books and take classes on floral design and reception design, they use their own creativity to make the bride's wishes come to fruition.

"Marcia does the majority of buying and is always trying something new to keep the creative energy flowing," said Curtin.

Once they are finished designing, they deliver the items to the bride's house and set up the church and the reception hall before anyone arrives.

"We're very flexible," said Curtin. "We'll work hard behind the scenes at the reception site and church before the service starts. We'll go the extra mile to make it happen. We'll go to the house, pin boutonnieres, show how to hold the bouquets, attend to every last detail. We're very service oriented; we want to make sure the bride's vision of wedding happens and more."

Brown concurs: "You put yourself in their shoes. This is the most special day of her life, and we want to fulfill part of her dream."

Despite all the work that goes into each wedding, Brown and Curtin enjoy what they do, especially when the bride expresses her gratitude for making her wedding special all the way around.

"We love what we do and we rise to the challenge of every wedding," said Curtin. "It's fun, because every wedding is different. We take a lot of time to get to know the bride, because the flowers should be a reflection of her personality. The flowers tie into the theme of the wedding and bring it alive.

"For the bride to take the time to react, you can't put it into words. It's such a great feeling when you exceed her expectations. We've had the fathers of brides call up and compliment us on our work. Those are the ways we measure our success."

Along with the flowers (fresh or silk), numerous other items are involved in creating a wedding scene: balloons, custom favors, custom veils, jewelry, garters, ring bearer pillows, toasting glasses, elegant guest and wedding books, wedding invitations and thank you cards and calligraphy services.

Another service Petals & Pearls provides is custom pressed flower design, in which the bride's bouquet is pressed in a pattern and placed in a frame.

Also offered are Victorian photo albums imported from England, which contain floral artwork that frame each photograph, and bridal portraits painted by Edwina Caci, a Copley portrait artist.

While Petals & Pearls prepares gifts and accessories for weddings and many other occasions (including showers, birthdays and holiday parties), Curtin said arranging the flowers is their top priority.

"We specialize in wedding work, with the main thing being the flowers, but we have a large selection of gifts and accessories," she said. "We'll put something together and wrap it up in a gift basket. Or people bring in items, and we'll make special baskets for bridal showers."

With all the success they have had in the past six months, Brown and Curtin will see the business grow, as well as the personalized service they provide their customers.

"Our mission is to keep a personalized touch and focus on what's important to the bride," said Curtin.

Brown agrees: "We want to keep the services growing, but also keep the personalized service. Right now, we're happy with what we're doing. We've built up a real trust with people."

Petals & Pearls is open Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Thursday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Consultations may be made by appointment by calling 770-3778.

QCAP Homebuyers Program Receives Bank Donation

Quincy Community Action Programs Inc. (QCAP) has received a sizable donation from the First Trade Union Savings Bank.

The money will benefit QCAP's First-Time Homebuyers Program, which offers workshops and individual counseling designed to educate families of all income levels on every aspect of the homebuying process. By attending the workshops, participants become eligible for many different mortgage options offered through Mass. Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) and other financial institutions.

QUINCY COMMUNITY ACTION PROGRAMS recently received a donation from the First Trade Union Savings Bank which will benefit its First-Time Homebuyers Program. QCAP Housing Program Director Alisa Gardner accepts the check from Jim Flaherty, the bank's mortgage originator.

Since the program began in 1990, QCAP has graduated over 1,400 participants. Ten workshop series are offered each year, including special bilingual workshops for the Asian community and informational sessions for low-income residents of the local public housing complexes. An estimated 70 percent of QCAP's graduates purchase their first home through the program, which, to date, has included 11 families from public housing.

QCAP is the only certified homebuying counseling agency in the immediate area that is approved by MHFA to conduct First-Time Homebuying workshops and to administer the MHFA certificate.

Last year's funders of the program including the City of Quincy (through the Community Development Block Grant Program), Bank of Boston, Bank of Braintree, Citizens Bank, Hibernia Savings Bank, and South Weymouth Savings Bank.

To contribute to the program, call Debbie Kidd at 479-8181, ext. 115.

Former Ledger Buildings Sold For $450,000

The former Patriot Ledger headquarters, consisting of two buildings located at 13 Temple St. and 20 Maple St., Quincy Center, recently was sold for a price of $450,000.

The 35,000-square-foot property was sold by Low Realty Inc. and George W. Prescott Co. d/b/a Patriot Ledger to Boston United Realty Corp. Brokers for the deal were Mike Kenealy and Joe Harnan of Key Realty in Quincy.

Officials said Boston United Realty Corp. plans to completly renovate the Temple Street building for office space in order to maintain the historic integrity of the building. The Maple Street building will be demolished to provide parking for the project.

Key Realty is now marketing the property for lease and anticipates occupancy for May 1997.

The Georgian style, three-story building served as the corporate offices of The Patriot Ledger for more than 65 years.

Watershed Assn. Receives $50,000 State Grant

The Fore River Watershed Association (FRWA), an organization working to restore, protect and promote the resources of the Fore River, has received a $50,000, two-year grant from the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA).

The FRWA is a community-based organization with a membership comprised of residents of Braintree, Quincy, and Weymouth. The grant was awarded to the association by EOEA secretary Trudy Coxe during a recent ceremony in West Bridgewater.

Funds were made available to a limited number of watershed associations across the state as part of EOEA's innovative Massachusetts Watershed Initiative Capacity Building Grants Program. The announcement marks the inauguration of a multi-year, multi-million dollar commitment by the Commonwealth to environmental protection through watershed management.

The FWRA will use the grant for organizational development and public education and outreach, ensuring a sustainable organization dedicated to a watershed approach to resource management.

The Fore River is part of the Weymouth and Weir Watershed. Activities the FWRA will engage in, as a result of the grant, include expanding its water quality monitoring program, developing a five-year business plan and fundraising activities, fostering intermunicipal cooperation among Braintree, Quincy, and Weymouth on issues affecting the river, and expanding resource assessment activities.

A major thrust of association activities will be public education and outreach, including raising awareness about the Fore River and its resources among residents, developing cooperative relationships with area businesses, and building collaborative relationships with other groups working within the Fore, Back, and Weir river watersheds, all of whom share the Weymouth and Weir Watershed.

The grant requires a match from non-state sources. The FRWA has received commitments of cash and inkind support from the MWRA, U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum, Twin Rivers Technologies, the Metro-Boston Local Governance Committee of the Mass Bays Program, Braintree Water and Sewer and Planning Departments, Weymouth Planning Department, and Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development.

"Support from local businesses, government agencies, and citizens ensures the success of this project," said Katie Barrett of Quincy, treasurer and a founding member of the association. "We're grateful to those who have already made a commitment, and hope others will recognize the importance of our work and understand the need to continue these activities. We look forward to working with citizens, businesses and everyone else who has an interest in the Fore River watershed."

QHA, HUD Compromise On Percentage To Live In Senior Housing

The Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) and Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) have reached a compromise over limiting the number of younger disabled tenants living in federally-subsidized elderly housing.

According to a letter HUD has sent to the QHA, the authority may reserve 80 percent of apartments in its housing for elderly tenants. The remaining 20 percent will be available to younger people afflicted with physical handicaps, mental illness or other disabilities.

QHA Executive Director John "Jake" Comer said of the 471 apartments in federally-subsidized housing complexes for seniors, 27 to 30 percent are occupied by younger, disabled tenants.

Comer said he wanted to bring that percentage down to 15 percent because many seniors are frightened by the younger tenants, some of whom suffer from mental illness. He added, however, he is happy with a compromise of 20 percent.

Following the federal government's rejection of Quincy's proposed 15 percent limit last November, the QHA began refusing to fill apartments that became available at its three federally-subsidized senior complexes: Drohan Apartments, 170 Copeland St.; O'Brien Towers, 73 Bicknell St. and Pagnano Towers, 109 Curtis Ave.

The QHA has 49 vacant apartments in the three buildings, and a long wait listing of elderly and disabled people in search of housing.

The authority's agreement with federal officials calls for the QHA to offer the empty apartments to people on the waiting list regardless of their age or disability.

However, city officials might offer the disabled on the waiting list the alternative of getting subsidized rent at privately-owned Quincy apartments. That choice also will be available to disabled people who apply in the future for public housing or who already live in a federally-subsidized building for seniors.

The QHA has received 100 additional federal rent-subsidy certificates for disabled people as part of the agreement. The authority already distributes more than 600 such certificates to low-income families, seniors and disabled people.

Comer also said the authority received 45 rent-subsidy certificates out of 800 distributed throughout the state. In addition, he noted, the QHA was able to add a new employee who will handle relations between seniors and disabled tenants, he said.

"The City of Quincy did very well," he said.

The QHA, in addition to its federally-subsidized apartment buildings, manages seven state-subsidized facilities for seniors with a total of 470 apartments. A state law passed last year allows the QHA to limited the number of younger, disabled tenants in those buildings to 13.5 percent.

A Breakthrough in Hearing Aid Technology.

If you've been waiting for the very latest hearing technology, we have important news for you.

Starkey's new Sequel Series hearing instruments offer performance advantages unlike any hearing aid we've offered before.

To achieve this preferred level of performance, an ideal hearing aid should not contribute undesirable perceptual elements – like distortion – that can result in poor sound reproduction, especially at high levels.

Thanks to Starkey's breakthrough SMArT Systems Technology, Sequel's sophisticated anti-distortion and efficient circuitry achieves an entirely new plateau in sound quality and performance.

Quincy 2000 Elects New Board Members

Quincy 2000 Corporation elected news members of the Quincy business community to its Board of Directors at a recent annual meeting held at the Neighborhood Club.

New Board members are:

Jeremiah Ryan, president of Quincy College; Edward Keohane, president of Keohane Funeral Home, Inc.; Phyllis Godwin, chief executive officer of Granite City Electric Supply Company; and Thomas McKay, president of the South Shore Building Trades Councils.

Godwin replaces Daniel DeMarco, vice president of Campanelli Corporation. McKay replaces Thomas Broderick, immediate past president of the South Shore Building Trades Council.

"I thank DeMarco and Broderick for their service to the corporation and hope they will continue to support the activities of the organization in the future. Furthermore, I am very please with the addition of Ryan, Godwin, Keohane and McKay to the Board of Directors," said Chairman Thomas Cataldo.

The composition of the Quincy 2000 Corporation's Executive Committee did not change. Re-appointed were Chairman Cataldo, State Street Bank Realty Trust Co.; First Vice Chairman Donald Uvanitte, Mahoney and Wright Insurance; Second Vice Chairman John O'Connor III, Citizens Bank; and Immediate Past Chairman Thomas Galvin, Boston Gear.

"It has been a pleasure working closely with the officers of the Executive Committee and the entire Board," said Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino. "The outlook for Quincy's future appears bright.

"I look forward to working with the new members of the Board implement our development strategies for the City of Quincy. These new directors add a fresh perspective to our efforts and further integrate the Corporation into the community at-large."

The Quincy 2000 Corporation is Quincy's public/private partnership for economic development. Quincy 2000 has a variety of programs to encourage business development throughout the city.

FANS AT NORTH QUINCY'S game against Silver Lake Friday night watched the running back of the future, speedy junior Jason Turner, race past Laker defenders during North's 34-14 win. NQ senior tailback Brian Walsh, who has 1,340 rushing yards in seven games, said Turner "will own this league next season." (Quincy Sun Photos/Tom Gorman)

RED RAIDERS TAILBACK Brian Walsh (18) turns on the jets as Silver Lake's Andre Mendes tries to close in for the tackle. Walsh and Mendes led their respective teams in rushing yards Friday night, with Walsh picking up 212 on 22 carries and three touchdowns, while Mendes collected 147 yards on 18 carries, including a 47-yard touchdown romp.

Title Hopes On Line For North Quincy

Raiders Eye Upset At Bridgewater-Raynham

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Even before the season began, the North Quincy Red Raiders were looking forward to this game, and now it's here.

Saturday at 1:30 p.m., North Quincy visits Old Colony League foe Bridgewater-Raynham, undefeated in the league and winners of seven straight.

"I can't wait to play," said NQ senior tailback Brian Walsh, who this season has amassed 1,340 rushing yards in seven games. "We knew this would be a big game and have been looking towards it all season. Now we just have to win the game."

Despite B-R's record (7-1 overall, 5-0 OCL) and No. 6 ranking in The Boston Globe Top 20, the No. 11 Red Raiders (6-1, 4-1) know they can win the game--if they keep their mistakes to a minimum.

"We're not intimidated by any means," said Walsh. "They're a pretty big, tough team, but if we just play good football, we can hold our own. As long as we don't make any mistakes and beat ourselves, we'll have a chance to win. The team that makes the least mistakes will win."

"The kids are excited about this game," said NQ head coach Ken McPhee. "We'll certainly get off the bus ready to play. We have a shot at this (OCL title), and that's all you can ask for. That's what our rallying point is, that we have the chance to do something special, and this is just one big step."

If North does emerge victorious, it will be without senior quarterback Tom Coughlin, who separated his right shoulder on a running play against Silver Lake last Friday. McPhee said Coughlin will be inactive for Saturday's game, but may return for next week's game at Taunton or the Thanksgiving Day game against Quincy.

Senior Tim Semchenko will likely get the start at quarterback, with Chris Bregoli as his backup, said McPhee. After Coughlin went down against the Lakers, Semchenko filled in nicely, completing both of his passes for 48 yards while leading North on three scoring drives.

As every North opponent has attempted to do, B-R will look to contain Walsh and force the Red Raiders to exercise other options offensively. This doesn't bother Walsh, however.

"That's half the fun, when they think they have you covered, and you break a 40-yard run on them," he said. "Then they're wondering what happened and aren't sure what to do next.

"Besides, we have a great fullback in Mike Powers, who has had a lot of big runs this year, and a good back in Jason Turner, who'll own this league next year."

On the other side of the ball, North's defense has been solid throughout the season, though it will have its hands full with sophomore running back Doug Bessette (13 touchdowns) and the rest of the potent Trojan offense.

"He (Bessette) is coming off two bad weeks where he hasn't gone over 70 yards in either game, so I feel they may throw against us," said Walsh. "They're like us: not that big, but quick to the ball. We're looking forward to the challenge."

"They're a very formidable opponent--very strong offensively and defensively," said McPhee. "They also have a lot of weapons in Bessette, (Tim) Pauline, (Sean) Lennon and (Ken) Collins. They're a very good football team."

Knowing this, what does North Quincy have to do to win this important game?

"It's about ball control and field position," said McPhee. "We need to keep the ball out of their hands and take away the big plays.

"We need to play our best on the offensive and defensive line, make them throw the ball. If we do that, we'll certainly be in the game."

The Red Raiders were in fine form last Friday night, disposing of visiting Silver Lake, 34-14, at Veterans Memorial Stadium for their third straight victory.

Early in the opening quarter, NQ's Charlie Plaskasovitis made a leaping interception of a Jon Bond pass at the Lakers' 23. Walsh (22 carries, 212 yards, three TD's) gained 20 yards on the next play, then returned a handoff to Coughlin, who scored on a three-yard run. Jim Finn booted the first of his four successful extra points and North led, 7-0.

North added to its lead when Walsh ran 15 yards for his first touchdown of the game early in the second quarter. The senior began the drive with a 43-yard run to the Lakers' 27, and accrued 61 yards rushing on that drive alone.

The Lakers (3-5, 2-4) got on the board midway through the second quarter when Bond threw a nine-yard pass to Matt Jeffery, who tossed it to a streaking Andre Mendes, who bolted 47 yards for the score. The extra point was no good and NQ held a 14-6 advantage.

The Red Raiders responded as Walsh scored untouched on a four-yard jaunt with 45 seconds left in

Quincy Youth Soccer Round-Up

Quincy Youth Soccer playoffs got underway last weekend, with the finals for each division scheduled for this weekend, weather permitting.

Here are last weekend's playoff results:

Boys Under 10 East:

David Djerf, Kevin Shinnick and Daniel Arredondo all notched two goals as undefeated Bank of Braintree ousted Sons of Italy, 7-5.

Robert McKeever added a goal and an assist for the Bank and Mark Richards and Andrew Feurtado played well.

Tallying three times for Sons was Leo Levesque, with Alex Tringale and Kevin Barry netting single goals. Marty Rogers and Justin Grimmel, along with the rest of their teammates, played solid games.

Two goals by John Hanlon helped Carpet Revival dismiss Elks of Quincy by a 5-3 count.

Scoring single goals for the winners were Brendan Mulcahy, Alex Mendez and Tim Randall. Goalkeeper Alex Hardy and James Morrissey were key performers.

In a losing effort, Paul Lennon tallied twice and Matt Rhode added a goal. Eric Wilson chipped in with two assists and Joe Griffen had one assist.

Alex Shaffer and Sean Sullivan scored to lift L.G. Henley Carpet over Telephone Workers Co-op, 2-1. Brian Wang and Ronnie MacKenzie also played well for the victors.

Alex Mendez netted the Telephone goal, with good efforts from Chris Randall, Tommy Capral, Nick Malvesti and John Santon.

Quincy Hospital edged Keohane Funeral Home, 3-2, in a shootout.

For the Hospital, Jim Callahan and Dan Ivy scored in the shootout and Sean McIntyre netted two goals in regulation play. Goalkeepers Dean Sandonato and Joe Ceurvels, and Andrew Shea all turned in fine performances.

Frankie McKenna and Bill Glennon notched goals for Keohane during regulation play. Also playing well were Richard McDonald and Matt Tobin.

Dean Sandonato's goal in sudden death overtime lifted Quincy Hospital to a 4-3 victory over previously unbeaten Bank of Braintree.

The game was tied 3-3 after regulation and an overtime period, so the teams went to a shootout. Both teams scored twice, so a sudden death overtime was played to decide the winner.

Scoring in the shootout for the Hospital were Jim Callahan and Jonathan Griffith. In regulation play, Sean McIntyre tallied twice and Griffith notched a goal. Dan Ivy played well for the winners.

Andrew Feurtado and Robert McKeever scored in the shootout for the Bank. Daniel Arredondo, David Djerf and Kevin Shinnick netted single goals in regulation. Other key players were Dennis Magaldi, James Mullaney and Domenic Poli.

Alex Shaffer collected a hat trick as L.G. Henley Carpet downed Carpet Revival, 4-1. Sean Sullivan also tallied for Henley, which got a solid effort from the entire team.

Revival's lone goal was scored by Tim Randall. Top performers included goalkeeper Bret Martinson and Brendan Mulcahy.

Girls Under 10 East:

Berkeley Christian and Marissa Powers netted two goals each to lead North Quincy BSN to a 5-1 victory over P.M. Skoler, DMD.

For the winners, Erica Djerf scored a goal and Christian, Erin Thomas and Katie Kisielius added an assist apiece. Playing well were Molly Mansfield, Jena McEachern and Kerry O'Connell.

Lynn Gilbody netted the Skoler goal, while Lotta Snowling, Stephanie Tetreault and Lisa Griffin turned in solid efforts.

Shannon Malone scored the game's only goal to lift Quincy Rotary past Sunshine Fruit, 1-0.

Ashley Kirby, Leah Donovan and Lindsey Meyers played well for Rotary.

Caitlin Peters, on a feed from Chelsea Leonard, notched the game's only goal as Bank of Boston edged American Medical Response, 1-0. Goalkeeper Theresa Maconochie and Christine Foley were solid contributors for the Bank.

Braces by Abramowitz doubled up Quincy Rotary, 4-2, thanks to a hat trick by Meaghan Coughlin.

Also scoring for the winners was Mary Bloomer, who also added an assist. Katelyn Lynch also set up a score. Katie Carew and goalkeeper Colleen Munkley turned in solid performances.

Marissa Powers netted two goals to help lead North Quincy BSN over Bank of Boston, 4-3.

For BSN, Erica Djerf and Jena McEachern also notched a goal each, while Djerf, Berkeley Christian and Anya McKeon added an assist apiece. Playing well were Katie Kisielius, Christian and McEachern.

Under 10 Boys West:

Two goals and an assist by Robert Getchell propelled Hohmann Oil past Roche Brothers, 5-4.

Other scorers for Hohmann were Matt Tobin, John Fitzgerald and Brendan Linnane. Joseph Starkey and Joseph Connelly were top performers for the winners.

Richard Schifone and Danny Mulligan both tallied twice for Roche, with assists by Brian O'Dea, Nate Schow and Danny Graham. Other key players were Vinnie Pastore and Matt Hawko.

David Jaehnig collected two goals and an assist to push Patriot Insurance over Peterson Associates, 3-1.

Adam Valentino tallied once and Kyle Costa added an assist for the winners. Andrew Donovan, Chris Lee and Craig Calley also played well.

Derek Young notched the Peterson goal, set up by Spencer Peterson. The entire Peterson played well in a losing effort.

Two goals apiece from Anthony Ferrigno, Adam Graeber and Parker Scott were more than enough as The Quincy Sun romped over Sweeney Funeral Home, 8-1.

Kevin Sullivan and Stephen Sullivan also tallied for the Sun, while Ferrigno, Matthew Kern and Kevin Cornell chipped in with assists. Also playing solid games were Glenn Gibbons, Kevin Lok and Alexander Scott.

Kevin Brown netted the Sweeney goal, set up by D.J. Lloyd. Key players were Sandro Junkovic, Geoffrey King, Daniel Rouleau and Richard Sweeney.

M&M Service Corporation defeated Century Bank, 3-1, on goals by Andrew Loud, Joseph Renken and Kevin Richardson.

Assisting on the M&M goals were Matt Haskins and James Hutchins. Marc Hutchins, Kevin Mackey and Joe Cafano also played key roles in the win.

Brain Sorenson notched the only goal for Century.

Matt Haskins tallied twice as M&M Service Corporation ousted Hohmann Oil, 5-3.

Also scoring for M&M were Joe Renkin, Andrew Loud and Kevin Richardson, with Andrew Loud and James Hutchins assisting. Mark Hutcins, Abraham Hu and Joe Cafano were other top performers.

Quincy Falls To Falmouth

Presidents Look To Get Back On Track Against Silver Lake

QUINCY PRESIDENTS head coach Peter Chella was impressed with the play of his defense in the first half of last Friday's loss to Falmouth. The Presidents stopped tailback Willie Ford at the goal line and held the Clippers to three first-half points. After holding Falmouth to a field goal in the first half, Quincy made a costly mistake in the third quarter en route to a 25-0 Old Colony League loss to the host Clippers Friday night.

Trailing 3-0 early in the third quarter, the Presidents stopped Falmouth again and forced the Clippers to punt. Then disaster struck as Quincy fumbled the kick and Falmouth recovered at the Presidents' 25.

Senior tailback Willie Ford rumbled for a Falmouth touchdown on the next play, and the Clippers (4-3 overall, 4-2 OCL) added the two-point conversion for a 11-0 lead.

"That really took the wind out of our sails," said QHS head coach Peter Chella. "That mistake hurt us. We stopped Ford at the goal line, but they pounded us in the second half.

"In that first half, we played as well as we had all season defensively. But there has to be consistency, and there wasn't in this game."

The Presidents (2-5, 1-4) look to bounce back when they host league foe Silver Lake Friday night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The Lakers (3-5, 2-4) are coming off a 34-14 loss at the hands of North Quincy last Friday.

"They're a tough, physical team that gets to the ball quick," said Chella, referring to the Lakers. "That running back (Andre) Mendes is an emerging talent. He's quick and has the ability to cut back and pick up extra yardage. He's their main man on offense, so if we stop him, we stop a lot of their offense."

If the Presidents' offense can move the ball downfield and pick up some points, Chella said they should come away with a victory.

"If we can score, we'll be fine," he said. "The offense had been clicking earlier in the season, but it's slowed down a bit recently. We have to get it geared up for this game."

Five losses in seven games can damage a team's morale, but Chella said his players have kept a positive attitude and are confident they can rebound this weekend.

"It's always tough to lose, but they are handling it well. They know Silver Lake is a team we can beat," said Chella. "Considering what has happened so far, their attitude is pretty good."

Against Falmouth, Quincy was still in the game when it trailed 11-0, but Ford's second long touchdown in the third quarter put the game out of reach.

"When it was 11-0, I felt we could still get back into it, since we were throwing and running the ball well," said Chella. "We moved the ball good, but our drives just stalled. But the big thing was that second TD by Ford. He broke a couple of runs in the second half, breaking some tackles along the way."

When the Presidents were forced to pass to get back into the game, the offensive line had a tough time keeping the Falmouth defensive linemen away from quarterback Mark Glynn.

"Once we had to go to the pass, we had trouble proctecting the QB from their bigger linemen," said Chella. "That hurt us a little bit."

The Clippers scored the game's final points on a 54-yard jaunt by Adam Hawkes late in the final quarter.

the half. Finn's extra point gave North a 21-6 halftime lead.

As the Lakers' defense held Walsh in check in the third quarter, the visitor's offense cut North's lead to 21-14. Bond lofted a 30-yard floater which William Palma caught for a touchdown. Bond then hit Jeffery for the two-point conversion.

Walsh scored his third touchdown of the game, an eight-yard run, early in the fourth quarter to give North a 27-14 lead. The drive covered 57 yards, all by Walsh on the ground.

North's defense turned it up a notch on Silver Lake's next two possessions, keeping the visitors off the scoreboard the rest of the way.

On the Lakers' first drive of the final quarter, NQ defensive linemen Kevin Bowes and Norman Connell combined to bring down Bond. Two plays later defensive back Pat Egan broke a pass intended for Jeffery and North took over on downs.

Later in the fourth, Plaskasovitis sacked Bond from behind for an eight-yard loss. Three plays later, Bowes wrapped up Bond for a loss of 11 yards and gave NQ the ball at the Lakers' 12.

Fullback Mike Powers, who played outstanding on both sides of the ball, scampered nine yards for a score with 1:35 to play. Finn's fourth point after closed out the scoring.

Prior to the Silver Lake game, Walsh changed his jersey number from No. 35 to No. 18 in memory of his friend, Brian "Tiger" Whalen, who passed away Oct. 22 at the age of 20. Whalen was a 1994 graduate of North Quincy and a former football player.

"He wore No. 18 when he played here, so I'm doing it as a tribute to him," said Walsh. "I look at it like there's one more person up in heaven looking down on us, helping us win. You have to do what you can for them."

THE QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL Hall of Fame Committee recently held their annual golf tournament at the Furnace Brook Country Club. The proceeds from the tournament go to the Hutchinson Scholarship Fund, which allows the committee to give a $500 scholarship each year to a former Quincy High hockey player attending an institution of higher learning. Among the participants were (from left): Peter Condos, Bob Carroll, Kevin Lewis and Russ Erikson.

Delorey's TD Romp Sparks Apaches, 20-0

Matt Delorey's 25-yard touchdown run on a sweep provided the North Quincy Apaches with all the scoring they would need in a 20-0 win over the Milton Mustangs.

Delorey's touchdown was the only score of the first half, as both teams played tough defense and held the offenses in check.

In the third quarter, the Apaches put together an impressive drive, capped by a touchdown by running back Mike Campanale. Quarterback Joe Holleran hit end Dan Sheehan for the two-point conversion and a 14-0 lead.

Campanale and Delorey continued to lead the Apaches' offense in the fourth quarter. Holleran added six more points on a bootlef around the right end for a 20-0 Apaches advantage.

JV quarterbacks Holleran and Dennis Thomson both had impressive games sharing the QB duties in their first varsity game.

Linebackers Vin Traetti and Steve Inferrara led the Apaches' defense, while Jon Desreta, John Fish and Brian Stuck also played well defensively.

On the line, Pat Foley, Steve Joyce and Traetti had outstanding performances playing both ways. Center Joe Burke looked good in his first varsity start.

This weekend, the Apaches take on Houghs Neck, Milton battles Quincy Point and Squantum goes up against the Elks.

In other action, the West Quincy Elks won their fifth game of the season, recording a shutout of the Quincy Point Panthers.

The Elks defense was anchored by co-captains Joe Moran, Dean Zoia, Steve King and Matt Holt. Offensively, scores were by quarterback Dave Centrella, running back Mike Ferreira, tight end Holt. Defensively, Joe Moran ran back an interception for a touchdown.

The Elks offensive line was solid the entire game, allowing the running backs room to run freely. The line consisted of Moran, King, Matt Tupe, Chris Kerr, Matt Kenny, Brian Cooper, Brian Gately, Paul Sing, Joe Swanson and Brett Shlwam.

The Squantum Storm will be the Elks' opponent in the final regular season game.

Squirts Smother Somerville, 13-0

Keith Flaherty netted four goals as The Quincy Squirts, aka Barter's Bullies, clobbered Somerville's B2 Squirts by a 13-0 score.

Quincy's forwards went to work early, as Alex Shaffer (hat trick) took a pass from Justine Thorley and lifted it past the goalie for the first goal. Thorley answered the call with a pass from Tony (Benji) Benigni on a play set up by Brendan Linnane. Shaffer and Joe McManus finished Somerville and the first period with goals off assists by Danny Donovan.

The Bullies continued their barrage in the second, scoring six more goals to put the game completely out of reach. Benigni whizzed past the Somerville defense to score after receiving a pass on his stick from Paul Graham. Shaffer scored on a feed from Graham and got his hat trick on assists from Benigni and Graham.

Coach Barter shook up the lines, bringing Chris (The Bulldozer) Sheehan and Jonathan O'Connor up from the defense zone to the front line. On the first shift, The Bulldozer plowed his way up ice to score unassisted. Brendan Clifford lit the lamp, assisted by the Bulldozer and Keith Flaherty. O'Connor set up Flaherty for his second of the game.

The third period began much like the first and second, with The Bulldozer, O'Connor and Flaherty each picking up a goal and an assist. Flaherty scored his fourth of the game to close out the scoring.

Mike Faherty had an oustanding game working the boards. After the game, the Bullies congratulated their goalie, Ryan Barter, on his shutout.

LIZ NOBLE (right, leaping), a Quincy High School graduate and a senior on the UMass-Lowell volleyball team, rips a shot over the outstretched arms of an Eastern Nazarene College player. A recent New England Conference Player of the Week, Noble had 15 kills, two aces and 17 digs in the 10-15, 15-8, 15-12, 16-14 win over host ENC. Noble's teammate Jaime Graham, also a Quincy High graduate, had six digs, eight assists and one kill in the match.

Also scoring for the winners were Joe Canavan and Robert DeAngelis, who added three assists. Also assisting on the scores were Glen Peterson, David Djerf, Kenney Patey and Andrew Connolly.

For Ayers, Matt Flaherty and Ryan Murphy lit the lamp, set up by John Kennedy, Kevin Tryon, Mike Sullivan and Jeff Dunn.

Michael MacPherson and John McInnis both recorded hat tricks and added four assists apiece as Quincy Sheet Metal rolled over Samoset Pharmacy, 10-2.

Ryan O'Keefe, Casey Conley and Eric Beagle also tallied for QSM. Beagle, Mike Gillespie and James Patten all set up two goals, and Conley, Joe Garland and Mike Grant added an assist apiece.

Justin Laura had a goal and an assist and Kyle Tobin also scored for Samoset. Meg Shea also had an assist.

Two goals apiece by Matt Lawlor and Dave Finnegan helped Lydon-Russell defeat Doherty & White, 7-3.

Also lighting the lamp for the winners were Steve Markarian, Steven Graham and Ted Finnegan. Graham, Ted Finnegan and Andrew Bythrow added two assists and James Cedrone and Dave Finnegan chipped in with one assist.

Scoring for D&W were Brendan Gavaghan, David Guerriero and Eric Kenney. Gavaghan, Mike Marshall and Joe Morris assisted on the scores.

Grazioso Scores Game Winner For Squirt A's

Matt Grazioso scored the game-winning goal with less than three minutes to play to lift the Quincy Squirt A's to a 4-3 win over Needham.

Assisting on the goal were Grazioso's fellow "Matt liners" Matt Germain and Matt Lavery.

Quincy's Liam Powers nailed a short-handed breakaway to even the score at 3-3 just before Grazioso scored the game-winner.

Needham opened the game with a goal midway through the first for a 1-0 lead. Josh Giordani then scored for Quincy off a hustling assist by Steven McGrath, who pushed the puck the entire length of the ice. Linemate Brendan Conley was instrumental in keeping Needham off balance with strong forechecking.

Despite strong defensive efforts by Pat Maxey and Ryan Conley, Needham was able to take a 2-1 lead after one period.

In the second period, Needham snuck one in for a 3-1 lead. Quincy quickly responded as Lavery scored on a Germain pass to end the period and set the stage for Quincy's third period comeback.

North Runners Shine At League Meet

North Quincy High School's runners turned in fine performances at the recent Old Colony League Championships held at Silver Lake in Kingston.

Jimmy Wan paced the boys, just missing a medal with a 21st place finish (15:58). The boys finished eighth with 184 points. In JV boys, North's Ric Walsh finished 21st (17:52), also just missing a medal.

In a tightly contested girls varsity race, North (74 points) finished fourth just behind Falmouth (60), Bridgewater-Raynham (62) and Barnstable (72), despite running four freshman in the varsity seven.

Leading the way for North were Lynda Wilson (sixth, 18:46) and Lauren Molloy (seventh, 18:52). Freshman Heather Meighan also got a medal with her 17th place finish (19:41). Freshman Genevieve O'Brien placed just out of medal contention, coming in 21st (19:49).

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Since the birth of the republic, millions of Americans have died for their country on the field of battle. Millions more have placed themselves as a living shield between their country and her enemies, emerging unscathed through the benevolence of a Merciful Creator.

On Veteran's Day, we honor the dead and the living whose actions have testified to their courage and devotions to our country. We honor their heroism... We give thanks for their sacrifice, and we share it only briefly and inadequately - the grief of loved ones who survive them.

Let us on this Veteran's Day remember that we have preserved our freedom only through the continued willingness of brave men and women to risk the sacrifices of their lives for its sake.

On Veteran's Day, we honor them all; those who wore a uniform in days past and those who wear it today. We honor them with a recognition of a debt that can never be repaid. It is beyond price...

Mary A. Shelton, 87
Hotel Bookkeeper; Piano Player

A funeral Mass for Mary A. (Siwicki) Shelton, 87, of Quincy, was celebrated Tuesday in Sacred Heart Church.

Mrs. Shelton died Oct. 28 at the Merrimount Manor Nursing Home.

She played the piano in Boston's movie theaters for several years when there was no sound in movies. The piano players supplied the background music before "talkies" came along.

She later became a bookkeeper for the Essex Hotel in Boston and worked there for 20 years. She retired in 1966.

She was a member of the North Quincy Catholic Women's Club, the Sacred Heart Silver Citizens and the Heritage Club.

Born in Maine, she lived in Boston before moving to Quincy 14 years ago.

Wife of the late Frank Shelton, she is survived by a sister, Florence Shulman of California; and two nephews, Joseph C. Burrow of Florida and John Burrows of Framingham.

Burial was in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

Funeral arrangements were by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St.

Donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

million in loan guarantees to begin shipbuilding. In addition, the state must approve $10 million in loan credits.

Sheets, however, said Gov. William Weld has promised the loan credits will happen soon, and the mayor and other officials are confident there will be no problems with the shipbuilding loan guarantees.

Emmanouil's proposal to revitalize the shipyard is the fourth attempt to reopen the shipyard since General Dynamics closed it in 1986.

Former Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro said he and other city officials were more impressed with Emmanouil's plan, however, from the very beginning.

"The mayor and I met with him a long time ago, and we could just tell that he was very sincere," said DeCristofaro. "I'm very excited about this announcement, and I'm happy for the city."

man," he said. "We come here for the good of mankind."

Collins said Quincy is one of the friendliest cities the group has ever visited, with many residents serving them fresh-cooked meals.

"We're just overwhelmed with the City of Quincy, the way we've been received," he said. "And we think (Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director) Tony Siciliano is the greatest guy we've ever run into."

Several councillors, including Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, praised the unit for their work.

"You've done a fantastic job," he said. "The city will forever be grateful for what you've done."

Unit members were given pins bearing the Quincy City Seal. Councillor Michael Cheney said he also wants the council "to draft something formal" thanking the entire unit which the members can bring home to Kentucky.

Christmas Committee Meeting

The Quincy Christmas Festival Committee was scheduled to meet last night (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

All committee reports pertaining to the 44th annual Christmas Parade and other special holiday events soon must be finalized, according to Michael McFarland, general chairman.

One of the highlights of this year's parade will be 24 units entered by the Shriners. The theme for the event is "Story Book Christmas."

The annual Poster Contest in the city's public and parochial elementary grades also is underway.
